The Le Duan Vietnamese enemies' aggressive war in Kampuchea is not a border clash nor can it be separated from the world situation. It is an aggressive war waged by the Vietnamese in order to implement their aggressive and expansionist strategy. They want to swallow up Kampuchea, include it in their Indochina federation, and use it as a springboard to wage aggression and pursue expansionism against other countries in Southeast Asia and to carry out the Soviet aggressive and expansionist strategy in this region. The Le Duan Vietnamese enemies are stubborn and do not want to solve the Kampuchean problem in conformity with the world's demands -- especially those of the UN General Assembly and of the ASEAN countries -- because their aggressive war in Kampuchea has its roots from their ambition and their own aggressive and expansionist strategy along with that of the Soviet Union to control Southeast Asia. They are waging maneuvers and are exerting every effort to change the military situation on the battlefield and to realize their diplomatic tricks aimed at continuing their aggression against and occupation of Kampuchea.

Concurrently, they are gathering their troops along the Thai border, staging incursions into Thailand and confusing white with black in an attempt to create a pretext to wage aggression against it on a bigger scale. On 17 and 18 February about 300 Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea staged an incursion into Thailand and violated its territorial integrity up to more than 2 kilometers in Chanthaburi Province. This incursion was staged at the same time as the Vietnamese were issuing in Vientiane their proposal to negotiate with Thailand.

Concerning the Soviets, they provide weapons, ammunition, foodstuffs and financing to the Vietnamese in their aggressive war against Kampuchea. Furthermore, they are deeply involved in Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam. The Vietnamese, who are finding themselves increasingly defeated in Kampuchea, need the Soviets more and more. They are embracing the Soviets more tightly. The Soviets occupy military bases in Vietnam and Kampuchea. The Soviet Navy wages activities in the Gulf of Thailand and has arrested Thai fishing boats in international waters.

At the beginning of February, Ogarkov, chief of the Soviet Armed Forces General Staff and deputy minister of national defense, promised to the Hanoi Vietnamese enemies as well as to the Vietnamese aggressive administration in Phnom Penh that the Soviets will always stand by Vietnam and give it all types of aid in order to fulfill their international duty, that is to fulfill their aggressive and expansionist strategy in Southeast Asia.

All of this clearly shows that the Vietnamese and the Soviets do not want to solve the problem of the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea in order to restore peace and stability in Southeast Asia. They will exert even further efforts to change their situation and to continue their aggressive war in Kampuchea which is deteriorating the situation in Southeast Asia.

Therefore, an overwhelming number of countries in the region -- especially the ASEAN countries -- and other peace- and justice-loving countries all over the world are unanimous in their realization that it is necessary to unite with each other in exerting efforts to solve the Kampuchean problem as soon as possible on the basis of a complete and unconditional Vietnamese aggressive troop withdrawal from Kampuchea in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the international conference on Kampuchea.

On 17 February Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Datuk Musa Hitam stated in Jakarta that the Kampuchean issue has made the situation in Southeast Asia more tense and more dangerous. The continuing war in Kampuchea affects various countries in this region. Therefore, this problem must be peacefully solved as soon as possible on the basis of the UN resolutions in conformity with the ASEAN proposal. The tense situation in the region cannot be dissipated and the wish of the Southeast Asian nations to build their area as a peaceful, free and neutral zone cannot be fulfilled unless the Kampuchean problem is solved in accordance with these resolutions. This would consequently contribute to the defense of peace and stability all over the world.

ARMY SUPPORTS CONVENING OF THIRD LPRP CONGRESS

BK240953 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 24 Feb 82

[Unattributed editorial: "Our Army Wholeheartedly Supports the Convening of the Third LPRP Congress"]

[Text] On 20 February 1982 the LPRP Central Committee issued a statement on the convening of the Third LPRP Congress, which is considered a significant event in the political life of our party and the entire people. With regard to this significant political event, we are very proud and joyous and are fully convinced that in the near future, we will be bestowed with a new brilliant beacon emanating from various resolutions which will be adopted at the historic congress of our party to illuminate the path for our army and people in carrying out the tasks of socialist transformation and construction in our country with a firm and steady pace.

It has been quite some time since the second congress of our party was held in early March 1972. During the past nearly 10 years since the second congress, under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the LPRP, with the militant alliance and all-round cooperation of Vietnam and Kampuchea, and with wholehearted and great assistance and support form the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, our armed forces and people of all ethnic tribes throughout the country have further enhanced the tradition of solidarity and undauntedness, have held aloft the spirit of patriotism and love of socialism, have overcome numerous difficulties, and have scored numerous great victories. This is evidence of the boundless love and faith of our army and people in the party and country as well as their actual revolutionary deeds in response to the sacred call of various resolutions adopted at the second congress of the party 10 years ago. Additionally, it contributes to the fulfillment of the national-democratic revolution and the advancement toward the socialist revolution.

In addition to being an important political event in the life of our party and people, the soon-to-be-convened Third LPRP Congress also constitutes a significant step in reiterating and revamping the line and policies of our party in the new period of the revolution so as to use them as guidelines and objectives of the entire party, army and people in appropriately consolidating and building all party organizations so that they will be more capable of leading the people throughout the country to fulfill triumphantly the tasks of defending and building the socialist country.

We, all cadres and combatants in the LPLA, are very proud of and wholeheartedly support the convening of the third congress of the party as announced by the LPRP Central Committee. Let all party committees at all levels, party cadres and members, and all combatants carry out actual deeds, resolutely overcome all difficult obstacles and energetically strive to prepare favorable conditions for the realization of the third congress of our party. Our party cadres, members and combatants must fully understand the objectives and contents of this congress; closely coordinate the current political life within our entire army with the convening of the third congress of the party as well as with all conferences of cadres in accordance with the timetable set up by the party Central Committee; vigorously associate themselves with the grassroots level; and enthusiastically mobilize emulation campaigns. In this manner we will be able to score achievements to welcome the third congress and the forthcoming 27th founding anniversary of the party of concentrating all efforts to fulfill the 1982 plan gloriously and by fulfilling the tasks of defending the country, maintaining national security, building the political foundations and economy, developing culture and improving the living conditions of our army and people.

Only by effectively fulfilling these goals will we -- all cadres and combatants -- in our army be able to render genuine support through actual revolutionary deeds to the forthcoming third congress of our party.

EDITORIAL URGES SUPPORT FOR THIRD LPRP CONGRESS

BK250430 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Unattributed editorial: "Let Our Entire Party, Army and People March Forward To Score New Achievements on the Path of Socialist Construction"]

[Text] On 20 February the LPRP Central Committee issued a statement on the convening of the Third LPRP Congress. This significant decision made by the party has brought joy to our entire party, army and people. This is because the congress will observe and evaluate the past situation, review and draw lessons from it and set guidelines and policies for the new period of the revolution. This will serve as a brilliant beacon illuminating the path of our struggle to defend and build our country and ensuring that the policies are carried out in a rapid and appropriate manner.

Over the past 10 years since the Second LPRP Congress in February [as heard] 1972, our party has led the people to concentrate all the efforts and resources of our country, together with fraternal Vietnam and Kampuchea, on defeating the U.S. imperialists in their war of aggression and neocolonialism, and on mobilizing the masses to simultaneously rise up throughout the country to seize administrative power, liberate the country and completely fulfill the national-democratic revolution. Subsequently, it led the masses to fulfill the tasks of defending and building the country and taking it toward socialism bypassing the stage of capitalist development. All the guidelines, policies and plans adopted by the party in the past 10 years have been proved to be correct and brilliant, and have been effective in guiding the entire party, army and masses to fulfill the national-democratic revolution in the past and the socialist revolution at present. However, it is even more necessary to profoundly review the situation and to revamp the guidelines and policies of the party in the new period of the revolution in accordance with the party code and the rule and principles of party development. These guidelines and policies will be adopted as the direction and objectives for the entire party, army and masses in carrying out actual revolutionary deeds and marching forward to score new achievements on the path of socialist construction and to bring happiness and prosperity to the LPRP -- our beloved and cherished fatherland, and in appropriately consolidating and building party organizations to that they will become more capable in leading the entire people to fulfill their tasks.

Therefore, to welcome and make the Third LPRP Congress more significant and meaningful we must, on the one hand, mobilize the party committees at various levels to hold conferences with a view to building and consolidating the party, raising the quality of party members and selecting outstanding representatives for full participation in the third congress of the party; and, on the other hand, we must encourage the masses to launch emulation campaigns to score achievements, for example by gloriously and gradually fulfilling the 1982 plan, effectively carrying out the tasks of defending the country and maintaining public security, building political foundations, building the economy, developing culture and improving the people's living conditions in all localities. At the same time, we must concentrate efforts on energetically and extensively promoting movements in the cultural, art and literary, propaganda and information, and sports fields, and on encouraging the masses to understand the line and policies of the party as well as its leading role in the past as well as in the immediate future in order to reiterate their faith in the party leadership and convince them to dutifully follow the party and to gloriously translate into reality all the policies and plans of the party in each period.

We must understand that the Third LPRP Congress constitutes a significant political event in the life of our party and people. All party members and cadres must fully realize their responsibilities to the party, the nation and the international community, increase unity within the party on the basis of the line and policies of the party, hold aloft the spirit of serving the laboring people of all tribes, encourage all the people to unite closely, strengthen our solidarity with Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, closely coordinate the tasks of building the party with the revolutionary movement among the masses, build and strengthen the party foundations, strengthen the party's combat strength, promote and develop democracy, self-criticism and mutual criticism with a view to uniting the party so that it will be capable of shouldering the heavy responsibilities entrusted by history.

Under the correct and creative leadership of our party, the struggle of our entire people has scored great victories unprecedented in the history of our nation. Nevertheless, in the immediate future, the struggle to defend and build socialism in our country will remain difficult, fierce and complicated. However, under the victorious banner of our party, we are convinced that the entire masses in our country are resolved to fulfill the aforementioned tasks and make noble contributions to the struggle for peace, revolution and socialism in the world.

For the happiness and prosperity of our country and for the fulfillment of the socialist construction in our beloved fatherland, let our entire party, army and people march forward!

SITTHI SAYS INDOCHINESE PLANS COUNTER UN PROPOSAL

BK191518 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila has explained Thailand's stance regarding the proposal on Kampuchea put forth by Indochina following the Vientiane meeting of the three Indochinese countries' foreign ministers on Tuesday. He said the proposal ran counter to the UN General Assembly, resolution calling for a complete and unconditional withdrawal following stability at the Thai-Kampuchean border, which, he said, changes nothing except the wording. He said Thailand has neither a conflict nor a dispute with Kampuchea. The dispute exists between Vietnam and Kampuchea and the proposed demilitarised zone, therefore, should be between Vietnam and Kampuchea, not at the Thai-Kampuchean border. The Kampuchean problem is an international problem, not one to be settled between Thailand and Vietnam. He said Vietnam should hold talks with the UN ad hoc committee if it is sincere in solving the problem.

Meanwhile, the director general of the Foreign Ministry Information Department, Chet Sutcharitkun, explained that Thailand is not in dispute with Kampuchea. The fighting in Kampuchea is the result of Vietnamese aggression and resistance against Vietnam in Kampuchea. This has affected Thailand itself, such as the shelling of Thailand or intrusion of foreign forces into Thai territory. Thailand and ASEAN are seeking a political settlement of the Kampuchean problem and are trying to have the three Kampuchean patriotic factions form a coalition government for political bargaining with Vietnam to pull out its troops from Kampuchea. The director general of the Information Department said Thailand does not want to be an enemy of Vietnam. On the contrary, it wants to see peace in Vietnam. It wants Vietnam to enjoy economic prosperity and to see its people have a good life as in Thailand and in other ASEAN countries. The war in Kampuchea is a no-win situation for Vietnam because of persistent resistance and fighting. A political solution is therefore the option. When Vietnam stops waging war with its neighbor, ASEAN countries will be willing to assist Vietnam in restoring its country.

SIAM RAT CALLS INDOCHINESE PROPOSAL 'SELFISH'

[Editorial: "An Unacceptable Proposal"]

[Text] The Indochinese countries did not wait for ASEAN countries to meet again to discuss the impasse in the Kampuchean situation. Their foreign ministers went ahead and met in Vientiane on Tuesday of last week. They issued a statement -- aimed at Thailand -- implying that a partial withdrawal from Kampuchea is possible if Thailand would come to an agreement with the Heng Samrin government for a secure Thai-Kampuchean border.

The Indochinese countries' proposal also noted that they are ready to establish contacts with Thailand directly or indirectly and to establish a dialogue on a bilateral or on a group-to-group basis. The Indochinese proposal is not new as Vietnam has advanced similar proposals before. The proposal may sound impressive but it is difficult for Thailand to accept for several reasons.

Regardless of how badly ASEAN wants to resolve the Kampuchean problem, ASEAN's principle is that the problem must be solved in the interest of the whole, not in the interest of any individual country or group of countries. This is why ASEAN has pushed firmly for a general election in Kampuchea so that the Kampuchean people can choose a government for themselves. In this context, the Indochinese proposal does not seem to want to allow the Kampuchean people to do that. Instead, it seeks to force Thailand to recognize the Heng Samrin government by suggesting that Thailand negotiate with that government over a guarantee for security along the common border.

The proposal could be viewed as an attempt to induce Thailand to take a short cut and make a selfish escape from the dilemma. If Thailand acts in this way, a major division could result within ASEAN.

Thailand also cannot accept a partial withdrawal in Kampuchea because only a complete withdrawal can solve the Kampuchean problem. Vietnam should withdraw all of its troops in Kampuchea if it does not want to be condemned as an aggressor.

Although ASEAN efforts to resolve the Kampuchean problem seem to have reached an impasse and though we feel that this impasse can be removed by direct negotiations with Vietnam, we feel that it is just as well that the impasse remains if Vietnam insists that the Kampuchean problem be solved as proposed by the Indochinese countries. We can wait until a new solution is found for the Kampuchean problem.

NATION REVIEW URGES SRV FOREIGN POLICY CHANGE

[Editorial: "Time Gets Ripe To Expect Change in Hanoi Policy"

[Text] We have said already that the offer made by Vietnam, after the Vientiane conference of Indochinese foreign ministers, of partial pullout is a line directed towards China rather than the ASEAN of which Thailand is the frontline state. Indonesia, since 1972 the fifth largest country in the world population-wise, has somehow considered itself primus inter pares in ASEAN, and her foreign policy has never been in tune with the rest of the Southeast Asian countries. All through the Vietnam war, she recognized North Vietnam diplomatically and she even became a member of a truce commission in accordance with the Paris peace accords. However, she has stubbornly refused to reopen diplomatic relations with China although she was one of the first countries of the region to recognize the communist government in Beijing and won international praise for the successful hosting of the Bandung conference in 1955.

Under these circumstances it is not strange at all that the Vietnamese ambassador in Jakarta should meet Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja and explain to him the ostensible turnaround of Vietnamese policy of partial pullout from Kampuchea. If Vietnam is seeking an anti-Chinese ally in ASEAN, Indonesia will be the first choice. Two important lines of thought come from Jakarta. The first to to woo Vietnamese away from the domination of Moscow and the second is the possibility of a major shift in Hanoi's policy after the upcoming communist party congress.

Both these points are related of course but it is possible to discuss them separately. Wooing Vietnam from its present role as a Soviet surrogate is an outworn thought that has been put forward as something possible. It will not be possible unless what Hanoi believes is "the Chinese threat" is eliminated -- and Beijing has no intention of doing that. The second point is that the communist party congress in any country is only held when clear policies have been evolved by the various leaders, and then agreed upon by the higher echelons of the party, and then put forward at the congress to receive its overwhelming approval. Further, the congress is called only when it is necessary to publicize the policies and give it the approval of the party -- there is no stipulation as to the time that expires between one congress and the next.

It has been bruited forth that the congress in Hanoi will take place next month -- but whether it will or not is uncertain. Now, if we take the two propositions that come from Jakarta, they begin to make some sense. Obviously Vietnam is hurting and hurting badly and the Soviet Union is not able to help her out. Keeping a war going in Kampuchea is costly business and underwriting the completely dislocated economy of Vietnam is even costlier. And from the Soviet point of view, the money, the material and the lives that are being lost in Afghanistan are more important. If Hanoi leaders have done some rethinking and have come to some dramatic change in policy, then the communist party congress makes sense.

And the leaders in Hanoi must also know that for reconstruction or for the resuscitation of her economy, there is not much that ASEAN members can do. ASEAN certainly has revealed her international political clout in the United Nations again and again but ASEAN is not rich enough to help Vietnam's economy substantially. Only the United States, Japan and Western Europe can do that -- but will they do it in the face of stout opposition from China? So actually, if there is a dramatic change in Vietnamese foreign policy the first step should be towards China and the second, naturally, should be towards Thailand which will indirectly involve ASEAN.

But to repeat ourself, Hanoi has been playing the game of the carrot and the stick -- partial pullout and creating undue tensions along the Thai-Khmer border. But she has to make her choice sooner than later. It is easy to say that we are all bystanders and that the war is being fought by the surrogates of China and the Soviet Union; but we cannot ignore the fact that ASEAN is fully involved and Thailand has had border problems through Vietnamese incursions from Kampuchea.

We sincerely hope that the Vietnamese leaders -- the Ho Chi Minh generation must be losing ground -- have come to the conclusion that the Kampuchean war is costing them too much, much more than the Soviet Union can offset. And in all this, Hanoi has no other recourse than to remove what she has been calling "the Chinese threat" and that can be only done in some really serious negotiations between the two countries. We trust that this is the conclusion that Vietnamese leadership has come to so that it can be presented to the Communist Party congress next month.

ARUN DESCRIBES DISCUSSIONS WITH UN ENVOY

[Interview given by Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong after his meeting with special UN envoy Fariuddin Ahmad on 25 February -- recorded]

[Text] [Arun] This is his first stop during the whole trip. He has not met others before meeting us. So I think his second stopover will be more useful. Well, his present stopover is also useful in that we had a chance to inform him of our views and our stand. We do not want to get involved with others' problems, yet we do not want to be affected by others' problems. That is our main principle.

As for him, he asserted to us that his mission would be under the framework of the UN resolution. That means, in principle, the withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea and the right to self-determination of the Kampuchean people. We believe in those principles too and, in our opinion, they are the only option for the settlement of the Kampuchean problem.

The problems Thailand is suffering from are the refugee problem and the border problem caused by the fighting in Kampuchea. Without the withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea, the fighting there will never end and we will always stand to suffer the repercussions threatening our welfare and security. So long as the fighting continues, the refugees can never return to their homes. The two major problems that I mentioned will never be settled. We support the resolutions on the withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea and the right to self-determination of the Kampuchean people not only in theory, but we believe they must be put to practice in order to solve the problem effectively. That's what we have told him.

[Question] Did you talk to him about the proposed coalition?

[Arun] Yes, he asked us about it. We told him that the coalition is not our initiative. The Kampuchean factions want to join forces in order to fight for national liberation.

ASEAN only gives them facilities. Anyway, we support their idea because they must first unite if they want to liberate their country. It's their affair. Since Vietnam does not want to talk with the Khmer Rouge, perhaps there might be someone else that Vietnam would agree to talk to. The Thai Government is only trying to achieve an access for talks and agreement. That's what I explained to him.

SRV AMBASSADOR TO SEE CREWMAN FROM AN-26

[Text] The government has decided to allow Vietnamese Ambassador Hoang Bao Son to visit the two injured Vietnamese crew members of the Antonov 26 plane which crashed landed in Prachin Buri Province on February 11, an official source said yesterday.

The decision to allow the Vietnamese envoy to visit the two men was made on humanitarian grounds. The ambassador, however, will not be allowed to visit 10 other crew members including the pilot who are being detained by Thai authorities for further interrogation.

The plane crash-landed in Sa Kaeo District and its pilot claimed that he had lost the way and mistakenly entered into Thailand. Shortly after the Vietnamese Government asked Thailand through the Royal Thai Embassy in Hanoi for the return of the plane and its crew.

The Supreme Command Headquarters, which investigated the incident, rejected the official Vietnamese explanation that the aircraft had lost its way and mistakenly intruded into thai airspace. It said that evidence uncovered at the crash site revealed that the plane was not short of fuel as claimed. The Supreme Command Headquarters is now conducting a further investigation to find out the real motive of the plane's intrusion.

CLASH WITH 'UNKNOWN' KAMPUCHEAN FORCES REPORTED

BK241328 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] On 18 February at 1130 Thai forces clashed with about nine heavily armed Kampuchean forces of unknown origin intruding into Thai territory southwest of Ban Thap Siam, Ta Phraya District, Aranyaprathet Province. The armed conflict lasted for about 2 hours, resulting in one wounded sustained by the Thai side, while the Kampuchean force suffered five dead. The Thai forces were able to capture a number of weapons belonging to the Kampuchean forces, including 1 RPG rocket launcher, 2 RPG rockets and 80 rounds of ammunition.

The efforts by the Thai military personnel in resisting and stamping out foreign forces which violate Thailand's sovereignty have inflicted heavy losses on the intruders in term of lives and war materials. This serves to confirm that Thailand strictly adheres to the policy of neutrality and nonalignment and not interfering with the independence and sovereignty of any nation. But by the same token, if the soveriegnty of the Thai nation is violated,the Thai Armed Forces are ready to repel any aggressors irrespective of whom the aggressors may be. Furthermore, the recent Thai military action to repulse the invading alien forces serves as an intial reminder to those who are bent on threatening Thailand's sovereignty and attests of the effectiveness of the Thai Armed Forces which are poised and ready to defend to the end the most precious independence and sovereignty of our beloved Thai nation.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 25 -- In a commentary on the so-called "three-point agreement" reached recently by Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan in Beijing, NHAN DAN today notes that the reactionary groups could not agree on anything also except to be obedient lackeys of China in opposing the Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples.

The paper points out: "The first and the second points of the "agreement" begin with 'if' and 'should': 'If one day we have formed a tripartite coalition, we must have a minimum political program', and 'should the tripartite coalition be formed one day, we must make clear that the legal status of our government is in the legal framework of Democratic Kampuchea".

"In other words, the so-called 'coalition government' must be placed under the control of the genocidal clique whose loyalty to Beijing has been proved. The third point stresses that the three parties 'will enjoy their full autonomy, their freedom in ideology and way of thinking respectively". To put it bluntly, they could not agree on anything else except to be obedient lackeys of China in opposing the Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples.

The paper continues: "The Beijing leadership has not deserted the Pol Pot executioners because they had proved their loyalty by exterminating millions of their own compatriots. But, on the other hand, China now cannot rely exclusively on these butchers since this bloody records [as received] are known worldwide, and their name has been an oppobrium".

"For their part", NHAN DAN goes on, "the ASEAN countries have also realized that they would also get into hot water domestically and internationally if they continue supporting the Pol Pot clique. They need something to cover the huge heaps of human bones excavated in Kampuchea. Thus, a 'loose coalition' was formed to give its lackeys a less disgustful appearance. China had to look for other disguises after intense efforts. The only men it could pick out remain Sihanouk and Son Sann, two public figures who had been dumped into the garbage of history".

"However, to put Sihanouk, Son Sann and Pol Pot in the same stable, China is heading for new troubles", NHAN DAN concludes.

NGUYEN CO THACH COMMENTS ON INDOCHINA SUMMIT

BK241315 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has granted an interview to the national radio-TV following the recent fifth conference of the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries. Asked about the importance of the summit conference of the three Indochinese countries to be held sometime this year, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said:

[Initial words in Vietnamese fading into translation] It is true that we decided to convene a summit conference of the three Indochinese countries in 1982. History of the past 50 years shows that the three Indochinese countries have been united in the struggle for national liberation. Particularly, in the past two liberation wars, the armed forces and the peoples of the three countries were united and won great victories. After the three countries were liberated and became independent, they have held many conferences at ministerial and lower levels to reach agreements on cooperation between the peoples of the three Indochinese countries. Now we again agreed to convene a summit conference of the three Indochinese countries. This is a new development in the relations between the three countries. It marks a new step of development because the three countries are entering a new stage of socialist construction and they are also prepared to defend peace and security of each country. In our opinion, this is a new chapter in the comprehensive cooperation and solidarity between the peoples of the three countries. It is also of great significance to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Commenting on the allegation of Western and ASEAN countries that the Kampuchean situation remains in the deadlock, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said: Of course, they find it in the deadlock. In their viewpoints they want to reverse the situation but cannot do so. For us and all people of good will, our viewpoints are different. We support the revival of Kampuchea, which is changing for the better. For this reason, we and all people of good will in the world hold that the Kampuchean situation is developing finely and favorably. These are two apparently different viewpoints and that policy of Western and ASEAN countries will fail to work.

GENERAL REVIEWS RECENT INDOCHINA HISTORY

BK241500 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN No 1 in Vietnamese Jan 82 pp 11-17, 24

[Article by Senior Gen Hoang Van Thai: "On the Special Relations of Cooperation Among the Three Indochinese Nations" -- capitalized passages were published in italics]

[Text] Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea are three separate countries on the Indochinese Peninsula that share the Truong Son Mountains and the Mekong River. The Vietnamese, Lao and Kampuchean peoples are indigenous races and each of them, with its own age-old history, has developed its own separate economy, culture, society and fine customs and mores. The three nations have, since ancient times, had economic and cultural exchanges with one another. Deep similarities in economy, culture, society and customs and mores can still be found among the different ethnic groups living along the common borders (Thai-Vietnamese, Thai-Loatians, Khmer-Vietnamese, Kho Mu-Laotians, Hmong-Laotians and Vietnamese of Khmer descent in the provinces along the Vietnam-Kampuchea border).

Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea are strategically located in Southeast Asia, a strategically important crossroad for north-south and east-west communications. The three countries are endowed with rich natural resources and abundant manpower, and they enjoy a tropical climate. Owing to their strategically important geography, the three nations of the Indochinese Peninsula have often fallen victim to aggression, and they have, as a consequence of this, fought side by side and successively defeated the aggressive and expansionists forces from both the north and the west to safeguard their survival and development. The histories of the three nations have recorded shining chapters testifying to their militant solidarity against foreign aggression.

In the last century French colonialism waged aggression against the three Indochinese countries, starting with the invasion of Vietnam in 1858 (the landing of French troops in the Han-Danang area) and ending with the conquest of Laos through the 1893 agreement. The French colonialists invaded Vietnam first and used it as a springboard for taking over Kampuchea and Laos. The invasion of Kampuchea and Laos, in return, created a broad base for French colonialism to consolidate and fortify the process of conquering Vietnam and the rest of Indochina. After having taken over the three Indochinese countries, the French colonialists set up a unified ruling machinery headed by a French governor general; hence the name French Indochina. In implementing their divide-and-rule policy, however, the French colonialists divided the three Indochinese countries into five states, brazenly calling the Tonkin, Annam, Cochin China, Laos and Cambodia, and adopted a separate policy for each state in an attempt to sow division within each nation and among the three peoples.

Even during the first days of the occupation, the three peoples singlemindedly rose up in a widespread resistance movement against THE COMMON ENEMY -- FRENCH COLONIALISM -- BOUND TOGETHER BY THE COMMON GOAL OF NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE. Thus, French colonialism was the first imperialist aggressor that, FOR THE PURPOSE OF OPPRESSION AND EXPLOITATION, TURNED INDOCHINA INTO A SINGLE THEATER AND MADE THE PEOPLES OF THE THREE INDOCHINESE COUNTRIES ENTER INTO AN ALLIANCE IN A STRUGGLE AGAINST THEIR COMMON ENEMY.

THE SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP AMONG THE THREE COUNTRIES OF VIETNAM, LAOS AND KAMPUCHEA STEMS FROM THEIR NATURAL RELATIONS IN THE GEOGRAPHICAL, SOCIAL AND HISTORICAL FIELDS, BUT IT WAS NOT UNTIL THE FOUNDING OF THE PARTY LED BY THE WORKING CLASS THAT THIS RELATIONSHIP ACTUALLY GAINED SUBSTANCE AND DEVELOPED. In the period prior to the founding of the Indochinese Communist Party (3 February 1930), the anti French movement in the three Indochinese countries erupted time and again, and in some instances, it lasted for decades but without success. Only with the leadership of the party and President Ho Chi Minh and with the guiding light of Marxism-Leninism did this special relationship among the three Indochinese countries manifest itself and become an alliance and did the revolution of the three countries gain victory step by step. Under the leadership of the Indochinese Communist Party, headed by President Ho Chi Minh, the three peoples embarked on the struggle for national independence and freedom with full awareness and great confidence in final victory. Only the Indochinese Communist Party could understand the characteristics of the three Indochinese countries and establish the correct line for guiding the three peoples in their struggle for self-liberation. In its first platform, the Indochinese Communist Party pointed out that the objectives of the revolution in the three Indochinese countries consisted of opposing imperialism, opposing feudalism and gaining independence for each nation. The resolution adopted by the Indochinese Communist Party Central Committee in October 1930 said: "The party's task is to expand the struggle movement throughout Indochina." (Footnote: Party Documents, 1930-1945, published by the party Central Committee Department for Research on Party History, 1967, vol 1, p 860)

In November 1939 the party again said: "Despite the imperialists' efforts to sow division to facilitate their rule and despite the many differences in historical and cultural conditions, the peoples of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos live on the same S-shaped stretch of land, have economic and political relations with each other and are all under oppression by the imperialists, exploitation by capital and finance monopolists and unified political and military suppression by the French imperialists. The liberation movements of these nations are therefore closely related and are bound to rely on each other." [Footnote: Party Documents, 1930-45, published by the party Central Committee Department for Research on Party History, 1977, Vol 3, p 49]

In 1945 the Soviet Union triumphed over fascism, thus creating an unprecedented opportunity. Led by President Ho, the Indochinese Communist Party staged successful uprisings to seize power in Vietnam and Laos. Following the August revolution, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam was founded with President Ho Chi Minh reading a declaration of independence at the Ba Dinh Square in Hanoi on 2 September 1945. In Laos the Lao independence government made its first public appearance in Vientiane on 12 October 1945 and, afterward, signed a treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance with the Democratic Republic of Vietnam aimed at helping preserve each other's independence. As for Kampuchea, owing to more difficult conditions, it was not until 19 April 1950 that the resistance government was founded with Mr Son Ngoc Minh as its president.

At the very outset of the struggle against the French aggressors and at the request of the Lao and Cambodian revolutions, Vietnamese troops and Vietnamese civilian volunteers were sent to fight and work in these two countries. For their parts, the Lao and Kampuchean peoples also gave assistance of all forms to the Vietnamese revolution. These fraternal relations of cooperation and mutual assistance won unanimous praise from public opinion in these three countries and in the world.

In February 1951 as the revolutionary movements in the three Indochinese countries were ripening in all aspects, the communists of these countries decided to found a separate communist party for each of their respective countries. The communist party of each respective country was to rely on the specific situation in its country to lead the revolution forward and to take responsibility before its people and before the world's revolutionary movement. As a result of this decision, the Vietnam Labor Party, the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party (later renamed the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party) and the Lao People's Party (later renamed the Lao People's Revolutionary Party) were founded in February 1951, on 28 June 1951 and on 22 March 1955, respectively. Since then the struggle against the French aggressor for the national independence in the Indochinese countries was conducted under the direct leadership of these three proletarian political parties, which were members having equal status in the international communists and workers movements. The victories scored by the peoples of the three countries in their anti-French struggles, especially the Dien Bien Phu victory scored by the Vietnamese people in 1954, led to signing of the Geneva agreement to restore peace in Indochina on the basis of France's recognizing the independence, sovereignty, national unification and territorial integrity of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. These victories were the results of the collective struggle of the three Indochinese peoples in a combat-tested struggle of the three Indochinese peoples in a combat-tested strategic alliance.

Following the heavy setbacks and the consequent withdrawal of the French colonialists from Indochina, the U.S. imperialists stepped in to take the French colonialists' place. In its gradual process of invading one Indochinese country after another, the United States also used the territory of one country as a base from which to attack and invade another country. After invading the southern part of Vietnam and Laos, apart from turning these two places into their neocolonies, the U.S. imperialists used them as springboards from which to attack the socialist North Vietnam. To block the route that channeled the supplies from the north for the southern revolution, the United States intensified its bombing of Laos, especially central and lower Laos. To reduce its setbacks in southern Vietnam, the United States expanded its war of aggression into Kampuchea in the hope of isolating the anti-U.S. resistance of our people in the south at a time when the United States was compelled to deescalate the war.

To sabotage and contain the development of the Vietnamese revolution, China selected Kampuchea as a base from which to attack the southern part of Vietnam. The reactionary Chinese authorities also tried to undermine the Lao revolution in an attempt to put Laos under their control and to create a foothold there to attack Vietnam from the west.

However, throughout their struggle against French colonialism -- just as during their struggle against U.S. imperialism later on and, most recently, their struggle against Chinese reaction -- the three Indochinese peoples had to unite together and to assist and rely on one another in order to win. The victories won by a country had a decisive impact on the other two, although Vietnam was considered the main battlefield.

During the anti-U.S. war, especially after 1970 following the coup engineered by Lon Nol and Sirik Matak in Kampuchea, the three Indochanese peoples again united together and helped one another to win great victories. The victories won on the battlefields in North and South Vietnam were the deciding factor that forced the U.S. puppets to sign the Paris agreement in January 1973. This success created favorable conditions for each country to complete its democratic national revolution in mid-1975. Nevertheless, it must be seen that in this very period, Maoism, in pursuit of its perfidious long-term scheme, created and fostered the lackey counterrevolutionary Pol Pot clique from within the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party [KPRP]. Beijing encouraged the lackey Pol Pot clique to carry out a genocidal policy at home and turn Kampuchea into a district of China and a springboard for counterrevolutionary activities while invading Vietnam from the southwest. This was in conjunction with the main offensive launched by China from the north in a bid to annex Vietnam and Laos and then expand to Southeast Asia.

To save themselves from genocide, the Kampuchean people, confident in their solidarity with the Vietnamese people and with the assistance of the Vietnamese people and armed forces, rose up and toppled the reactionary Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique -- Beijing's lackey -- and carried out their revolution. This victory of the Kampuchean revolution was a priceless contribution to the revolution of the three Indochinese countries in general and to the Vietnamese revolution in particular. With the counterrevolutionary strategic thrust from the southwest broken and the invasion by 600,000 Chinese troops from the north defeated, the gains recorded by the Vietnamese people in 50 years of struggle were firmly defended. These victories ushered in a new era for restoring and consolidating the militant alliance of the three Indochinese peoples.

With the aim to strengthen mutual cooperation and assistance for the benefit of national construction and defense, our state signed a treaty of friendship and cooperation and a treaty on the delineation of national boundaries with the LPDR (May 1977) and a treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation with the PRK (February 1979). With these treaties, the special relations among the three countries were made official, the strategic militant alliance of the threee countries had a firm legal basis and the three countries became closely united in their struggle against the common enemy. This is the factor guaranteeing the success of the revolution in each country as well as that of the revolution of the three countries as each nation is building and defending its socialist fatherland.

Historical evidence of the past 50 years shows that all the schemes and maneuvers of French, Japanese and U.S. imperialism formerly and of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists presently were conducted in accordance with the same METHOD: WAGING AGGRESSION AGAINST ALL THE THREE INDOCHINESE COUNTRIES; USING THE TERRITORY OF ONE COUNTRY AS A SPRINGBOARD TO INVADE THE OTHERS; AND STRIVING TO DIVIDE THE SOLIDARITY BLOC OF THE THREE COUNTRIES TO FACILITATE THEIR RULE. TO THEM, INDOCHINA WAS A SINGLE BATTLEFIELD REQUIRING A COMMON UNIFIED STRATEGY. Although imperialism and international reaction had tasted defeats and consequently had readjusted their policies of aggression and intensively used increasingly more modern war means together with cunning and cruel maneuvers, they finally ended in defeat -- from the colonialist policy of aggression and domination of Japan and France and the neocolonialist policy of aggression and domination of U.S. imperialism to the expansionist and hegemonist policy of China. Obviously, to defeat imperialism and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, a revolutionary alliance among the three nations was objectively inevitable.

Recognizing this law at an early date, our party has affirmed the significance of the relations of cooperation among the three Indochinese nations and its obligation toward the Lao and Kampuchean revolutions.

Our party always holds that aiding one's friends is saving oneself. Fulfilling our obligation to assist Kampuchea and Laos is intended partly as a repayment for the aid we received from the Kampuchean and Lao revolutions, and partly as a way to help the Vietnamese revolution itself. The victory of the Vietnamese revolution is due partly to the great assistance of the two fraternal countries. Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee, has affirmed that "the victory of our people and army was also the fruition of the unchanging militant solidarity and the longstanding special relations between our people and the Lao and Kampuchean peoples." [footnote: Le Duan: "Build a Strong People's Revolutionary Army To Defeat All Enemies Resolutely," TAP CHI CONG SAN, issue No 1, 1980, p 30]

More than 40 years ago when President Ho Chi Minh, returning from overseas, set foot again on the beloved fatherland and began to kindle the flames of struggle among the three Indochinese nations against French colonialism and Japanese fascism, all Indochina and Southeast Asia were still under the domination of imperialism. The same period, however, also saw the beginning of the fiercest struggle in the region between the two opposing forces of our time, typical of which were the two Indochina wars. The changes in the region were also the most far-reaching and radical, reflecting the emergence of the three socialist Indochinese countries and their strategic alliance. The group of socialist countries in Indochina are closely linked with one another in all respects. Moreover, they share a common border on land and sea with many other Southeast Asian countries. The Indochinese countries are far from their strategic allies but next door to their direct and most dangerous enemy -- Chinese expansionism and hegemonism. This situation attests to the urgency of the need to strengthen and consolidate the special relations among the three Indochinese countries as a regional strategic alliance. For this reason, maintaining and developing the unity among the three Indochinese nations is an objective demand and also a subjective aspiration and intention of the three nations. As Comrade Le Duan once correctly said: "Just as over the past half century, from now on we will persist in our policy of unity with Laos and Kampuchea and will ceaselessly strengthen the special alliance among the three fraternal countries on the Indochina Peninsula." [footnote: Le Duan: "Under the Banner of the Party, Let Us Elevate the Country to the Height of Our Time," TAP CHI CONG SAN, issue No 2, 1980, p 39] Forcefully expressing the Lao people's aspiration, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, secretary general of the LPRP Central Committee has affirmed: "Our party's international line consists primarily in constantly consolidating and strengthening the unity and militant alliance among the three Indochinese peoples." [footnote: Kaysone Phomvihan: "Some Principal Experiences and Some Problems Concerning the New Orientation of the Lao Revolution," Su That Publishing House, Hanoi, 1979, p 133] Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee once said: "The KNUFNS and the Kampuchean people will direct all their efforts at restoring, consolidating and developing further, on new bases, their relations of friendship, solidarity, and sincere mutual assistance with the fraternal Lao and Vietnamese peoples." [footnote: Heng Samrin: Interview With Chanthi Deaunsavan, head of a Lao journalists delegation on a visit to Kampuchea, carried by NHAN DAN on 19 February 1979]

To make our contribution to consolidating and strengthening this strategic fraternal alliance, we Vietnamese Communists must always pay attention to firmly grasping the following principles:

PRACTICE TOTAL EQUALITY, RESPECT ONE ANOTHER'S SOVEREIGNTY, PROMOTE UNITY AND LONG-TERM COOPERATION, AND ASSIST ONE ANOTHER IN ALL RESPECTS. Marxism-Leninism has clearly pointed out: The proletariat can be liberated only when it has liberated all the oppressed and the exploited in the world.

The liberation of the proletariat takes place at the national level and remains the primary task of the proletariat in each nation. This is not an exclusive cause, however, of any individual nation. To achieve this cause, it is required that nations join one another to form an alliance of an international character. Such an alliance is essentially the international solidarity of the proletariat. Only by truly respecting one another's national sovereignty can nations cooperate and assist one another on a long-term basis and in all fields. Lenin clearly pointed out: "Nations... even after the dictatorship of the proletariat is established worldwide, will continue to exist for a long, very long time to come." [Footnote: V.I. Lenin: "Complete Works," Su That Publishing House, Hanoi, 1969, Vol 31, p 109] Even when they were members of a single party organization and operated clandestinely, the Communists in the three Indochinese countries had already affirmed that the Indochinese nations are three separate nations, each having the right to decide its own destiny. The resolution issued by the plenum of the Indochinese Communist Party [ICP] Central Committee held in November 1939 said: The union of the Indochinese nations does not necessarily compel them to form a single nation, because nations such as Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos have enjoyed independence for a long time. Each nation, therefore, has the right to decide its own destiny as it wishes. [Footnote: "Party Documents," 1930-45, published by the party Central Committee Research on Party History Department, 1977, Vol III. p 61]

The ICP Central Committee plenum held in May 1941 also clearly defined the independence and equality of each nation as follows: "To talk about the problem of nations is to talk about the freedom and independence of each nation according to its wish. This means that after driving out the French and Japanese, we must correctly implement the policy of 'national self-determination' toward the Indochinese nations. The peoples living in Indochina will organize themselves into a democratic republic federation or stand as separate nation-states according to their wishes." [Footnote: "Party Documents" 1930-45, published by the party Central Committee Research on Party History Department, 1977, Vol III, p 196]

Thus, genuine communists have never denied national sovereignty. On the contrary, under definite conditions they have even highly promoted the eight of nations to genuine sovereignty. Theoretically as well as practically, all thoughts and actions at variance with equality and national sovereignty are extremely harmful.

In the situation in which Chinese expansionism and hegemonism -- the most odious and and despicable manifestation of bourgeois and petit bourgeois nationalism and bigoted chauvinism -- are scheming to trample on the national independence and sovereignty of various countries, the question of holding fast to the principle of national sovereignty becomes a particularly important matter of increasing topical significance. Respect for national independence and sovereignty must go hand in hand with a determination to counter any action of reactionary and imperialist forces which infringes on national independence and sovereignty.

RESPECT ONE ANOTHER'S LEGITIMATE INTERESTS FOR THE SAKE OF EACH COUNTRY'S REVOLUTION AS WELL AS FOR THE SAKE OF THE THREE COUNTRIES' COMMON REVOLUTION AND THE WORLD REVOLUTION. Relations between class and nation, between one nation and another and between a nation and the international community can be satisfactorily settled only if the parties leading these nations pursue correct foreign domestic lines and correctly combine genuine national interests with international interests. Nationalism of any color, localism, departmentalism and individualism are all major obstacles to the process of fraternal cooperation and mutual assistance in the alliance.

We believe that like our party, the two fraternal Kampuchean and Lao parties will never forget the historical lesson that the Chinese reactionaries have thrice betrayed the interests of the revolution of the three countries in the Indochinese peninsula.

At present they are fostering and using the Pol Pot clique as well as all other reactionary groups in Indochina to carry out their long-term scheme of sabotage against the Indochinese revolution. Obviously, in order to protect the legitimate interests of the three peoples in the Indochinese Peninsula, the interests of the world revolution as well as the genuine interests of the Chinese people, each country of the alliance must realize that it must first of all defend itself and, at the same time, must strengthen its alliance and solidarity and stay vigilant against the perfidious schemes of the Chinese reactionaries who are directing the spearhead against the three Indochinese peoples.

ALONG WITH STRENGTHENING THE SPECIAL RELATIONS OF COOPERATION AMONG THE THREE INDOCHINESE COUNTRIES, THE VIETNAMESE COMMUNISTS ALSO PAY ATTENTION TO STRENGTHENING THE RELATIONS OF COMPREHENSIVE COOPERATION BETWEEN VIETNAM AND THE SOVIET UNION, CONSIDERING THIS THE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE OF OUR PARTY'S LINE FOR FOREIGN RELATIONS; AS WELL AS TO STRENGTHENING THE RELATIONS OF COMPREHENSIVE COOPERATION BETWEEN THE THREE INDOCHINESE COUNTRIES AND THE SOVIET UNION AND THE REST OF THE SOCIALIST COMMUNITY. We, the Vietnamese Communists, clearly understand that the Vietnam-Laos-Kampuchea solidarity bloc is a regional alliance that is part of the international alliance of member countries of the socialist community of which the Soviet Union is the pillar. The stronger the regional alliance, the more it will contribute to the great strength of the international alliance. On the other hand, the more powerful the international alliance of the socialist community and the three revolutionary currents, the more effectively it will help the regional alliance maintain an active stance under all circumstances. The three Indochinese peoples are now faced with the new strategic task of building socialism and defending their socialist fatherlands against the insidious schemes of Chinese expansionism and hegemonism. Therefore, strengthening solidarity and cooperation with the Soviet Union and the rest of the socialist community is of great significance. Today the world socialist community, especially the Soviet Union, is the strategic ally and the firmest support of all revolutionary forces in the world, including the revolution of the three Indochinese countries. The combined strength of our nation and the Lao and Kampuchean nations can only be developed to the fullest extent through close and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union and the socialist community.

An important historical lesson drawn from realities of the revolution of the three Indochinese countries and the world revolutionary movement, and from events that have taken place within the past decade -- from Chile to Kampuchea, and from Poland to Afghanistan -- is that the working class and its political party of each country must first of all fulfill their obligations toward their own nation. Every success, albeit large or small, recorded by a nation in its struggle to consolidate the gains of its own revolution will contribute to consolidating the gains of the world revolution. Conversely, if we allow the enemies from within and without to sabotage the material and ideological gains of the revolution in a country, this will be detrimental not only to the revolutionary cause of that country but also to the revolutionary cause of the alliance or community as a whole.

Although the past 50 years were but a short period of history, all the three nations in the Indochinese Peninsula completely changed their appearances. Never before have the stature and strength of the Indochinese revolution been as strong as they are now. ONE OF THE GREAT REVOLUTIONARY GAINS RECORDED BY THE THREE COUNTRIES IS THAT THE THREE PEOPLES HAVE VOLUNTARILY FORMED A SOLIDARITY AND MILITANT ALLIANCE AND A SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP AMONG THREE SOVEREIGN STATES. THIS IS A NEW-STYLE ALLIANCE, A SHINING EXAMPLE OF PROLETARIAN INTERNATIONALISM THAT DESERVES THE CONFIDENCE, LOVE AND ADMIRATION OF ALL NATIONS THAT ARE STRUGGLING FOR INDEPENDENCE, FREEDOM, HUMAN DIGNITY AND SOCIAL PROGRESS. ALL THE CRITICAL AND SLANDEROUS ALLEGATIONS BY THE ENEMY ARE FULFILLED. True are the words spoken by Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee: "In the history of the world revolution, there are many shining examples of proletarian internationalism, but nowhere else and never before has there existed such a special, lasting and comprehensive militant solidarity alliance which still remains as pure and clear today as it was more than 30 years ago..."[Footnote: Greetings by Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan at the Fourth VCP Congress]

ADDITION TO HANOI JOURNAL ON MARKET MANAGEMENT

The following addition to the item headlined "Tax, Market-Management Shortcomings Noted" published in the 8 February Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT, page K 5, was taken from the January issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN:

On page K 6, after the fifth paragraph, insert the following passage: ...are relatively serious.

The struggle between the socialist and capitalist roads in the period of transition to socialism is clearly reflected in the current struggle on the front of taxation and market management. To allow the individual and collective industrial and trade sectors to develop in the right direction, we must intensify the state control and supervision of production, distribution and circulation in these sectors, and must prevent the tendency for spontaneity of small-scale production. The state controls the market, goods and money mainly by the instrumentality of taxes combined with various managerial, administrative and educational measures and in conjunction with broadening the socialist trade network. To slacken market control is to be lax in the struggle between the socialist and capitalist roads on the trade front, in the transformation of private traders, and in the struggle against the remaining bourgeois elements and the international reactionaries who collude with the reactionaries inside the country to undermine our economy, political security and public order. To slacken market management is also tantamount to being lax in ideological and organizational work, which will affect the quality of cadres and party members.

The struggle to implement the state control and supervision on the front of taxation and market management is a difficult, complex and protracted one, because this is a struggle to establish the state's mastery in the market. In this struggle, we must defeat not only those enemies who have been overthrown but not yet annihilated and who are frenziedly opposing socialism, but also the bourgeois tendency of small producers for spontaneity and the customs and habits of the old society.

In the conditions of an economy in which several different economic elements, the private sector, the goods-money relations and the "free" market still exist, the state must use various administrative, economic and educational measures, control goods and money, and rely on the law and the organized masses in its struggle to control market management by the instrumentality of prices, taxes and so on in order to overcome the negative effects of the "free" market. This is the clearest manifestation of the struggle between the socialist and capitalist roads in the economic field and in market management. In this struggle, the contingent of financial, tax, trade and market management cadres and employees play the role of shock troops fighting on an extremely complex battlefield for the victory of socialism.

The socialist state must manage the entire social market, exert strict control and supervision, and guard against slackening the management of the "free" market. It must struggle against both tendencies: One advocating quick elimination of the "free"market, and the other favoring "giving it free rein," a course which will upset the circulation of goods and cause difficulties to production and the people's livelihood.

The state encourages the organized exchanges of goods among the various elements, areas and sectors of the national economy. It ensures the freedom of producers and businessmen to circulate normally goods which are not exclusively controlled and monopolized by the state, or in areas where the right to purchase goods is not reserved only for the state. The management of goods circulation must be closely coordinated with the continuous efforts to complete the socialist transformation of private capitalist trade in the south and to organize small traders in both the north and the south, thereby ensuring the leading role of the state-run trade sector in the entire market.

With its distribution-circulation management system being gradually improved, the state of proletarian dictatorship can curb and prevent the negative tendency for spontaneity of the "free" market. Along with the various economic measures -- with the key ones aimed at concentrating goods in the hands of the state, broadening the trade network and trade activities, and supporting socialist trade so as to exert an impact on the market with the economic forces -- state organs should intensify their control and supervision of the market and prices.

The price situation....

ADDITIONS TO PARTY JOURNAL ON 1982 STATE PLAN

The January issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN allows for the following additions to the item headlined "Party Journal on Implementing 1982 State Plan" published in the 9 February Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT on page K 2: The first paragraph of the item begins:

We are entering the year of 1982 with new factors being formed and developed in the various economic sectors and with the encouraging results of the emulation movement to score achievements in honor of the fifth party congress. This is the first year of implementing the resolution of the fifth party congress, and the second year of the Third 5-Year 1981-85 Plan. Developing the successes achieved and exploiting the new factors more satisfactorily, our entire party and all our people and soldiers are determined to surge forward and struggle to carry out the 1982 State Plan successfully, thus helping the socialist construction undertaking in our country to progress gradually. In 1981, despite..."

At the end of the first paragraph on page K 3, add:...achieving encouraging results. Agricultural crops were good. Many major provinces achieved higher productivity and greater volumes of production than in previous years. This is the combined result of the three revolutions carried out in the rural areas thus far, and the direct result of the system of contracts with workers. The initial development of production and business independence of industrial enterprises, the implementation of the system of product-based wages and the application of various bonus forms have resulted in a new work method in enterprises, encouraging workers and civil servants to strive to boost production for the interests of the state, the collectives and individual workers. The implementation of the resolutions on distribution and circulation has yeilded positive results, thus initially developing the effect of economic levers and eliminating to a certain extent the subsidization character of the old circulation system.

However, what deserves our attention is that many plan norms were far from being attained, such as the output norms for electricity, coal, cement, lumber, bricks, tiles, cloth, rush mats and so forth. The volume of export goods was also below the planned norm. The transportation sector is too weak. Distribution and circulation work is experiencing complex changes. The control of industrial goods and some items of agricultural products and raw materials is still inadequate, and the management of materials and goods still leaves much to be desired, thus seriously affecting the balance between the supply of and the demand for goods. There still is a serious imbalance of financial operations. Although some effort and progress has been made in economic management and in the organization and supervision of the implementation of tasks, there still are many shortcomings. Efforts have not yet been concentrated on the main goals of the plan; discipline in the implementation of the plan is not upheld; many problems arising in the relationship between related sectors and echelons have not been resolved satisfactorily; and enterprises and cooperatives are not really independent in their production and business activities. The important and..."

In the initial stage of the advance from small production to large-scale socialist production, the inherently weak economy cannot overcome the many imbalanced aspects immediately. Moreover, we are forced to use part of our strength to cope with the multifaceted sabotage strategy which the Chinese expansionist hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, have carried out vis-a-vis our country. Therefore, the fact that the economy and the everyday life are still experiencing many difficulties is inevitable. Being calm and clear-sighted, understanding the actual economic situation, placing firm confidence in the party's line, exhibiting the determination to fully implement the party and state's policies and measures and refusing to be worried about and to shrink from difficulties are prime requirements for all cadres and party members in the present economic situation. HA BAC CONGRESS DISCUSSES VCP DOCUMENTS

OW241227 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] The Ha Bac party organization congress was held in an intensive and serious spirit and with absolute confidence in the party's leadership. Discussing the Central Committee documents to be presented at the fifth national party congress, the delegates used the realities in Ha Bac to testify to the correctness of and elaborate on the Central Committee's observations on the situation of the country over the past years and dealt with the achievements as well as shortcomings and difficulties in implementing the resolutions of the fourth party congress.

Through discussions, the delegates affirmed that the common and economic lines set forth by the fourth party congress were correct. In Ha Bac, however, due to objective conditions -- for instance, unfavorable weather conditions for 2 years in a row, waterlogging following drought, unequal and insufficient material bases and investments for agricultural production -- and negative social phenomena which affected a number of party members, including those in the leadership, the already difficult situation became worse.

The congress paid special attention to the task of building the party and raising its capability and efficiency in leadership and guidance in the cause of national construction and defense, thus giving the party a strong combativeness. The congress suggested that the Central Committee promptly take measures to expel from the party those who have degenerated, including those holding key leading posts, because they are obstacles that wreck internal solidarity and decrease the confidence of the masses.

Reviewing efforts made over the past 5 years to implement the resolutions of the fourth party congress and over the past 2 years to implement those of the provincial party organization congress, the congress observed that under such a difficult situation, the resolution of the sixth Central Committee plenum had in good time developed the region's potential in the material base and stabilized the balance of agricultural and industrial production. The recent Central Committee Resolution No 100, on new contractual work in agriculture, and the Council of Ministers Decisions Nos 25 and 26 were like new winds that gradually, comprehensively and steadily pushed Ha Bac's economy forward. Its gross products for the society increased by 3.5 percent per year on an average, total agricultural output value by 3.8 percent and total industrial output value by 5.1 percent.

In 1981 a new vitality rose powerfully in Ha Bac's countryside. In grain and foodstuffs, Ha Bac obtained the best crop ever. Its total food output converted to paddy equivalent reached the planned objective, namely, 533, 144 tons.

The herd of hogs numbered 474,200 head. It was not due to good weather conditions and increased fertilizers that we had such a good crop. On the contrary, we had more difficulties. Our success was due to the result of the party's new policies. From these results, the congress set forth specific targets for Ha Bac in 1982, namely, to strive to obtain 54,000 tons of food, 532,500 hogs and 5 million dong from exports, aimed at ensuring food and clothing for the people and discharging the province's obligations toward the state.

Although the suggestions at the congress this time were made from different angles and on various aspects, they all had a common point, namely, despite the fact that we have not surmounted the old difficulties, we have been ready to accept new challenges. Comrade Ly Loi Sang, chairman of the Tan Moc cooperative in a mountain village in Luc Ngan District, said at the congress that by implementing the party's national solidarity policy and adopting the stationary farming and sedentary living habits for 7 years, Tan Moc has increasingly made progress. From suffering privations in the past, it has now succeeded in meeting its people's requirements in grain and foodstuffs and in having enough to fulfill its obligation toward the state. In 1981 Tan Moc delivered 130 tons of paddy and 10 tons of pork to the state and sold it 109 tons of soybeans, far surpassing its assigned targets.

He also told the congress about his plan for Tan Moc in the coming years, namely, that beside intensive cultivation of paddy and development of soybeans, his cooperative will also expand the cultivation of sugarcane, fully utilize hilly land to grow cotton and other fiber plants to be exchanged with the state for clothing material to be supplied to the people and grow medicinal plants. Tan Moc also has another plan: Beside new afforestation projects, it will concentrate efforts on caring for 100 hectares of natural chestnut trees to annually obtain from 8 to 10 tons of chestnuts to be bartered or sold, thus increasing the cooperative members' income.

Implementing Central Committee Resolution No 100 on new contractual work, Gia Luong District has increased its cultivated areas in 1982 over 1981 by 796 hectares and has transplanted 9,500 hectares of 5th-month rice before the opening of the party organization congress.

Comrade Rham Ngoc Xuong, secretary of the Yen The District party committee, promised that beside fulfilling its obligation toward the state, his district will muster the people's potential to participate in exporting local goods in exchange for the items they need.

The addresses delivered by the delegates from Thuan Thanh, Tan Yen, Que Vo and Gia Luong Districts and from the industrial and agricultural services concentrated on the main tasks in social and economic fields in the 1981-85 5-year plan and in the 1980's. They reached a high unanimity of views with the Central Committee on future orientation and tasks set forth by the latter in the party's draft political report. To fulfill the region's economic objectives, the congress discussed how to achieve the three interests and unanimously agreed that under conditions where our material supplies and capitals are limited, where our labor force has not been fully tapped and where most of the people's potential is still unexploited, the product-contract system came at the right time, causing a new vigor to emerge in enterprises, factories, construction sites and ricefields.

In practice, however, recently many production installations did not care for the state's interests but even exchanged the state's goods for other items for their own interests. Consequently, the delegates suggested to the central committee that there should be measures in the three-component plan for constant inspection and fair reward and punishment. One need only to relax management and the interests of the third component will be greater than those of the second component, and those of the second component greater than those of the first component, and finally the state's goods will fall into the individuals' hands.

Assessing the Ha Bac people's revolutionary movement, Comrade Vu Tho, secretary of the provincial party committee, said that over the past year, although there were differences between the state guiding prices and those of the free market, the Ha Bac people still satisfactorily discharged their grain and foodstuff obligation toward the state and successfully implemented all policies of the party. This was reflected in many lively revolutionary movements such as the emulation movememt to conserve food, the eighth phase of the emulation movement to work on water conservancy projects and improve the soil, the teenagers' movement of small green projects and the elders' movement to enrich the cooperatives and beautify the land.

In the emulation movement to register achievements to greet the fifth national party congress, Ha Bac has 1,500 projects bearing the name "Fifth Party Congress," 1,650 innovations and doxens of new types of goods produced with local raw materials. Although these figures are not large, they prove that under the party's leadership, our people are capable of surmounting all difficulties, overcoming all shortages and achieving increasingly greater successes.

BK211512 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 21 Feb 82

MARCOS DISCUSSES SUBVERSIVES, COMING SAUDI TRIP

OW231305 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] The president has invited MNLF leaders to talk peace anew and end the problem of subversion. The president reiterated his invitation in talks with newsmen during which the subject of his forthcoming state visit to Saudi Arabia was touched upon. The president indicated his willingness to meet with Nur Misuari or any other MNLF leader anywhere to put an end to subversion, particularly in the south.

This developed as former Senator Benigno Aquino was reported today as saying he will leave for the Middle East this weekend to meet with MNLF leaders. The meeting could take place in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, but UPI New York reports Aquino did not specify any city. Aquino's visit would last 2-3 days.

Earlier, the president asked Aquino to make good his word to come home and face murder and subversion raps as well as recent cases arising from terror incidents.

More on Subversives

OW241249 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] There should be no cause for alarm over subversives in Metro Manila. This was the president's assurance in a talk with Malacanang newsmen. The president allayed fears about subversive activity in the wake of military disclosures of a new urban terrorist group.

At the same time the president today deplored published speculative reports about his trip to Saudi Arabia including mention of a meeting with MNLF [Moro National Liberation Front] leader Nur Misuari. Malacanang said: Since the president's visit has not been formally announced no details cannot be released as yet and speculation on a meeting with any personality in Saudi Arabia is deemed offensive to both governments.

On subversion, the president expressed the belief that the MNLF and the NPA [New People's Army] will never get together.

[Begin Marcos recording] (?Surely) this is a matter which has been looked into repeatedly. There are any number of groups who are operating independently, but they are all tied up toward the underground organization of the NPA or the CPP [Communist Party of the Philippines]. And I do not think that these are any -- what would you say -- any alarming developments [words indistinct] to be able to get together. They would be fighting each other continuously. What is not reported officially -- or even unofficially -- is that there are battles raging in the hinterland, and those battles are between NPA and MNLF. [end Marcos recording]

Speaking of NPA's, troopers had another run-in with a group. Seven NPA rebels were killed in an encounter with government troops in Iloilo. Reports reaching Camp Crame said a police constable was also killed in the encounter. Five other guerrillas of the 20-man NPA band were wounded.

MNLF, NPA Power Struggle

[Text] The Moro National Liberation Front and the communist New People's Army are now engaged in a power struggle. President Marcos said the New People's Army and the Moro National Liberation Front do not see eye to eye and are now battling against each other in the hinterlands. This was revealed by the president in his talk with newsmen covering Malacanang. What is not reported officially, or even unofficially, the president told newsmen, is that there battles raging in the hinterlands between the NPA and the MNLF. He proposed a wait-and-see posture, and expressed the belief that the NPA and the MNLF will never be able to get together.

FORMER MNLF LEADERS ENDORSE MARCOS SAUDI TRIP

HK250501 Manila Domestic Service in English 0400 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Six top former commanders of the Moro National Liberation Front, or MNLF, have come out strongly in favor of the decision of President Marcos to visit Saudi Arabia. The former MNLF leaders surrendered and rejoined the government fold between 1978 and 1980. They include two former classmates of Nur Misauri, alleged leader of the MNLF.

The six include Al Hossain Kaluang of Sulu, former field marshal of the MNLF, and (Rasoon Abtula), former deputy chief of intelligence of the group. The four others are Mayor (Haji Haron Siram) of Alicia, Zamboanga del Sur, negotiator for the eventual surrender of Commander Sali Wali; (Raul Maguta), who was responsible for the surrender of the so-called (?magic eight) of Sulu; (Pusad Abduzami Bituk), president of the Zamboanga-Basilan-Sulu Ulama Association, who spent 8 years of study in Cairo, Egypt and stayed for the same length of time in Saudi Arabia; and Haji Rudan Abubakar, former provincial chairman of the Basilan Revolutionary Command of the MNLF and also one of the first 90 foreign-trained leaders of the MNLF, along with Kaluang.

The former MNLF commanders unanimously endorsed the president's decision to visit Jiddah and said they hoped it would rebound to the greater benefit not only of Mindanao but of the country as a whole. At the same time, the group also called on foreign and locally-based remnants of the secessionist faction to give up their fight and join the efforts of the national leadership to continue the development of the southern Philippines.

MNLF IN MIDDLE EAST REPORTED 'BADLY SPLINTERED'

HK240055 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Serious dissension among the ranking leaders of the rebel Moro National Liberation Front fighting the Philippine Government has badly splintered the Muslim Filipino rebel groups operating in the Middle East. This was reported by informed sources who returned to the Philippines from the Middle East. They said the MNLF leader Nur Misauri has fled to Damascus, Syria, after falling out of favor of at least eight hard-core rebels. Raschid Lucman, leader of the Bangsa Moro National Liberation Organization, was reported to have left Saudi Arabia recently. Hashim Salamat, another top MNLF leader, has reportedly broken ties with Misuari.

The sources said Misuari lost favor with the other rebel leaders because he failed to account for huge foreign contributions. This forced him to flee to Syria.

MILITARY IDENTIFIES NEW URBAN GUERRILLA GROUP

HK200101 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Philippine Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Fabian Ver disclosed yesterday the emergence of a new terrorist group called the Philippine Liberation Movement or PLM. He revealed this to newsmen after constabulary troops raided the home of the alleged leader of the new terrorist group in Metro Manila. The terrorist leader eluded arrest, but agents are tracking him down. General Ver said the terrorist leader is a former opposition leader in the Philippines. Military authorities believe he is responsible for the wave of urban terrorism in Metro Manila and the killing of several soldiers and policemen. Several of his men have been captured, and three were killed in a recent shoot-out with lawmen.

General Ver said the new Philippine Liberation Movement terrorist group has connections with the communist New People's Army.

MINISTERS TO MEET TO DISCUSS U.S. TRADE DEMANDS

OW251235 Tokyo KYODO in English 1218 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 25 (KYODO) -- The government decided Thursday to hold a meeting of Cabinet ministers concerned with economic affairs Tuesday to study measures to cope with the U.S. demand for "dramatic action" by Japan to correct the current trade imbalance. The decision was reached when Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa, acting under Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's instructions, met with Toshio Komoto, director general of the Economic Planning Agency, to discuss the government's stance toward the severe attitude shown by U.S. officials in meetings with a Japanese delegation now in Washington.

U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, for instance, Wednesday told the delegation, led by Masumi Esaki, chairman of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's Special Committee on International Economic Relations, that unless Japan takes "dramatic" new trade liberalization measures, it will prove very difficult for the U.S. Government to prevent mounting U.S. protectionism from running out of control. U.S. Vice President George Bush made a similar statement when he conferred with the Japanese delegation the same day.

Suzuki instructed Miyazawa to hold the meeting of economic ministers Tuesday to hear reports from Esaki on the outcome of his U.S. visit. Komoto serves as the chairman of the economic ministers' council. The Esaki delegation is scheduled to return home Saturday evening and will immediately report its findings to Suzuki.

After the meeting with Komoto, Miyazawa indicated that the government and the Liberal-Democratic Party should study countermeasures based on a common understanding in light of the significance of the matter. Tuesday's ministerial meeting will also be attended by top executives of the ruling party. Miyazawa remained vague about specific countermeasures to be taken by the Japanese Government, however.

The U.S. officials' tough attitude came as a shock to the government, government sources said. The sources said it now seems necessary for the government to take additional measures to open the Japanese market wider to foreignimports on top of its recent pledge to advance its tariff-cutting schedule by two years and remove or ease 67 nontariff import barriers. One field in which Japan is being asked to take further liberalization measures is in imports of agricultural products. Removal of the so-called "residual" import curbs and according of greater access by foreign enterprises to the Japanese services market are also areas of concern, the government sources said. At the conferences with the Esaki delegation, the U.S. officials pressed for liberaliztion measures in these fields.

In any event, the sources said, the government must work out countermeasures as soon as possible in connection with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi's planned U.S. visit, expected to take place March 20-25. The sources said the U.S. attitude at the March 9-10 meeting in Tokyo of the Japan-U.S. Trade Subcommittee will be watched carefully.

TAZAWA, ABE DIFFER ON FARM PRODUCTS IMPORT CURBS

OW251211 Tokyo KYODO in English 1151 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 25 (KYODO) -- Two key ministers of Prime Ministers Zenko Suzuki's Cabinet Thursday gave conflicting answers concerning Washington's fresh pressure on Japan for lifting import curbs on farm products. Agriculture, Foresty and Fisheries Minister Kichiro Tazawa said: "We can't comply (with the U.S. request)." He said the current state of Japanese agriculture does not allow total liberalization of agricultural imports.

However, International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe said the import curbs on farm products are subject to reveiw as needed.

Both ministers were replying to a Socialist's question at a meeting of the House of Representatives Budget Committee.

The United States renewed its demand for removal of Japan's so-called "residual import restrictions" on farm products as part of its stepped-up pressure for greater access to the Japanese market. The fresh demand came this week when a mission of Japan's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party conferred with President Ronald Reagan and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige in Washington. Washington is especially calling for liberalization of citrus and beef imports.

Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Minister Tazawa Thursday refuted the U.S. claim that Japan's farm produce market is closed to foreign products. Japan's overall food imports from the U.S. add up to dollar 10.2 billion a year, he pointed out. He also said all countries in the world are pursuing protective policies as far as farm products are concerned. The residual import curbs on 22 agricultural items represent the absolute minimum needed to underpin Japan's agricultural administration, he said.

However, International Trade and Industry Minister Abe told the same committee that the residual import curbs on 27 commodities, mostly farm products, are subject to review as necessary, particularly in regard to those items of strong interest to other countries. This was agreed upon when the Economic Ministers' Council decided on a package of measures for alleviation of Japan's trade friction with the U.S. and West European nations on December 16 last year, he said.

Informed sources said that the government intends to undertake renewed study of measures to ease economic friction with other nations after the return of the LDP mission from the U.S. However, they said, the problem of liberalizing agricultural imports would require a high-level political decision since it is an important political issue bearing on domestic agricultural policy as a whole.

JAPAN TO ADVANCE DATE OF U.S. FOOD IMPORTS TALKS

[Text] TOKYO, Feb 25 (KYODO) -- The Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries said Thursday it has decided to start talks in October, earlier than scheduled, with the U.S. Government on Import expansion for U.S. beef, oranges and fruit juice in response to America's strong request. Japanese officials will notify the U.S. of the government decision at a U.S.-Japan trade group meeting to be held in Tokyo March 9 and 10.

In the multilateral trade negotiations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (Tokyo round) in 1978, Japan agreed with the U.S. to edge up the import volume of high quality beef to 30,800 tons, oranges to 82,000 tons, grapefruit juice to 6,000 tons and orange juice to 6,500 tons by the end of fiscal 1983. Japan also agreed to start talks on import expansion for oranges and juice in the latter half of fiscal 1982 and for beef at the end of fiscal 1982.

But the U.S. Government has asked Japan to start all negotiations in October this year in the face of its growing trade deficits with this country.

Japanese officials had earlier rejected the U.S. request but they have come to think it unwise as the problem might flare up again with the approach of the U.S. off-year election scheduled for November. The Japanese officials said the U.S. side will insist on complete liberalization of import of the farm produce.

GOVERNMENT TO PRESENT ISSUES FOR ECONOMIC SUMMIT

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 25 (KYODO) -- The Japanese Government has decided on four main policies it wants to discuss at the Paris summit of seven industrial democracies to be held in June.

At the first preparatory meeting for the economic summit to be held this weekend in Paris, the government plans to formally ask that the items -- ways to revitalize the world economy, a call for stepped up world free trade (including the abandonment of the so-called "trade reciprocity" bills by the U.S. Congress), discussions of energy questions and talks on North-South relations -- be placed on the agenda for the eighth annual meeting of the seven countries.

With bilateral trade problems between the U.S. and Japan in mind, the government has said it wants to place major emphasis on the proposal to support free world trade between the summit nations. To support that policy, the government will ask the Paris delegates to actively study measures to settle the current trade friction and to oppose the "trade reciprocity" bills now being discussed in the American Congress.

The reciprocity bills are aimed mainly at reducing the huge trade difference between Japan and the U.S. by threatening retaliation if it is deemed Americans are being treated unfairly in the Japanese market. Government sources here say the bills before the Congress will do nothing to remedy the trade difficulties between the two countries.

The seven countries to attend the Paris summit -- Japan, the U.S., France, West Germany, Italy, Britain and Canada -- will hold three rounds of negotiations before the summit is actually held in June.

The four policies are also expected to be discussed in Tokyo when French President Francois Mitterrand, the host for the summit this year, visits Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in the course of a state visit to Japan. They will be further discussed during a ministerial meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) to be held in Paris May 10 and 11.

Government sources have suggested heated discussion can be expected at the preparatory meetings for the summit because key issues such as the U.S. monetary policy supporting high internal interest rates and the continuing trade trouble between Japan and the six other summit members will be sure to come up. Those items are also likely to spark individual demands from the seven countries to help alleviate internal situations which they feel are affected by outside influences from the others.

In response to expected demands on Japan, the government is already planning measures such as awarding the first half of fiscal 1982 public works contracts soon and other measures to bolster domestic demand in an effort to take the heat off Japan's export policies.

Regarding its desire to promote industrial cooperation between the developed and underdeveloped world, Japan plans a major diplomatic effort to better relations with members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

As to energy issues, the seven industrial countries are likely to urge the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) to stabilize world oil prices in return for additional technological and economic aid from the seven countries.

SR-71 FLIGHT PROMPTS 'VIGILANCE OF PEOPLE'S ARMY'

[Text] Pyongyang, February 25 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors, more fully disclosing their true colours as a disturber of peace in Korea, again infiltrated the "SR-71" high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane into the sky across the military boundary east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country, to fly deep up to the sky above Kangnyong Peninsula, South Hwanghae Province, along the military demarcation line from 11 hours 25 minutes to 47 minutes on February 25, committing espionage acts against the DPRK.

Such espionage acts of the U.S. imperialist warmaniacs against our country are being committed almost every day after they started the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, the largest ever in history, against our people.

The continued infiltration of spy planes into our airspace by the U.S. imperialist aggressors in disregard of our people's repeated protest and denunciation is a most perfidious act trampling underfoot international law and international commitment and a shameless violation of the Korean armistice agreement. All facts clearly show that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are the chieftain of aggression and war and the vicious enemy of peace.

The entire Korean people and officers and men of the People's Army are closely watching with heightened vigilance the repeated rash acts of the U.S. imperialist warmaniacs running wild in the manoeuvres to start a new war of aggression in Korea. Clearly mindful that there is a limit to the self-restraint of our people, they must stop running riot.

VRPR DENOUNCES SEOUL HIGH-LEVEL-TALKS PROPOSAL

SK261138 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] In a so-called statement to the North, National Unification Minister Son Chae-sik on 25 February issued a wanton proposal calling for convocation of North-South high-level talks in Seoul, Pyongyang or Panmunjom, to be attended by delegations of the two sides led by Cabinet-rank officials.

In a nutshell, this is a political trick not worthy of consideration and a wanton double-dealing maneuver.

As for the three-point proposal for convocation of high-level talks, matters to be discussed at the talks and formation of delegations, this shows no sincere desire for North-South dialogue and reunification. If reunification is truly desired, a realistic and not a nominal proposal must be put forth.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan clique once again defamed the rational reunification proposal of the North and came forth with its wanton proposal, something like a replay of the earlier proposal for permanent division of the nation. By so doing, the Chon Tu-hwan clique once again disclosed that it has no desire for reunification.

At present, when North-South relations are complicated, if the proposal for establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo -- a short-cut to the fatherland's reunification -- and the realistic proposal for convocation of a 100-man joint conference are ignored and if the obstacles obstructing reunification are left as they are, it is no use babbling about North-South dialogue and peaceful reunification. If it is truly desired to settle the reunification question, the reality of our country should be considered first and work on eliminating the obstacles to the fatherland's reunification launched.

As the first step toward reunification, the U.S. troops must be withdrawn from South Korea, democratization of South Korean society achieved, and the anticommunist confrontation policy rescinded.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is begging for a permanent presence of U.S. troops — the main obstacle obstructing peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula and disturbing peace there — and is imposing an unprecedented fascist rule by indiscriminately arresting, imprisoning and killing patriots and democrats who demand democracy and reunification. At the same time, it is frantically carrying out anticommunist confrontation maneuvers against the North.

Under these circumstances, what is the use of the proposals put forth by the Chon Tu-hwan clique? The proposals put forth by the clique are nothing more than false slogans for reunification. The Chon Tu-hwan clique can deceive no one by its false proposals. Therefore, if the two-Koreas policy is not rescinded, the arrested and imprisoned political prisoners are not released and freedom for political activities is not guaranteed, and if the Chon Tu-hwan clique does not make an apology to the nation for the massacre of thousands of compatriots, no one will believe the clique's rhetoric.

As everyone knows, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is a group of murderers, fascists, splittists and war maniacs which has disqualified itself from discussion or dialogue on the reunification question. From the first day of its takeover, the Chon Tu-hwan clique has always said that there is no other way but confrontation as far as relations with the North are concerned, and that peaceful reunification is unthinkable. It has continually advocated fascism, nation-selling and permanent division of the nation, persisting in the reckless war maneuvers of northward invasion with the North as the imaginary enemy.

Even at this very moment, the largest joint South Korea-U.S. military exercise is being held with the aim of attacking the North. But the clique still babbles about reunification and dialogue. This is nothing more than a trick aimed at concealing the two-Koreas policy and misleading public opinion.

Even the so-called namelist of delegates disclosed in the statement to the North reveals the insincere stand of the Chon Tu-hwan clique for a North-South dialogue and reunification. The delegates handpicked by the Chon Tu-hwan clique to sit at the dialogue table with the nametags of the ruling and opposition parties are all faithful servants of Chon Tu-hwan and his cat's-paws who have advocated fascism, war, permanent division and nation-selling.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must not trifle with the nation's sacred reunification question but adopt a sincere attitude on settlement of the reunification question. The attitude toward the North's proposal for convocation of a 100-man joint conference will be a touchstone that will reveal whether one desires reunification or seeks permanent division.

Considering the situation of our country and its vicinity, convocation of a 100-man joint conference is, it can be said, the best way to negotiate settlement of the reunification question. Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan clique defames the North's proposal for convocation of a 100-man joint conference, calling it a wanton suggestion. This shows that the clique is indeed desperately scheming to seek permanent division of the nation, not reunification of the fatherland.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must not hinder implementation of the proposal for a 100-man joint conference, but provide every condition for convocation of the 100-man joint conference.

The political prisoners including Mr Kim Tae-chung must be released, their free political activities must be guaranteed, the revolutionary party for reunification legalized, and the founding and activities of progressive political parties and organizations guaranteed.

In conclusion, the Chon Tu-hwan clique's so-called statement toward the North is not even worthy of consideration. It is nothing more than a trick aimed at misleading public opinion at home and abroad.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must not continue the foolish trick to obstruct reunification and perpetuate division but step down from power in accord with the unanimous demand of the people at home and abroad.

Our masses will never tolerate the Chon Tu-hwan clique's antinational and antipopular crimes, but will more persistently continue the struggle to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan military regime and to achieve freedom, democratization and reunification.

S. KOREAN ARMY DEFECTOR GIVES PRESS CONFERENCE

SK260502 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0417 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 26 (KCNA) -- Han Tong-ku, a South Korean puppet army soldier who had come over to the northern half of the republic some time ago, was interviewed by home and foreign reporters at the People's Palace of Culture on February 25. A portrait of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was hung on the background of the platform.

Han Tong-ku, former private first class of the 5th Platoon, Search Company, 4th battalion, 2nd Regiment, 6th Division, 5th Army Corps of the South Korean "ROK Army," to begin with, explained the motive of his coming over to the North. From long ago, he said, I knew that President Kim Il-song, the great leader of the nation, and Mr. Kim Chong-il, the sagacious leader, were shaping excellent independent policies for the working masses and I intensely longed for the North.

While living in South Korea, he further said, I realised that the society of the South is an unequal and unwholesome society and I was greatly shocked by the unheard-of brutal fascist rule established by traitor Chon Tu-hwan who grabbed "power" after the "October incident" in which defunct dictator Pak Chong-hui, was shot dead. Many officers and men in the "ROK Army" are watching for a chance to finish off Chon Tu-hwan, saying that the people would suffer a scourge, if they left alone such [a] fellow as him.

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan came out with a "proposal for unification" in January. The soldiers know that this is a ridiculous one which is infeasible and a ruse to make a mockery of the people desirous of the country's reunification. I did not want to spend my youthful days in vain under the murderous "regime" which bars the reunification desired by the entire people and kills fellow countrymen at will. It went against my conscience to continue serving in the disgraceful "ROK Army," even though I could not do something good for the country and the nation. I pondered over the matter and reached the conclusion that there was one way out -- to come to the northern half of the republic where there is President Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation.

I learned more things about the North after I was drafted into the army and assigned to a frontline unit. Through the radio of the North I became convinced more deeply of the greatness of President Kim Il-song and envied the compulsory education system and free medical treatment system of the North and I also learned a lot about the development of its industry and agriculture.

Now the people in the South not only revere President Kim Il-song, looking up to him, but also boundlessly venerate dear Mr. Kim Chong-il as the lodestar of the nation. Mr. Kim Chong-il is, indeed, the eternal sun of our nation. It was natural, I think, to award the title of hero to the dear leader, representing the unanimous desire of the people in the North. He deserves, in fact, to be respected as the hero of heroes for his tireless efforts and exploits, I believe.

Many were the thoughts that crowded upon me when I read a report on a newspaper that he gave a working guidance to the Moranbong Stadium even on February 16, his 40th birthday when he was to receive blessings of all peoples. He is, indeed, a great leader of the people. I would like to say earnestly that honour and happiness of our nation who attend President Kim Il-song and Mr. Kim Chong-il will be everlasting.

When the whole country was pervaded with the ardor of the people looking up to and following them, I chose to come over to the North, convinced that to come to the North where they are was the road of doing my bit that I can do for the country's reunification, a road of patriotism on which I could live a hopeful life each day. My coming here was not motivated by any temporary feeling or momentary impulse or grudges against some superiors, but it was, in all respects, my purposeful, conscious act based on my faith.

Explaining the course of his coming over to the North, he said that when he went outside the wire entanglements of the observation post to fetch water on February 8 he crossed the demarcation line, exchanging fire with a search team of the puppet army.

He stressed: What I would like to say to my colleagues and "ROK Army" soldiers is that they should not be fooled by the anti-communist propaganda of the Chon Tu-hwan clique but train their guns on the Yankees and Chon Tu-hwan clique, not on the hearts of the fellow countrymen.

You asked me about my ambition. But my ambition is not confined to one or two things. I will assiduously study, first of all. As I made up my mind coming here to devote myself to the reunification of the country, I will study hard and dedicate all my energy to its acceleration. Long live the great leader General Kim Il-song! Long live the dear leader Mr. Kim Chong-il!

CANADIAN POLICE FOIL PLOT TO KILL CHON TU-HWAN

YONHAP Report

SK260806 Seoul YONHAP in English 0739 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Toronto, Feb. 25 (YONHAP) -- Canadian police arrested two men Wednesday and issued warrants for two others, in connection with a plot to assassinate South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan. One of the suspects is a South Korean-born Canadian citizen, who has since fled to North Korea, according to police Wednesday.

Police did not say whether the North Korean secret services were involved in the scheme to assassinate Chon. Police said, however, that the South Korean-born Canadian identified as Choe Chung-hwa, 31, alias James Choi, hatched the plot to kill Chon with some pro-North Korean elements in Canada and paid three Canadian men 58,000 dollars to kill Chon. A spokesman for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) said that the police would not speculate about whether the North Korean Government was involved, but said "We know Choe was a native South Korean, and that he was working with some North Koreans, so you can draw your own conclusions."

The spokesman, RCMP Cpl. Ross Oake, also did not say where the plot was to be carried out. But there was speculation that Chon would soon visit Ottawa to return the visit made by Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to Korea last September, according to the United Press Canada.

Authorities said the arrests capped a six-month investigation that led the Canadian police to the Caribbean, and involved police in the United States, France, West Germany, Austria, Belgium, the Netherlands, Martinique, and South Korea. The investigation was touched off by a Toronto attorney who told the RCMP of a conspiracy to assassinate Chon.

The RCMP, however, said that investigations revealed that several Toronto men who had agreed some time after Jan 1 to kill Chon for an undisclosed amount of money, later changed their mind but took the money without honoring the agreement. The reason for their change of mind was not known. Investigators from RCMP, Ontario Provincial, and Toronto police forces raided several Toronto homes two weeks ago and confiscated 68,000 in U.S. dollars.

Charged with conspiracy to kill Chon were Charles Stephen Yanover, 36, and Alexander Michael Gerol, 33, of Toronto, and Choe. Yanover and Gerol, who were arrested and held in custody pending a court appearance Thursday, were also charged with conspiring to defraud and, along with Nathan Israel Klegerman, 52, of Toronto, of illegally possessing funds in connection with the alleged crime. Warrants were issued for Choe and Klegerman, who was also believed to have fled Canada.

North Korea Blamed

SK260821 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0300 GMT 26 Feb 82

["Text" of announcement issued today by National Police Chief An Ung-yol at police headquarters in Seoul -- read by reporter (Pak Kye-hui)]

[Text] The National Police of Canada announced on the morning of 25 February KST that it had arrested two persons in Toronto and placed two others on the wanted list in connection with a plot to assassinate the Korean president.

Informed of this by the Canadian authorities concerned, the Korean police, which had received the information and began an investigation, have been taking necessary measures in close cooperation with the authorities concerned at home and intelligence and investigation authorities abroad.

It has been learned that Charles Steven Yanover, Alexander Michael Gerol and Nathan Israel Klegerman are Canadian nationals who have connections with a criminal organization engaged in narcotics trafficking arms smuggling and hired assassinations and received — through Choe Chung-hwa, 28, a Korean resident in Canada — money funded by North Korea for implementation of the plot.

It has been also learned that Choe Chung-hwa — who is the son of Choe Hong-hui, 64, former president of the International Taekwondo Federation who has made frequent trips to North Korea and, at the instigation of North Korea, has worked as a frontman for North Korea in carrying out its overseas operations in Canada and the United States — fled to North Korea via Europe upon realizing the Canadian police investigation was getting closer to him, and is presently staying in North Korea.

Summing up the results of the investigation so far, it is certain that North Korea is behind the plot. It is, therefore, asked that Korean compatriots and citizens overseas maintain vigilance against such wicked schemes of North Korea and try not to get themselves embroiled in sinister plots and manuevers by North Korea among Korean residents abroad.

Our national police will, in close cooperation with the Canadian police and authorities concerned, thoroughly investigate the plot and take watertight steps against whatever sinister plots North Korea may be attempting.

Further Details

SK260830 Seoul YONHAP in English 0805 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 26 (YONHAP) — A top South Korean police officer indicated Friday that North Korea was behind the abortive plot by a Korean-born Canadian and three other Canadians to assassinate South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan and warned Korean expatriates against similar attempts by the North Koreans.

Speaking to reporters, An Ung-mo, director of the National Police Headquarters, confirmed that the Canadian police have arrested two Toronto residents and issued arrest warrants for two others, including a South Korean-born Canadian, Choe Chung-hwa.

Western news agencies reported Friday (Korean time) that Charles Yanover, 36, and Alexander Gerol, 33, were held in custody by Canadian police for a week Thursday on charges of conspiracy to assassinate the Korean president, and that arrest warrants were issued for the 31-year-old Choe and another Canadian, Nathan Klegerman, 52, of Toronto.

An said that the Korean police authorities were notified of the plot by the Canadian police, when the latter embarked on the investigation of the case, and have taken necessary actions in close collaboration with both domestic and foreign agencies concerned.

An said that the three Canadians have turned out to have received payoffs from the North Korean authorities through Choe for the mission they were to carry out. He said the three have been associated with crime organizations dealing with narcotics traffic, arms smuggling and murder conspiracy.

Choe, son of Choe Hong-hui, a former Korean Army general and Canada-based dissident, who shifted his allegiance to North Korea, is believed to have escaped to North Korea via Europe, An said. The young Choe emigrated to Canada to join his father in 1974, and was introduced to the Canadian accomplices by another Korean residing in Canada. Choe accompanied his father on a trip to North Korea in 1980, and is believed to have entered the communist country this time via Vienna, which he visited on several occasions.

Choe's father, who also served as South Korean ambassador to Malaysia, has a brother living in North Korea, and met with North Korean President Kim Il-song and Vice President Kim Il during a visit to the country as the leader of a Taekwondo team in September, 1980. He again visited North Korea last year, and has been an active supporter of North Korea.

SK250115 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 25 Feb 82 p 8

[Text] Sokcho, Kangwon-do (YONHAP) -- Fishermen in Kojin and Taejin ports asked the authorities yesterday to ease regulations banning them from fishing in the region adjoining the North Korean sea to help them increase their earnings.

Some 6,000 fishermen demanded that the present regulation permitting fishing within one mile of the shore between 38 degrees 30 minutes north latitude and 38 degrees 33 minutes north latitude be extended to two miles in normal times and to four miles during the high season when Alaska pollack gather.

According to the fishermen, if they are allowed to fish within two miles, a total of 6,390 fishing vessels are expected to increase their catches by 967 tons worth 861 million won. If they are permitted to fish within four miles during the best season for fishing, a total of 14,940 fishing boats will catch 1,451 tons more worth 1,291 million won, the fishermen claimed.

The authorities prohibited fishermen from entering the region, which is located near the North Korean sea, in fear of crossing over the border accidentally or being kidnapped by North Korea.

AFP: Son Sann To Visit PRC

OW261228 Paris AFP in English 1218 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Beijing, 26 Feb (AFP) -- Former Kampuchean Premier Son Sann has agreed to separate meetings here with Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and former Chief of State Prince Norodom Sihanouk, it was learned today. But, in a telegram to Prince Sihanouk, Son Sann apparently ruled out any tripartite summit of anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean factions in the Chinese capital.

The text of the telegram, given to reporters by Prince Sihanouk's secretariat, gave no indication of when Son Sann would travel to Beijing. It said he was prepared to visit China to meet "Chinese dignitaries" and to "personally greet" Prince Sihanouk as well as to meet Khieu Samphan "if necessary."

Earlier this week, Khieu Samphan and Prince Sihanouk agreed on basic principles for a coalition of the three anti-Vietnamese movements, to include continuation of the legal status of Democratic Kampuchea, the Khmer Rouge regime ousted from Phnom Penh three years ago but still recognized by the United Nations.

After their talks, the two sent a message to Son Sann urging him to join them in Beijing for talks on a coalition. But Son Sann has rejected support for Democratic Kampuchea, which was held responsible for the massacre of tens of thousands of Kampucheans during Khmer Rouge rule from 1975 to 1979.

MINISTRY CALLS SRV 'INSINCERE' OVER INDOCHINA

BK260650 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0537 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Today the Foreign Ministry spokesman has made a statement on the Vientiane communique which he says is an attempt by Vietnam to divert world attention from its actions along the Thai-Kampuchean territory. Foreign Ministry spokesman Chet Sutcharitkun says:

[Begin recording] The Vientiane communique, which was issued recently, is an attempt on the part of Vietnam to divert world attention from the root cause of the problem which directly impinges on stability and peace in Southeast Asia. That is, it is an attempt to get the world to concentrate on the effects of the problem -- the disturbances along the Thai-Kampuchean border and the refugee problem which is a result of the fighting in Kampuchea -- instead of considering the solution to the aggression against and occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnamese troops which are the root cause of the problem.

It is well-known that in addition to Vietnam's armed aggression against and occupation of Kampuchea being in violation of UN Charter and international law, they are the cause of broad international tension outside of the region which endangers peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Vietnam's proposal is thus a call for a solution to the effects of the problem, which it has created and tried to conceal, the resultant difficulties -- its armed occupation of Kampuchea. [sentence as heard]

3. [1. and 2. not indicated] Vietnam has claimed that its troops in Kampuchea are necessary in light of a threat from China and that it will not withdraw its troops from Kampuchea until that threat ends. Therefore, Vietnam's call for itself and Thailand to solve the problem, despite the fact that Thailand is not a party to the conflict but a victim of Vietnam's actions in Kampuchea, is thus a misdirected proposal.

4. If one is to look at the problem from an opposite angle, if Thailand should look at Kampuchea as being used as a base to threaten its security and claim that for this reason it will send its troops to occupy Kampuchea and propose that the problem be solved by declaring a demilitarized zone along the Kampuchea-Vietnam border in order to establish stability there, would Vietnam accept this? Therefore, it can be easily seen that such a proposal is unreasonable and can never truly solve the problem. [end recording]

The Foreign Ministry spokesman also noted that the Kampuchean conflict should be settled through political means which have been approved by the world community. He said:

[Begin recording] The cease-fire agreement by all warring parties in Kampuchean and the quickest withdrawal of foreign troops from Kampuchea under the supervision of a UN peace-keeping force or by an UN observers' team as well as other practical measures to keep the various Kampuchean armed factions from obstructing the free election or coercing or influencing the Kampuchean people during the election must be made to ensure that these Kampuchean factions will accept the outcome of the election.

Suitable measures to enforce law and maintain peace and order in Kampuchea; the election following the total withdrawal of foreign troops before the formation of the new government in accordance with the result of the election. [sentence as heard] The free election under UN supervision will give the Kampuchean people the opportunity to excercise their right to self-determination to elect the government they want. The entire Kampuchean people will have the right to participate in the election. Unfortunately, Vietnam has neither mentioned nor made any comment on the proposal for the aforementioned negotiations. Therefore, there is no other way to interpret it but that Vietnam is insincere in solving the Kampuchean problem so that peace and freedom can be restored in Southeast Asia.

SITTHI SAWETSILA COMMENTS ON AN-26, KAMPUCHEA

BK251410 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila disclosed to newsmen this morning that at this time Thailand cannot comply with Vietnam's request for the return of its aircraft which crashed recently in Thailand and its crew. The Vietnamese ambassador has been informed that Thailand will have to follow certain procedures which might take some time. The military has stated that its investigation is not completed yet. In any event, we do not object to the Vietnamese ambassador visiting the two injured crewmen.

The foreign minister said it is the task of his ministry and offices concerned to find out the real motives for the aircraft's violation of and its crash in Thai territory. Once this has been accomplished, the Foreign Ministry will advise the prime minister on what action should be taken on the matter. The prime minister may make a decision or he may refer it to the cabinet for a decision. This process will certainly take some time.

Asked about the proposal of the Indochinese countries regarding Vietnam wanting to negotiate with Thailand on the Kampuchean problem, the foreign minister noted that Foreign Ministry officials met yesterday on the proposal. He said we do not want to reject the proposal outright. After studying various aspects of the proposal, however, it is felt that it contained nothing that had not been proposed before. The foreign minister said participants in a negotiation must be sincere and negotiations must be free of tension. The tension on the Kampuchean border was not created by Thailand. He emphasized that Thailand does not object to the other side searching for peace because it has long been our desire to restore peace and stability. The other side's search for peace, however, must be within the framework of the UN resolution.

Asked if ASEAN has taken any action regarding the Indochinese proposal, Sitthi said ASEAN countries have regular contacts. The Singapore foreign minister, as chairman of the ASEAN Standing Committee, has been gathering the views of the other ASEAN countries on the proposal. Thailand has already informed the Singapore foreign minister of its views. Replying to a newsman's question, Sitthi said it is not necessary to hold an ASEAN ministerial meeting to discuss the Indochinese proposal.

Asked to comment on the meeting in Beijing between Khieu Samphan and Prince Sihanouk -- without Son Sann in attendance -- Sitthi said Khieu Samphan and Sihanouk probably had preliminary talks and he noted that both have shown a willingness to compromise and this fact can be regarded as a sign of progress. Son Sann reportedly will travel to Beijing early next month. It would be useful if he meets with a representative of either of the two factions. If it is not convenient for the three Kampuchean factions to meet in Beijing, other ASEAN capitals -- such as Kuala Lumpur -- could be a site for their meeting. We will have to continue to follow the activities of the three Kampuchean factions on the attempt to form an anti-Vietnamese coalition government.

MATICHON URGES CAUTION OVER KAMPUCHEAN SOLUTION

BK251437 Bankok MATICHON in Thai 25 Feb 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Beware of Vietnam"]

[Text] The current news reports on the arrangement of a meeting for the three Khmer factions in Beijing are worthy of the general public's close attention, particularly when Son Sann, leader of the Khmer Serei, hinted at his unwillingness to cooperate with the new bid to form an anti-Vietnamese coalition government.

The issue has drawn much attention from foreign news analysts because it affects Thailand's stability and is more important than the problem of internal conflicts in the country.

Son Sann obstinately insists on Singapore's proposal on the formation of a loose coalition for the three Khmer factions. Observers who have closely followed up the Kampuchean problem believe, however, that Singapore's proposal cannot be applied with the three Khmer factions of Khieu Samphan, Son Sann and Prince Sihanouk's Moulinaka.

Singapore's deep involvement in the problem has had opposite reactions among other ASEAN countries. Indonesia and Malaysia have been trying to prevent ASEAN's proposal from creating a conflict with Vietnam.

Because Thailand stands in the position closest to the problem, it must be careful and resolute in making any decision in dealing with the problem. We can see that the attitude of Indonesia and Malaysia is different from that of Thailand in some aspects. Malaysia's Ghazali Shafie has voiced his agreement over arms support for the anti-Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea, but he said such support must not come from ASEAN. Indonesia's Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja also made a similar statement. It is imperative for Thailand not to get deeply involved in the war started by Vietnam. It does not mean that Thailand will have to be indifferently neutral. Thailand's intelligence agency knows full well that Son Sann has no armed forces strong enough to play any role in restoring peace in this region. The Thai side has full information about the movements of the three Khmer factions. Therefore, Thailand's decision concerning any related matter -- be it the revival of the Kampuchean people's anti-Vietnamese forces, the capriciousness of the three Khmer factions or ASEAN members coordinating with each other in dealing with the problems -- is very important.

Thailand must dare to expose the threat from Vietnam and the Soviet Union to Southeast Asia and play the leading role in creating unity among ASEAN member countries.

It must be understood that any weakness in Thailand's foreign policy will certainly benefit Vietnam in its bid to create disunity among the ASEAN members which have grouped together for over a decade. The decisions made by Thailand in dealing with these matters should determine ASEAN's policy toward the influence of the Soviet Union and other big powers in this region.

PREM DISCUSSES INVITATION TO ASEAN LEADERS

BK191146 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon told newsmen about the invitation extended to leaders of ASEAN member countries to attend a summit conference in Bangkok in April. He said: It is not a conference, only a meeting for consultations. Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Musa Hitam told newsmen during his recent visit to Indonesia that the Thai prime minister had invited ASEAN leaders to attend a summit conference in Bangkok in April on the occasion of the 15th founding anniversary of ASEAN, and that the conference would discuss issues of common concern.

The prime minister, who granted an interview to newsmen this morning [19 February], said the invitation sent to ASEAN leaders to attend the meeting in Bangkok was made because they have not met each other for a long time. Asked if the Kampuchean problem would be brought up for discussion during the meeting, the prime minister said the topics of discussion have not yet been fixed.

The ASEAN member countries held their first summit conference in Bali, Indonesia, in 1976.

NATION REVIEW COMMENTS ON U.S. MIA SEARCH IN SRV

BK240316 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 24 Feb 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Hanoi's Squeeze on Americans Will Be Tough"]

[Text] The Americans, as is well known, have been deeply concerned not only about the prisoners of war during the Vietnam war but also about those who have been missing in action. (MIA) and, it is also known, that it is a domestic issue. As a matter of fact that there have been several MIA's of various nationalities during the two world wars and after the first one there were monuments erected called "the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier" and the very word "unknown" says that the man buried in that tomb was one of those missing in action. But from an American point of view it is a domestic issue of importance.

The Paris peace accords — it must be gathering dust in some American archive while the Vietnamese would have thrown it into the dustbin by now — made very specific mention about both POW's and MIA's and that issue actually stalled the final agreement for nearly a year. If the leaders in Hanoi promptly proceeded to pooh-pooh the Paris peace accords in its most vital clauses there is no reason now to think they will start abiding by the clause that allows combined Vietnamese-American teams to search for MIA's. But we suppose that the Americans have to make that gesture and listen to whatever lecture some Vietnamese official may direct against them.

Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach — that's pretty high considering the level of the American delegation — has clearly said that his country will not cooperate and will not allow the Americans to use the MIA's as a "political weapon" which, in turn, means that the Americans will not have a "bargaining chip." Nonetheless, the Vietnamese do know how to use the arrival of and talks with the American delegation, however low that might be, for their own propaganda purposes. From the point of view of the Vietnamese, the importance is not the delegation under Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defence Richard Armitage, but the journalists who are accompanying him and who will play along with the Hanoi line.

This comes into focus because it is not likely that Armitage may not get to talk to Thach but Thach was willing to talk to the American journalists before the arrival of the official delegation. But the leaders in Hanoi, despite the fantastic illogic they can come up with, are downright pragmatists and will not close any doors. If what Thach said is the real thinking of Hanoi, then there was no point in the American delegation being allowed to start discussions there. They will start from the negative stance which Thach has already taken and then come with the conditions if the search for the MIA's is to be carried out. It will be a clear question of blackmail, urging the American delegation, and through that the American government, to grant some concessions highly favourable to Vietnam in order to cooperate in the search for MIA's. As we know, and as Hanoi has demonstrated again and again, the Vietnamese are experts at the bargaining table and they have all the means of twisting the American arm to the limit.

The Americans, of course, have their own leverage in that they have sent a low-level delegation incapable of making on-the-spot decisions. The Vietnamese will find it an ideal opportunity to find out how far the Americans will go in making concessions to locate the MIA's and if their stiff conditions are met, they can be quite lackadaisical about the search. But in any case this is an ideal situation for the Vietnamese leaders to find out how much is the "pound of flesh" worth.

SUPREME COMMANDER VIEWS MILITARY'S POLITICAL ROLE

[Text] In a vindication of military intervention in national politics, Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon asserted yesterday that the military stepped in only when a civilian government showed it was incapable of running the country and had lost the support of the people.

He also called on the military and civilians to "join hands" to bring about prosperity and development to the country.

Addressing a group of lecturers and students on "Thai Armed Forces and National Development" at the National Institute of Development Administration, General Saiyut defended the role of the military in politics saying that military intervention had taken place only when the government in charge was corrupt and unable to solve the problems.

General Saiyut noted that once the emergency had been overcome the military usually withdrew.

The supreme commander blamed past civilian governments for interfering in military affairs, especially concerning defence budgets and the annual military reshuffle which he said had led to conflicts within the armed forces. As a result, the military has automatically been drawn into the political arena, he added.

General Saiyut said he rejected the contention that military intervention in politics was a prime reason for the country's failures in the field of development despite the abundant natural and human resources Thailand has. He continued that the civic actions by the military would help the country develop successfully.

On the modernisation of the armed forces, he said development plans are being worked out in accordance with threats facing the country at the present time. The plans emphasised self-reliance.

Commenting on the communist movement, General Saiyut believed that the Communist Party of Thailand has been trying to establish links with forces outside the country on the lines of what happened in Kampuchea which resulted in the Vietnamese occupation. The armed forces have worked hard against the alliance between local and foreign communists, he said.

General Saiyut also noted that the military had greatly broadened its horizons in order to communicate better with civilians.

VNA DENIES REPORTS OF SRV ANTI-THAI ACTIONS

OW241459 Hanoi VNA in English 1450 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Feb 25 -- The Yugoslav news agency TANJUG on February 24 quoted Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon as saying that "the Vietnamese units in the last few days had often crossed to or bombarded Thailand's territory". Moreover, Thai newspapers on February 20 alleged that Vietnamese aircraft had dropped "something like yellow toxic chemicals on Klong Cheng" in Thailand.

VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to flatly reject these reports, which were obviously maliciously motivated. The Socialist Republic of Vietnam has always strictly respected the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Thailand.

NGUYEN CO THACH COMMENTS ON VIENTIANE MEETING

BK251310 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 25 Feb 82

["Final part" of Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's interview with an unidentified correspondent of the national radio-TV network following the recent ministerial conference of the Indochinese countries -- date not given; questions and answers read by announcer]

[Text] [Question] The fifth foreign ministerial conference of the three Indochinese countries has just concluded. Could you explain the differences between these conferences, their development and the problems raised since the first conference?

[Answer] Since the beginning of 1980 -- that is, over the past 2 years -- we have held five conferences. At these conferences, we discussed three categories of issues. The first one is the solidarity and cooperation between the three Indochinese countries. The second one is how to struggle against Chinese expansionism so as to normalize relations with China, reestablish the good-neighborhood relations between the people of China and the peoples of the three Indochinese countries. The third issue is the relations between the three Indochinese countries and the ASEAN countries.

On these three issues, at each conference we made new proposals showing our good will and desire for peace, stability and good neighborliness. However, over the past 3 years events in Southeast Asia have moved very fast and new problems have appeared. Never in the world have such problems arisen so fast. We know that since 1979 China, the United States and ASEAN countries have resorted to military, political and economic sabotage to weaken and then conquer the three Indochinese countries, but this policy has been defeated step by step.

Another factor emerging over the past 2 years is that earlier we had said the situation in Kampuchea was irreversible -- a position public opinion in Western and ASEAN countries did not accept. But today, after 2 years, people have to accept this fact whether they like it or not, openly or in private, officially or unofficially. They have to accept this fact because it is the reality and because the three Indochinese countries are closely united.

The third factor is that the trend for peace, friendship and dialogue between the Southeast Asian countries has been further developed thanks to efforts made by us and other peace forces in the region. Meanwhile, China's policy of causing confrontation and tension in Southeast Asia has been exposed and resisted. The fifth ministerial conference of the three Indochinese countries was convened in such a situation. I think the only difference is the situation. Our proposals were made in this situation, which is very favorable.

[Question] Could you tell us about the influence of the Vientiane conference on the situation in Southeast Asia?

[Answer] First, I would like to discuss the situation in Southeast Asia and the Chinese policy toward this region over the past 3 years. Chinese policy contains three main aspects. Firstly, China is carrying out a destructive war against the three Indochinese countries. This is the main aspect of its policy. Secondly, China continues backing the pro-China reactionary forces in the ASEAN member countries to oppose the legal governments of these countries, and the last aspect is to sow division among the ASEAN and Indochinese countries. By so doing, China hopes to cover up its moves and make people believe that the outstanding problem in Southeast Asia is the conflict between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries.

Chinese policy in Southeast Asia is part of the Chinese move toward regional hegemonism that is to create disorder so that China can control the region. China's strategy is to pit the United States against the Soviet Union; Pakistan against India. This strategy has gained temporary results because the ASEAN countries were caught in China's trap.

The ASEAN countries openly oppose the Indochinese countries while failing to see China as the main threat and back the Pol Pot clique and other Khmer reactionary forces to oppose the Kampuchean people. In this campaign, Thailand has proved to be the most active. This is a very dangerous precedent for the ASEAN countries because China will back the pro-China reactionary forces in these countries, especially in Thailand in the antigovernment activities. To this end, the ASEAN countries can say nothing because it's they who let China do this.

The situation in Southeast Asia in the past 2 years demonstrated the Indochinese countries' desire for peace and friendship with the ASEAN countries and China's attempt to maintain tension along the Vietnam and Laos border and along the Kampuchean-Thai border. China has rejected all peace proposals of the Indochinese countries and the trend of dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries. Through this, it can be clearly seen that China is the main threat and is maintaining the tension in Indochina for its interests.

I think that gradually some ASEAN countries, especially Indonesia and Malaysia, would see this fact and that the Kampuchean problem is not the problem between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries but between the Indochinese countries and China. For this reason, Indonesia said that the ASEAN countries should not interfere in the Kampuchean problem. Recently, the commander in chief of the Thai Royal Army also stated that the Thai people should not be caught in the trap of the neighbor country who attempts to set Thailand and its neighbors at loggerhead.

We hope that this trend will further develop into a peace initiative. We also believe that our proposals sooner or later will triumph because they are fair and reasonable and in conformity with the desire for peace, stability in this region.

UNHCR OFFICIAL VISITS, MEETS NGUYEN CO THACH

OW241726 Hanoi VNA in English 1513 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 24 — Zia Rizvi, coordinator of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees' programme in Southeast Asia, has paid a visit to Vietnam recently. On Feb [date indistinct] Zia Rizvi was received by Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach.

The UNHCR official also had an exchange of views with Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Anh Tuan about the implementation of the seven-point programme agreed upon on May 30, 1979, between the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the UNHCR. The two sides expressed satisfaction over their cooperation in carrying out the said programme.

Mr. Zia Rizvi took note of Vietnam's good will in satisfactorily arranging legal departures of Vietnamese in the recent period and expressed his hope to see continued development of this trend. Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Anh Tuan reaffirmed the SRV Government's readiness always to create favourable conditions for legal departures so that the migrants might rejoin their families and settle abroad. On the other hand, he said, the government would act resolutely to prevent the illegal departures which ran counter to the policy of the SRV.

The two sides agreed to continue cooperation in stepping up the legal departures of those Vietnamese who wish to migrate and settle abroad as well as the resettlement of Kampuchean refugees now temporarily residing in Vietnam in a third country of their choice.

U.S. PRESS DISPUTES REAGAN REMARKS ON VIETNAM

BK260908 Hanoi International Service in Thai 1130 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Commenting on President Reagan's 18 February press conference in New York, the Washington POST and the New York TIMES of 19 February noted that most of Reagan's statement regarding the history of Vietnam was incorrect. Reagan said during this press conference that north and south Vietnam were already divided into two countries before French occupation in the late 19th century. He also said that President Ho Chi Minh rejected the general elections planned for 1956 and that President Kennedy dispatched a few divisions of U.S. Marines to South Vietnam. Those were examples.

The New York TIMES pointed out that for most of Vietnam's history, Vietnam has been a politically united country with the exception of the period when it was artificially divided by China and the French colonialists. The Washington POST noted that for some time the United States itself partitioned the north of Vietnam from the south. The paper quoted a Pentagon document which indicates that former U.S. President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles were in agreement with Ngo Dinh Diem, the puppet president in Saigon, and remained oblivious to the elections and had delayed the elections in 1956. Dulles stated in his cable that it was important to delay the elections since the elections could undoubtedly lead to the unification of Vietnam under President Ho Chi Minh. The Washington POST made it clear that it was not President Kennedy -- whom Reagan referred to -- but President Johnson, who on 7 February 1965 ordered 550 U.S. Marines and Hawk missiles to be dispatched into Vietnam for the first time.

INTERVIEW WITH MINISTER OF CULTURE, INFORMATION

OW250207 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Station correspondent interview with Minister of Culture and Information Nguyen Van Hieu and representatives of cultural services in Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City and Nghia Binh Province on tasks in 1982 and activities relating to the fifth party congress -- recorded]

[Text] [Correspondent] Comrade minister: In the past 3 days, the Ministry of Culture and information held a conference to review its tasks in 1981 and discuss the tasks for 1982. Please tell us the substance of the main tasks and the specific activities aimed at serving the forthcoming fifth party congress. What can the cultural sector do to create national cultural traits which will be different from those in the past?

[Minister] As you know, the conference held by the ministry over the past 3 days concentrated on major issues, including the building of a new type of man, a new lifestyle and a new culture and the construction of cultural installations at district and grassroots levels. The conference also reviewed the cultural activities in the areas of ethnic minority peoples and in border areas and discussed the issue of production and trade in the cultural sector. Addressing the conference, Comrade Chairman Pham Van Dong urged the sector to concentrate on the issue of forming a new type of man, a new lifestyle and a new culture, as specified in the party's resolutions. As the most typical delegates from various localities are present with me, I would like to ask some of them to talk about their tasks in 1981 and their activities in 1982 in honor of the party congress. Please, Comrade Tran Tien from the capital, Hanoi, tell us about the 1982 tasks to make our capital city worthy of its position and to greet the fifth party congress.

[Tran Tien] Here are some of my views. As cultural workers in Hanoi, our capital city, our responsibility for building a new type of man, a new lifestyle and a new culture is very important. As stressed on several occasions by Comrade party General Secretary Le Duan at the municipal party organization congresses, the capital city's people must be typically socialist, whereas the city must typify our national culture. For this reason, I think that we have a very heavy responsibility. According to our plan, to serve the fifth national party congress to be held in Hanoi, we will carry out the following three tasks. First, we will further step up the campaign to build a new lifestyle in Hanoi. As you comrades know, we are now concentrating efforts on sanitation to beautify the city and on the campaign to maintain public order and security and oppose reactionary, decadent cultural works and ridiculous manners. Our cultural sector is cooperating with other sectors in this campaign and its contribution is important. Second, we are striving to organize spring art festivals, song contests and collective song and dance parties to create art vitality and a joyful and healthy spirit which will prevail over negative phenomena. Third, we will strive to build cultural installations at grassroots and district levels in the urban and suburban areas. We pay great attention to workers, teenagers and students, whom we consider as the main raison d'etre of our services.

[Minister] Thank you, Comrade Tran Tien. Now, I invite Comrade Vu, deputy director of the Ho Chi Minh City Cultural Service, to talk about the sweeping of noxious culture and especially the building of a new culture in the city in the past year in honor of the party congress.

[Vu] Generally speaking, Ho Chi Minh City fulfilled or overfulfilled last year's plan norms concerning the masses' cultural needs. The greatest event in the past year, which attracted public attention nationwide, was the seething struggle movement against the enemy's decadent, reactionary culture, art and letters in the city. Under the direct leadership of Comrade Vo Van Kiet and the city party committee, and especially under the close guidance of our comrade minister, this movement brought fair initial results last year. We also obtained good results in many other spheres, including song, dance, music and the theatre. In fact, according to the comrade minister's report, during last Christmas and the Tet festival, the cultural and art activities in the city reached their climax and a healthy tendency prevailed in the spheres of song, dance, music, stage and entertainment as well as in dressing and manners. Social and public order also prevailed in the streets. In reality, our efforts brought some good results. We know that these results were also due to the cooperation and efforts of all party organizations, echelons, sectors and circles. However, after reviewing our tasks at the conference, we have come to realize that the don'ts still prevail over the do's. This is a big problem. Therefore, we must strive to further promote the do's in 1982 by continuing to step up the movement of healthy song, dance and music among the masses.

Meanwhile, we must build more clubs and cultural homes and publish many good books, newspapers and cultural works to serve the public. Regarding the newsprint problem, the comrade secretary of the city party committee and our comrade minister have urged us to strive to produce as many as 10,000 to 12,000 tons of newsprint in 1982. That is a very difficult problem. We have discussed ways to implement this instruction.

[Minister] Now I invite Comrade Nhon from Nghia Binh Province, which has been awarded the government's rotation banner this year, to speak on the building of material and technical bases for the activities of this locality's cultural sector, which has done a very good job.

[Nhon] Our province is very proud of being awarded the 1981 rotation banner by the Council of Ministers. This noble award is encouraging and motivating us to heighten our spirit of responsibility. We realize that in 1982 we must strive to implement the instructions given by Chairman Pham Van Dong of the Council of Ministers and by our comrade minister at the comference yesterday. I will ask the comrade leaders of the cultural service of our province to follow the example set by An Nhon, a rice-growing district and Son Ha, a district of ethnic minority peoples, which have taken the lead in building a new lifestyle. We will step up the campaign to build a pattern of civilized life, families with a new culture and socialist new men and to oppose negative aspects. We will also concentrate our efforts on building cultural clusters at district level as mentioned in the draft political report which we have studied. Professionally, our main task is to improve the quality and impact of our cultural, art, information and propaganda activities in order to serve our compatriots' cultural life in the mountainous, rural and urban areas. This new cultural life must prevail in all installations as stressed in the political report. Regarding the building of material installations for cultural activities in 1982, we have to complete the construction of a middle school of culture and arts in our province and build an exhibition area with a theatrical stage and fair in the open air.

[Minister] Finally, I would like to add that, apart from the tasks set forth for the cultural sector in various localities, we must strive to produce great and good cultural and art works and literary masterpieces to serve our people's present needs, in accordance with the instructions of the chairman of the Council of Ministers.

NHAN DAN EDITORIAL URGES ENERGY CONSERVATION

[Nhan Dan 25 February editorial: "Conserve Energy"]

[Text] With less supplies and fuel than in previous years, the electricity sector this year is still meeting the demands of all sectors of the national economy for more electrical power to develop production. The imbalance between demand and supply is posing a big difficulty to many enterprises and worksites. To overcome this, both the suppliers and the users must strive their utmost to step up production and practice conservation for the common benefit of the national economy.

In the various units of the electricity sector, serious waste often occurs in the delivery and reception of coal and oil and in the use of fuel based on set norms. Instead of decreasing, the consumption rate of coal and oil for the production of 1 kilowatt of electricity is now going up. If strict control is enforced in the delivery and reception of fuel and if efforts are made to repair equipment satisfactorily and to operate generators in accordance with specifications through just administration of rewards and penalties, all the power plants in the north can annually save at least more than 100,000 tons of coal -- enough for a powerplant with a capacity of 100,000 kilowatts to operate for transmission generally amounts to 20 percent of the output. Stolen electricity alone is equal to the output produced by the Thai Nguyen powerplant at full capacity for a year. To achieve savings in this regard, it is necessary to install additional equipment as necessary and more satisfactorily organize the supply network and transmission control.

Conservation is meant not only to reduce the consumption of fuel but also to increase the output of electricity for creating more wealth for society. The movement for conservation in the electricity sector must be carefully organized in the interests of the country and the people, including its own interests. Cadres and workers of the electricity sectors must uphold the spirit of collective mastery, work creatively and save every ounce of fuel and every kilowatt of electricity.

The saving measures employed by the electricity sector in production will become more effective if they are closely combined with measures for thrifty consumption developed by all production and construction establishments as well as by the people in their everyday life in areas where electricity is available.

In industrial production the consumption of electricity often exceeds the norms set for product units. For instance, the excessive percentages are 5 percent in cement production and 3 percent in the textile industry. In agriculture, electricity is still seriously wasted on unnecessary activities. Some provinces in the Bac Bo Delta, although requiring only 15 million kilowatt-hours of electricity for production, have consumed 20 million. The rural areas surrounding Hanoi often consume an amount of electricity that more than double the set amount of 2.6 million kilowatt-hours for cultivation work on over 16,000 hectares of lands.

In many city blocks the consumption of electricity is loosely controlled. Many collective housing quarters are still using electricity at the average rate of 170 to 200 or even 300 kilowatt-hours per family. A number of families have also used electricity for production or business activities without permission.

In controlling the supply of electricity, it is necessary to coordinate the activities of various sectors and echelons in enforcing administrative, economic and educational measures to prohibit the illegal use of electricity and ensure that electricity is used for the proper purposes by the right parties.

Comprehensive measures designed to conserve energy must be carried out along with reorganizing production establishments, improving management and rounding up sources of energy in order to ensure the fulfillment of the state production plan. Conservation means not only to enforce supply cutbacks but also to create conditions for production establishments -- even though they are provided with a smaller power supply -- to operate more satisfactorily. All saving measures must be enforced with due consideration given to the results of production and business. This is also the aim of the electricity production and distribution sector in its efforts to readjust its organization and improve management.

Along with the efforts taken by the electricity sector, all industrial and handicraft production establishments have the responsibility to reduce the rate of power consumption by rearranging their production lines and equipment and clearly establishing a system for power consumption. Energy is the direct source of life for the economy and for national development. Conserving energy is meant to enrich the wealth of society. Producers, suppliers and consumers are all obliged to practice thrift.

NHAN DAN STRESSES TASK OF MARKET MANAGEMENT

BK231307 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 19 Feb 82

[NHAN DAN 19 February editorial: "Market Management Is Always an Important Task"]

[Text] Market organization and management is an important task which encourages production, ensures that all sources of goods are controlled by the state and stabilizes prices and the people's livelihood. Therefore, it is always necessary to perform this task carefully. In doing this, we must combine the three measures -- economic, educational and administrative -- and rely on the strength of the system of proletarian dictatorship and the people's right to collective mastery.

To improve and expand the scope of socialist trade so as to develop its initial effectiveness in support of production and the people's livelihood, and to master the market in order to advance toward controlling a major part of the wholesale and retail market, it is necessary for the state-operated trade sector and the marketing cooperatives to strengthen their forces and make their organizations firm and strong. The effort to achieve unified and coordinated operation of various trade and business organizations contributes to ensuring market order and diversifying and rationally regulating the distribution and circulation of goods on a national scale. Meanwhile, we must resolutely overcome such phenomena as localism and individualism, which could upset the market, cause competition for profits and violate the price control policies.

Small merchants continue to play an active role in the organized market, as they help to prevent the former bourgeois traders from resuming operations under the guise of petty traders. Small traders, including those engaged in legitimate services and businesses, who use their own labor in procuring goods to satisfy the people's diversified daily needs can supplement and support the socialist trade in areas where it has not yet been able to reach.

It is noteworthy that at a time when there are still many difficulties in production and there are still not enough goods, the number of merchants has surpassed the required level. In view of this, it is necessary to provide guidance and assistance to the small merchants so that they can rearrange their operational system. They can be formed into teams and branches for joint business operations and services or can serve as dealers for the state-operated trade sector.

It is necessary for all markets and stores in various cities, industrial complexes and municipalities to put their management in order and on the right track.

Meanwhile, all state organs are dutybound to control, inspect and supervise all households engaged in business, industrial and trade activities in both collective and individual sectors. This is to ensure that their business is being conducted as registered, that it involved only goods authorized by the state and that their taxes are paid as required.

It is necessary to overcome all negative manifestations in the unorganized market and punish all activities disrupting the market, such as speculation, smuggling and circulation of stolen or illegally imported goods. Meanwhile, all state organs are responsible for the protection of state property, equipment, materials and goods against thieves who are trying to sabotage the economy. Market management is always an important task for our socialist state and society.

MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE HOLDS CONFERENCE

BK251228 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] The paper NHAN DAN today reports that the Ministry of Agriculture recently held a conference in Hue City, Binh Tri Thien Province, to review its 1981 activities, discuss its 1982 guidelines and tasks and review the results obtained after 1 year of implementing the VCP Central Committee Secretariat's directive No 100 on the improvement of contractual work in agriculture.

In 1981, led by the VCP Central Committee and the government, and thanks to the great efforts of peasants and various sectors related to agriculture, the agriculture production front scored relatively comprehensive successes. Against this background, the Ministry of Agriculture discussed in this conference the past achievements, shortcomings and many problems to be solved on the path of advance.

Generally speaking, last year grain production exceeded the planned target and there was a fairly high increase in animal husbandry and industrial cropping. The practice of the end-product contract system with groups of laborers and individual laborers in compliance with directive No 100 has created an impetus and a vigorous emulation movement in the rural areas to boost production, strengthen and perfect socialist production relations in agriculture, ensure the harmonious combination of the three interests and make it possible for more new factors to arise, thus creating a new upward trend for the rural areas.

A number of localities, however, have failed to cultivate the entire planned rice areas and have not enthusiastically complied with the policy to provide guidance for high-yield rice areas. Production activities in certain areas have not yet been stabilized due to failure to overcome waterlogging and drought and also due to the absence of an appropriate system of cultivation and crop allocation meeded to expand the two-crop-a-year rice areas in the south. Seed-related work, though showing some progress, is still weak in various aspects. The quality of seeds is still poor. Some localities have given out contracts for products without any experience on seed-related work. The allocation of contracts is still being performed in a haphazard manner. The extent to which quotas have been contracted out to the people is not appropriate. The supply of such essential materials as tractors, gasoline, oil, fertilizer and insecticide has not been sufficient and quick enough. These shortcomings have limited the results of rice production which, otherwise, should have been higher.

The conference was concerned about a decline in the production of subsidiary food crops with the acreage reportedly falling behind the planned target and representing a decrease as compared with 1980. Although the output of many kinds of subsidiary food crops has increased slightly, it is still considered low. The annual figure of subsidiary food crop yeilds in terms of paddy was 500,000 tons short of the planned target and 220,000 tons less than last year. There were also certain localities -- such as Quang Ninh, Ha Bac and Thai Binh -- however, which overfulfilled the planned target for subsidiary food crop production.

The reasons for the decline in the subsidiary food crop production are that the important position of subsidiary food crops in tackling the grain problem has not been fully realized; guidance in subsidiary food crop production is not yet tight enough; necessary material and technical investments have not yet been appropriately made; and cadres and people in many areas still have a tendency to treat subsidiary food crop production lightly. The processing, transportation and consumption of subsidiary food crop products in areas where there are plenty of subsidiary food crops have not yet been tackled satisfactorily, thus constituting a great obstacle to efforts to step up production.

The results of last year's agriculture production were attributed partly to favorable weather conditions. The most important important reason for this, however, was the effectiveness of a number of production promoting policies. The product-contract mode adopted by agriculture cooperatives especially created a strong impetus and helped promote great efforts among the people. Various echelons and sectors developed their strong points, overcame difficulties and created a drastic change at the grassroots level.

The conference was fully informed of the basic concepts of agricultural development for the coming years which consist of concentrating the greatest efforts on solving at all costs the grain and food problems and meeting the food requirements of the entire society.

Intensive cultivation is the most important strategic goal to be attained in grain production and in agricultural production as a whole. A great deal of attention must also be given, however, to carrying out multicropping and land reclamation. It is necessary to strive to increase quickly the volumes of farm produce for export and raw materials for use by the industrial sector as this is a strategic objective of agriculture. We must concentrate on satisfactorily exploiting the export potentials of various short-term crops while striving to exploit the products of perennial trees and of animal husbandry. We must properly combine the three economic elements — in state-run, cooperativized and family-operated -- on the basis of constantly strengthening the collective and state-owned economic sectors. We must step up the scientific and technological revolution and build material and technical bases of agriculture. In the years ahead, we must give priority to making capital investments in the building of various water conservation projects and various establishments specialized in cross-breeding crop seeds, in processing fertilizer, in protecting vegetation, in doing veterinary work and in repairing machine tools and engines used in agriculture. We must reorganize production, improve the organizational management of agriculture, properly use all economic levers, and develop the role of districts in agricultural development. We must vigorously undertake the redistribution of manpower on a national scale and must create more services and mobs and expand cultivated areas.

As for 1982 agricultural plans, the conference stressed the need to expand cultivated areas, carry out multicropping, strive to plant rice on the whole planned acreage, concentrate on providing guidance for key areas, and build and provide good guidance for high-yield rice growing areas. Simultaneously, steps must be taken to help those areas having difficulties in production so they can carry out intensive cultivation on the entire acreage to obtain high yields, satisfactorily organize the supply of technical materials, satisfactorily implement all production promoting policies and perfect the contract system in various cooperatives and the piecework and incentive pay system in various state-run establishments.

[Text] The Ministry of Agriculture recently held a conference in Hue City in Binh Tri Thien province to review its work in 1981 and discuss guidelines and tasks for 1982. The conferees also reviewed the 1-year implementation of VCP Central Committee Directive No 100 concerning the improvements of contract work in agriculture.

The outstanding feature in grain production in 1981 was the high production of paddy. The entire country planted 5.63 million hectares, achieving 97 percent of plan norms. The cultivated area was the largest ever recorded, representing an increase of 120,850 hectares over 1980. The average output of 22.34 quintals per hectare was the highest so far, recording an increase of 1.24 quintals per hectare over 1980 and overfulfilling plan norms by 1.3 percent. The northern provinces achieved 22.8 quintals per hectare. Sixteen provinces are cities achieved an annual paddy output higher than the general average output, and 16 provinces achieved as many as 20 quintals per hectare. In 1981 the total paddy output was 12.57 million tons, in increase of 960,000 tons over 1980.

In 1982 the agriculture sector in the entire country is expected to attain the goals set by the National Assembly and the Council of Ministers. The entire country must ensure the production of 16.5 million tons of grain converted to paddy equivalent, including 13.5 million tons of paddy and 3 million tons of subsidiary crops converted to paddy equivalent. This means that there must be an increase of 1.4 million tons over 1981.

In order to ensure the attainment of these norms, in 1982 the agricultural sectors must satisfactorily carry out such basic tasks as expanding the cultivated area, increasing the yearly number of crops, transplanting the entire planned area, closely directing the cultivation in key areas and building and providing guidance for areas that can yield high paddy output. The agricultural sector must also adopt effective measures to help areas that have experienced difficulties in production.

It must accelerate intensive cultivation and the increase in paddy output in order to achieve a high, stabilized output. It must promptly provide materials and equipment for production carry out incentive policies satisfactorily and widely apply, improve and perfect the product-based contract system in agricultural cooperatives.

TROOPS URGED TO PARTICIPATE IN GRAIN PRODUCTION

BK251519 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 24 Feb 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN editorial: "Actively Produce Grain and Foodstuffs" -- date not given]

[Text] The year of 1982 holds a special position in the economic and political domains. It is the first year in which the resolutions to be adopted by the Fifth VCP Congress will be implemented. The 1982 economic guidelines and tasks for the present situation in our country are clearly specified: We must concentrate on developing agricultural production to meet the food demands of the entire society and on this basis promote the development of other sectors.

Consequently, with regard to our army, along with implementing the tasks of maintaining combat readiness and fighting well, and depending on our conditions, we must actively participate in building the economy, especially in producing grain and foodstuffs, and must contribute to resolving the food problem in our country and improving the living conditions of troops. Cadres and combatants in each unit should be made to realize clearly the important position of grain and foodstuffs in our country at the present time. This should be considered a barrier to cross over in order to create the foundations for building and defending the socialist fatherland. At the same time, we should make all people see that our troops are fully capable of fulfilling well the task of developing grain and other foodstuffs production. In this connection, we should realize our responsibility and be determined to seek all measures to accelerate the production of grain and foodstuffs, no matter where we are stationed.

The task of producing grain and foodstuffs must be materialized into struggle objectives for our troops. Each unit should concentrate on the nature of its duties to maintain combat readiness, fight and work and on the conditions of terrain, climate and weather in its station area to select the suitable guidelines for developing crop cultivation and animal raising as well as to determine the appropriate production forms and scales.

It seems that nearly all units can carry out production in the vicinity of their stations by cultivating crops and raising animals in order to improve their diet. Larger units can organize production locally in small areas of crop cultivation and animal raising.

Military regions, army corps and armed services can organize medium-scale economic zones. They may combine crop cultivation closely with animal raising and contribute to redistributing the labor forces. On the basis of well-established programs and plans, we should have a division of labor and establish specific targets and norms for the production of grain and foodstuffs so that all units, cadres and combatants can struggle to attain them.

After establishing production targets, we should immediately formulate plans for consumption. With respect to green vegetables -- indispensable food items in troops' diet -- which can be grown year round, we should have plans to arrange and spread the crop cultivation to ensure a regular vegetable supply source. In order to create conditions for troops to participate actively in the production of grain and foodstuffs, specialized agencies must regularly watch production and provide technical cultivation guidance for each crop season and each type of crop.

At the same time, they must buy and provide seeds and other materials necessary for production. All units, cadres and combatants must be aware of the necessity of using all types of land, all sources of fertilizer and other available means to develop production. They must develop a sense of austere thrift in production as well as in the consumption of grain and foodstuffs. They must resolutely eliminate the habits of pursuing short-term production achievements and failing scrupulously to implement the economic and financial policies and systems and to calculate properly the economic results by carrying out production at any costs and by indiscriminately reclaiming virgin land which only leads to wasting the output of machinery and vehicles and gasoline, and so forth and destroying forests and land.

Resolving the food problem is an urgent demand of the present task of building and defending our socialist fatherland. Together with all the party and people, let our troops develop the traditions of a good combat and production force by overcoming difficulties and actively participating in economic construction -- primarily the production of grain and foodstuffs -- in order to meritoriously contribute to resolving the food problem for the entire society and gradually improving their own living conditions.

VCTU EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE HOLDS CONFERENCE

BK250916 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] The Vietnamese Confederation of Trade Unions [VCTU] Executive Committee held a conference from 20 to 24 February to review trade union work in 1981 and discuss new guidelines and tasks for 1982. The VCTU Executive Committee set forth central tasks for trade unions at all levels for 1982 and subsequent years and organized an emulation movement for productive labor and practice of thrift among workers and civil servants in a bid to overfulfill the 1982 State Plan as a lever for the successful fulfillment of the tasks of the 5-year 1981-85 state plan, which will be set forth by the party congress. Trade unions are to join hands actively with the state to continue to improve the economic management system, to carry out new policies and measures concerning the development of the economy -- including the distribution and circulation task -- to accelerate profit-and-loss accounting, to put production onto the right track and to stabilize and improve gradually the life of workers, civil servants and people.

HOANG BICH SON ADDRESSES NEW DELHI CONFERENCE

BK250842 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] On the morning of 23 February Comrade Hoang Bich Son, vice foreign minister and head of the SRV delegation, spoke at the current New Delhi consultative conference, which is being attended by representatives of 44 developing countries. After thanking the Indian Government for its thoroughness in organizing these important consultations, Comrade Hoang Bich Son said:

Prime Minister Gandhi's initiative in holding the New Delhi consultative conference on North-South problems and cooperation is very timely and of great significance. The developing countries' current economic situation is continuing to deteriorate. Many vitally important and pressing problems -- such as the problems of food, energy, balance of trade and capital for development -- must be resolved.

Obviously the main cause of this state of affairs is that imperialism still maintains unequal economic relations while stepping up the arms race, thereby making the international situation even more tense and serious and threatening the independence and security of many nations. A number of Western countreis -- especially the United States -- have not only driven the North-South dialogue into a deadlock but has also tried to shift the economic recession in their homelands to the developing nations by practicing protectionism, implementing tariff barriers and unilaterally cutting aid. The U.S. Government has even pursued the gross policy of linking economic aid with the voting attitude of developing countries at the United Nations and applying an economic blockade against a number of developing countries.

The pressing demand of developing countries is a struggle for economic development and construction, for the reform of international economic relations on the basis of fairness and equality and for the establishment of a new international economic order. By uniting our actions and strengthening our cooperation, we will certainly be able to achieve victory in this difficult and protracted struggle.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 25 -- Hoang Bich Son, vice minister for foreign affairs, head of the Vietnamese delegation, on February 23 made an address at the New Delhi conference of 44 developing countries. The Vietnamese vice minister said that the worsening economic situation of the developing countries stems mainly from the imperialist countries' policy of maintaining the present unequal economic relations and stepping up the arms race, which has further strained the world situation.

Vice Minister Hoang Bich Son said he agreed that in the package negotiation, efforts should be concentrated on the development of food and energy, equitable trade and the provision of larger funds for the development programs in the developing countries.

He stressed that the Vietnamese Government attaches great importance to economic, scientific and technical cooperation with the countries in Southeast Asia and South Asia because, he said, this is a sound basis for peaceful co-existence, peace, stability and prosperity in the region. He noted that a vivid expression of that cooperation is the relation between India and Vietnam, which has not ceased to develop in all fields.

The Vietnamese vice minister referred to the recent visit to Vietnam by P.V. Narasimha Rao, minister of external affiars of the Republic of India, saying that it has helped broaden and increase the cooperation between the two countries on the basis of long-term plans.

[Text] Prime Minister Mr Fraser says a solution to the Palestinian issue is clearly central to the future stability and peace of the Middle East. Mr Fraser said the participation of Australian troops in the Sinai peace-keeping force was separate to the issue of Palestinian rights, but the troops' presence should have the maximum positive influence in continuing and broadening the peace process in the Middle East.

The prime minister said Australia's contribution of 120 men to the peace-keeping force meant the association of this country with the new chapter ending a whole era of tragedy in the Middle East.

The secretary of the Australian Sugar Producers Association, Mr (Dillman), says the move will place some restriction on Australia's bargaining power, but will by no means seriously harm the industry. A spokesman for the trade and resources minister, Mr Anthony, said the government was examining the likely effects of the decision on the Australian sugar industry. The duty-free import is a part of President Reagan's new economic plan to bolster the Caribbean and Central America.

MINISTERS LAUD SEA TREATY SIGNED WITH MALAYSIA

BK260835 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0755 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 26 Feb (ANTARA) — Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja and his Malaysian counterpart Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie Thursday [25 February] morning signed here a treaty, whereby Malaysia recognizes the legal regime of Indonesia as an archipelagic state. Indonesia in return recognizes the traditional and other valid rights of Malaysia with respect to certain parts of Indonesian waters and airspace between west and east Malaysia.

Mokhtar referred to the treaty as the culmination of friendly relations between the governments and peoples of the two countries, and the crowning of time-consuming series efforts. It was also a product of the mutual understanding and trust as well as good will the two sides had shown during negotiations which lasted over 1 year, he said.

In signing the treaty, the two countries not only acted on the line of the memorandum of understanding reached in July 1976 but also translated into effect one part of the draft Law of the Sea prepared by the Law of the Sea Conference even before the convention itself had been adopted, Mokhtar noted.

This shows that the convention, if carried out in complete sincerity and effectively, will serve as a guarantee for the maintenance of international peace and security and at the same time lay the basis for the welfare of nations.

Mokhtar pointed to the signing of the treaty not only as the successful end to strenous efforts on both sides for the drawing up of a unique and multifaceted document, but even more as the start of a new period in relations between Indonesia and Malaysia. Mokhtar hoped that after its ratification and coming into force the treaty would form the legal framework for stepped up cooperation between the two countries in safeguarding the territorial integrity of the two countries, in protecting their air and sea links as well as telecommunication facilities, their fisheries and their sea environment, and facilitate their search and rescue operations as well as marine research.

Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie in his address said the treaty reflected the joint desire of the two countries to always cooperate closely in facing any common problem. He said the Malacca Strait and the South China Sea cannot separate the two countries, but on the other hand form a communication link between Indonesia and Malaysia, which have the same ideals and aspirations. "Nothing whatever should be allowed to separate us," Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie said.

He referred to the treaty as the most comprehensive ever signed by Malaysia with Indonesia covering a variety of common defence, including the holding of military exercises either separately or jointly, on the sea and the air.

The world should be made to realize that Indonesia and Malaysia are bound by close ties, so that no one whomsoever will have the desire to disrupt the situation. It is like being pinched in the right leg, and feeling the pain in the left leg too, he added. The foreign minister also noted that, in connection with the Law of the Sea, big countries should realize that to small island countries, in particular, the seabed constitutes something very important.

The Malaysian foreign minister further in his speech said he felt his throat being clogged when pronouncing the name "South China Sea," which he said was coined by the then all powerful colonialists. He called on ASEAN countries to think of a new suitable name acceptable to the world. ASEAN, he said, has fought for that sea to become part of a zone of peace and neutrality so that it could be called a sea of peace and neutrality under the acronym "ZOPAN."

Jakarta Commentary

BK251547 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Indonesia-Malaysia Archipelagic Treaty"]

[Text] Indonesia and Malaysia have signed a treaty on Malaysian recognition of the archipelagic concept of the Republic of Indonesia. On the other hand, Indonesia recognizes Malaysia's traditional rights and its legal rights at certain parts of the Indonesian waters and airspace between west and east Malaysia.

Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja and Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie signed the treaty for their respective governments in Jakarta on Thursday, 25 February 1982. Following the ratification and promulgation of the treaty by the two countries, it will serve as a legal foundation and framework for further strengthening of cooperation between the two countries in various vital matters, particularly in safeguarding their territorial entity and integrity and in maintaining their respective national resilience.

The successful signing of the treaty was the outcome of negotiations which lasted for quite a long time following the memorandum of understanding of July 1976 on the archipelagic concept and the recognition of Malaysian traditional rights. This was possible thanks to the mutual understanding and trust and the good intention of the two countries regarding their respective legal rights and interests in this region. The treaty also laid a stronger foundation for the realization of the ASEAN spirit to guarantee peace not only in this region but also in its surroundings and the world.

Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, in his speech, stated that under this treaty the Malacca Strait and the South China Sea are not dividers but links between the two nations of the same race who entertain identical aspirations and goals. He summed up that Indonesia and Malaysia have been united and there is no force which can separate them. Judging from the Malaysian foreign minister's speech, the recognition of the Indonesian archipelagic concept as a political, sociocultural, economic, defense and security entity has become stronger.

For Indonesia, the signing of the treaty on the archipelagic concept is a very significant event because it took place at a time when the Third International Sea Law Conference is to be resumed from March to April. With this treaty the Indonesian struggle for the archipelagic concept in the Sea Law Conference will be stronger. But this does not mean that we desire international recognition because the realization of the archipelagic concept as its national political doctrine to safeguard the continuity of the Republic of Indonesia must be carried on with or without the Sea Law Conference.

With the signing of the treaty on the archipelagic concept between Indonesia and Malaysia, it is hoped that similar treaties will be concluded with other ASEAN countries such as Singapore and the Philippines which have maritime boundaries with Indonesia.

SUZUKI PLEDGES EFFORTS TO EASE TRADE FRICTION

OW280540 Tokyo KYODO in English 0400 GMT 28 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 28 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki has pledged to take additional measures to ease trade friction with the United States in cooperation with the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP). Suzuki made the pledge Saturday night after being briefed by the head of an LDP mission on its talks last week with U.S. leaders, including President Ronald Reagan.

The mission, led by Masumi Esaki, chairman of the LDP Special Committee on International Economic Relations, returned to Tokyo Saturday. Esaki, former minister of international trade and industry, immediately called on Suzuki to report the outcome of his talks with U.S. leaders.

Esaki told Suzuki that the U.S. attitude toward Japan on the trade issue was stern and urged him to act promptly to cope with growing U.S. congressional moves for "reciprocity" legislation primarily aimed at Japan. Such moves were sparked last month when the Department of Commerce announced that the United States suffered a deficit of $18 billion in trade with Japan last year.

Esaki said the Americans were increasingly irritated by the massive trade deficit and hoped that Japan would take comprehensive steps to open its market even wider to foreign products. "Fundamentally behind the friction (with the United States) are the differences of languages, customs and traditions," he said.

Esaki urged the prime minister to launch more active public relations campaign in the United States to further promote mutual understanding between the two nations. He also urged Suzuki to take similar steps toward the European Community (EC), also plagued with trade deficits with Japan.

Japanese officials, briefing reporters on the Suzuki-Esaki meeting, said the prime minister showed understanding toward the U.S. position on the trade issue. Suzuki said the government and the ruling party will take concerted actions to ease trade friction both with the United States and the EC, the officials said.

Esaki said the United States especially wants Japan to open its market wider to tobacco, oranges, high technology items and soda ash. He said the U.S. Government also wants the liberalization of the service sector. Like banking and insurance. But he said the matter should rather be discussed at the forum of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

ABE DISCUSSES BLOCKING U.S. RECIPROCITY BILLS

OW271215 Tokyo KYODO in English 1143 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 27 (KYODO) -- Japan will call on the EC and Canada to cooperate in blocking "reciprocity" legislation now under consideration in the U.S. Congress, Minister for International Trade and Industry Shintaro Abe said Saturday. Abe told a lower house Budget Committee session that the bills could possibly pass if left to chance.

ENVOY TO U.S. RETURNS FOR TALKS WITH LEADERS

OW270855 Tokyo KYODO in English 0849 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 27 (KYODO) -- Japanese Ambassador to the United States Yoshio Okawara returned home Saturday for a combination of private business reasons and talks with government leaders. The envoy is scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Monday to brief him on the present U.S. stance toward Japan over bilateral trade friction. He will also confer with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe and Susumu Nikaido, secretary general of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party.

MIYAZAWA DECLINES TO REBUT BALDRIGE STATEMENT

OW270333 Tokyo KYODO in English 0311 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 27 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's chief spokesman, insisting that arguments do not solve trade problems, said Saturday he would make no rebuttal of an earlier statement by U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

The rift between Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa and Baldrige took a new twist Friday when the U.S. official denied Miyazawa's charge that the U.S. does not fully understand GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade).

Miyazawa told reporters: "If I speak up again, the statement will further complicate the issue and will not help solve the trade problem."

TALKS WITH PRC CONCLUDED ON VARIOUS TOPICS

Railway Cooperation Talks

OW260745 Tokyo KYODO in English 0729 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Beijing, Feb 26 (KYODO) -- China has asked Japan for technical cooperation in electrifying Chinese railway lines in three-day working-level consultations on railway cooperation ended here Thursday, a Japanese official said Friday. Hideaki Mukaiyama, a senior official of the Transport Ministry, said China requested Japanese technical cooperation in electrification of the Beijing-Qinhuangdao line, under construction with Japan's yen loan, and the Datong-Beijing line to transport coal from Shanxi Province to Qinhuangdao via Beijing.

China plans to double-track and electrify the Datong-Beijing line by 1984 to export 10 million tons of coal to Japan in 1985 as agreed between the two countries and to electrify the Beijing-Qinhuangdao line by 1986.

China also asked for Japanese cooperation in earthquake-resisting technology in the construction of a railway line linking Yanzhou and Shijiusuo, both in Shandong Province. It also wishes to send senior Chinese railway officials to the Japanese National Railways (JNR) to study Japanese technology. Japan replied it would decide on details of the cooperation at annual consultations in March.

Talks on Investment Protection

OW270857 Tokyo KYODO in English 0831 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Beijing, Feb 27 (KYODO) -- A four-day Sino-Japanese working-level meeting on the conclusion of a bilateral agreement on investment protection closed Saturday after it was agreed to hold the next meeting in Tokyo. The two sides were reported to have exchanged views on draft agreements worked out by each government based on agreements reached at a preliminary meeting last May.

Civil Aviation Talks

OW2[illegible]227 Tokyo KYODO in English 1150 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 27 (KYODO) -- Civil air talks between Japan and China ended here Saturday with an agreement to increase weekly commercial flights between the two countries by 40 percent. However, the two nations put off until the nextmeeting the question of beyond-flight rights and cutting flight time by flying over the Korean Peninsula. Officials of both countries had been meeting since last Wednesday. No date for the next session was announced.

During the just concluded talks, both sides agreed to increase the number of seats offered to passengers by 40 percent.

Starting April 1, Japan Air Lines will reduce its DC-8 flights from six to five a week while increasing DC-10 flights from the present two to five. This will raise JAL's passenger seats from 1,734 to 2,455 a week. The Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC) will increase its weekly flights from 10 to 15-17.

The issue had been under discussion for the past two years as a result of a steady increase in passengers. Some 282,000 people flew between the two countries during the April-December period last year, up 19 percent over the same period in 1980.

FIVE FIRMS TO DEFRAY LOANS ON IRAN OIL COMPLEX

OW280807 Tokyo KYODO in English 0733 GMT 28 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 28 (KYODO) -- Five Mitsui Group firms have decided to defray yen 5.1 billion (dollar 22 million) to pay back bank loans which became due Saturday for the Japanese partner in a giant Iran-Japan petrochemical venture, Mitsui sources said Sunday. The five companies will take the action as the Iranian partner in the venture has refused to pay the loans at the third round of negotiations between the two parties which ended in Tehran Saturday.

The sources said the five Japanese firms, including Mitsui and Co. and Mitsui Toatsu Chemicals Inc., will defray the loans Monday.

Iran Chemical Development Co. (ICDC), the Japanese partner, has borrowed yen 125 billion (dollar 543 million) from the Export-Import Bank of Japan and 20 commercial Japanese banks. The Tokyo-based ICDC loaned the money to its Iranian partner, Iran-Japan Petrochemical Co., for financing construction of the petrochemical plant in Bandar Khomeyni in southern Iran. But construction of the dollar 3.6 billion plant, about 85 percent complete, has long been suspended due to the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war.

The governmental Eximbank has rejected a Mitsui request for one-year postponement of loan repayment, because there was no clear prospect for resuming work on the plant.

WORKERS' RALLY IN TOKYO 28 FEB DEMANDS TAX CUTS

OW280643 Tokyo KYODO in English 0627 GMT 28 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 28 (KYODO) -- About 200,000 workers gathered in a rally here Sunday demanding tax cuts totaling yen 1 trillion (about dollar 4.3 billion) in fiscal 1982 beginning in April. The mass rally, at the Yoyogi park in central Tokyo, was organized by four major labor federations, including the General Council of Trade Unions of Japan (Sohyo).

The rally was called amid outcries of salaried men that their disposable income has been decreasing under a five-year freeze on maximum nontaxable incomes, dwindling personal expenditures. This is the first joint mass labor rally since 1974 when a huge anti-inflation gathering was held in Tokyo, sponsors said.

The heads of all opposition parties attended Sunday's Tokyo rally and demanded that the government comply with their demand for the tax reduction in the next fiscal year. The government of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki so far has rejected the demand, saying there are no financial resources to do it.

Sohyo leader Motofumi Makieda accused the government of drastically increasing defense budget in fiscal 1982 while allowing education, social welfare and other outlays to increase only slightly. "We must gather all forces of the people to realize the yen 1 trillion tax cut. We must fight by strengthening cooperation among the opposition parties," Makieda said.

Similar rallies were also held in 16 prefectures under the sponsorship of the four labor federations.

KCNA: U.S. ADDS MORE TROOPS FOR 'TEAM SPIRIT'

SK280408 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0345 GMT 28 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 28 (KCNA) -- The "South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command," the aggressive tool of the U.S. imperialists, announced on February 25 that the military strength of the South Korean puppet army and the U.S. forces participating in the current exercises "Team Spirit 1982" added up to 161,600 men, or 4,000 more than had been planned, according to a report.

It said that the reinforcements of 4,000 men are U.S. troops overseas. This has brought the military strength of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces overseas participating in the exercises to 31,200 men, not counting those occupying South Korea.

In the meantime, part of the forces of the U.S. 7th Division was carried to South Korea from the California air base, the United States, on February 25 to take part in the joint military rehearsals of the U.S. forces and the South Korean puppet army, a report says.

KCNA CITES JIEFANGJUN BAO ON 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982'

SK011040 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1023 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 1 (KCNA) -- The Chinese paper LIBERATION ARMY DAILY February 26 carried a commentary by a XINHUA reporter titled "Provocation Heightening Tension," according to a report.

The commentary condemned the large-scale "Team Spirit 1982" military exercises being staged by the U.S. troops and the South Korean puppet army. Noting that the U.S. troops and the South Korean puppets staged such military exercises every year from 1976 on the pretext of the "threat of southward invasion," the commentary said: The pretext is an entirely groundless one.

It further said: The North side of Korea has clearly stated that it has no intention of invading the South, called for the realisation of the reunification of the North and South in a peaceful way, not by force of arms, proposed to the United States to have a dialogue for the replacement of the armistice agreement with a peace agreement and advanced proposals to ease tension between the North and South and reduce their armies. In the Korean Peninsula there do not exist at all such things as the "threat of southward invasion" and "provocations" from the North. The large-scale military exercises staged by the United States and the South Korean authorities on an unfounded pretext is a provocation against the peaceful policy of the North side of Korea.

It is as clear as noonday that the United States and the South Korean authorities are entirely to blame for the tension in the Korean Peninsula. They must stop the military exercises at once and let the Korean people achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country at an early date without any foreign interference.

VRPR FLAYS SPEAKER CHONG'S REMARKS AT AIRPORT

SK270732 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] On 25 February, at an airport press conference National Assembly Speaker Chong Nae-hyok, who just returned from a visit to Australia, Indonesia, New Zealand and Fiji, babbled that through his visit to these four countries he was able to confirm North Korea's failure in promoting its diplomatic relations with these countries. This is nothing but a sophistry totally opposite the truth.

During his visit Chong Nae-hyok begged these countries to support the position of South Korea in the international arena. However, he gained nothing. This shows that the Chon Tu-hwan ring is being isolated in the international community. Nevertheless, at the press conference Chong Nae-hyok clamored as if his recent visit was successful. This is nothing but a sophistry to mislead public opinion and a last-ditch effort by those who have become international orphans.

SK281130 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2232 GMT 27 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 28 February editorial: "Let All Citizens Further Consolidate the Power of the Republic by Unanimously Participating in the Elections"]

[Text] Today is a felicitous day for the election of deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] of the DPRK. The entire country is seething with joy over the election of SPA deputies. All voters in the country -- who recommended the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as SPA candidate, cherishing their unanimous desire and will, in line with the working class and working people of Tokchon Electoral District No 181 -- have looked forward to today when they will cast votes of loyalty with infinite glory and happiness.

Greeting this significant day, our people are overflowing with infinite feelings of gratitude and trust in the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious KWP who have bestowed today's glory and happiness on those who suffered from a lack of political rights and poverty in the past. They are full of firm determination to further consolidate the power of the republic.

These SPA elections are being held at a time when a new history of great changes is beginning amid the great struggle to model the entire society after the chuche idea and when a brilliant prospect is being unfolded on the future road of the republic under the leadership of the party. Because of this, these elections have an important meaning in the development of our revolution and constitute an unprecedentedly felicitous event.

All voters who deeply cherish the glory of being citizens of the republic are significantly greeting the elections with the burning zeal to cast affirmative votes, overflowing with deep emotion and joy.

These elections for deputies to the SPA, which will be conducted amid the high political awakening and revolutionary zeal of our people, marks another important event in further consolidating the power of the republic.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: The government of the republic is the genuine protector of the democratic freedoms and rights of our people and is the revolutionary banner of the independence and prosperity of the fatherland. As the government of the people is strengthened and developed our people will become more dignified and happier and our fatherland will be prosperous and developed infinitely.

The government of the republic, which was born out of the deep roots of the anti-Japanese revolution and which has adopted the great chuche idea as its guiding principle, is the banner of freedom, independence, happiness and prosperity of the Korean people. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who embarked on the road of revolution, shouldering the fate of the fatherland and people in the period of past national sufferings, organized and led the 20-year-long bloody anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to victory, brought about the new dawn of national liberation and opened a wide road toward construction of a new fatherland.

Based on the valuable achievements and rich experiences attained in the period of anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded our republic in a timely manner even under the very complicated situation after the liberation of 1945 and wisely guided it. As a result, our people today have become intelligent and dignified citizens of an independent and sovereign state who victoriously pioneer their fate and the future of their fatherland with their own strength.

Our country, which suffered from backwardness and poverty for a long time, has become a powerful socialist country which enjoys independence in politics, self-reliance in economy and self-defense in national defense.

Because of the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the line for building an independent and sovereign state set forth by the leader, the government of our people was able to lead the two phases of social revolution, a modern war and our people's struggle for socialism and communism to victory and to create miracles of the century in revolution and construction, thus unreservedly demonstrating the dignity, honor and might of the chuche Korea.

The proud chronicle of the government of our republic, which has traversed the road of victory under the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, is brilliantly embroidered with immortal revolutionary feats performed by our party.

Having set forth a revolutionary slogan for modelling the whole society on the chuche idea, our party has strengthened and developed the government of the republic as a powerful weapon to brilliantly accomplish this historic cause and as a genuine revolutionary government which most thoroughly defends the interests of the working masses.

Under the tested leadership of our party, the government of the republic has been able to victoriously pioneer the path leading to socialism and communism under the banner of the chuche idea and an unprecedentedly great golden age of prosperity has been unfolded on this land. Because of the correct leadership of our party, the future of our republic is endlessly bright and our citizens have become the proudest, happiest and most independent people. Therefore, all the voters throughout the country are now participating unanimously in the election of deputies to the SPA with boundless trust in our party which is leading the government of the republic to victory and glory.

The government of the republic has trodden a rewarding path of struggle for our people's happiness and the fatherland's prosperity and development under the leadership of the party and the leader. It is positively supported and loved by all the people. There have been many difficulties on the road traversed by our government; we have suffered severe hardships several times. However, because our people have always strengthened the government of the republic in every way and have struggled on the basis of its might, our people have been able to achieve great victory.

In the arduous struggle our people have been deeply convinced that the firm guarantee for successfully carrying out the revolution and construction and for achieving an endlessly happy life lies in firmly consolidating the government of the republic. Therefore, regarding today's SPA elections as an honorable work to further strengthen the government of the republic, our people are participating in the elections with unprecedentedly high political zeal.

Through these elections we will further consolidate the government of the republic as firm as a rock, in conformity with the demands of the revolutionary development, by more firmly strengthening the republic's supreme sovereign organ with genuine representatives of workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals who are devotedly serving the fatherland and people with boundless loyalty to the party and leader.

These elections are political events of great significance in our people's political life and in accomplishing their revolutionary cause. Today's elections serve, above all, as an important turning point at which we powerfully display the united might of our people firmly united around the party and leader under one ideological will.

The unity and cohesion of our people firmly united around the party and leader constitute the source of the invincible power of the government of the republic. Our people's political-ideological unity and revolutionary unity are firm because they took root in the flames of the arduous anti-Japanese revolution and they have been firmly consolidated in the difficult and complicated struggle for construction of a new society.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song firmly trusted the people and the people entrusted their entire destiny to the care of the leader. On the basis of this absolute mutual trust, the unity and cohesion of our revolutionary ranks have reached a new high level in the struggle for modeling the entire society on the chuche idea. Now, our society is overflowing only with the chuche idea; all the people are firmly resolved to consummate the chuche cause to the end under the leadership of our party, upholding the respected and beloved leader comrade Kim Il-song. As long as this invincible unity and cohesion exist, we have nothing to fear; the republic will march only along the path of prosperity.

The positive participation in these elections of deputies to the SPA on the part of all the voters throughout the country serves as yet another powerful display of the great might of this unity and cohesion firmly united around the party and leader.

This is why all our citizens are burning with loyalty and patriotism to unanimously participate in the elections and to cast affirmative votes for representatives of the people who they recommend.

When all of our voters actively participate in the elections for deputies to the SPA to be conducted today with high political zeal and awakening, as they did in the past, the unity and cohesion of our people, who are firmly rallied with one ideology and will around the party Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, will be more firmly deepened and the entire society will be further strengthened as a victorious and invincible combat rank struggling under the banner of the republic.

Today's elections are also of great significance in highly enhancing the superiority of the socialist system of our country. The socialist system in our country is a most superior social system in which the working masses are masters of everything and all things in society serve the working masses. Unlike capitalist society in which the workers are targets of exploitation and oppression and have no political freedom and rights, in our country all state policies are enforced for the interests and happiness of the working people and all wealth of society is used for improvement of the welfare of the working masses.

Because of this superior socialist system, our people are leading a happy life to their hearts' content, enjoying genuine political rights and freedoms. Without this superior system, which allows all people of the country to live well equally without worries about food, clothing and housing, we could not contemplate happiness and brighter prospects. This is why our people consider it infinite happiness to live and carry out revolution under this gracious social system provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and glorified by our party and are vigorously struggling to consolidate and develop this system. For all party members and working people to successfully ensure these elections is an expression of their warm love for the most superior socialist system of our country which has provided genuine political rights and freedoms and an infinite happy life to them.

In order to consolidate and develop our superior socialist system, we should strengthen the government of the republic by all means. The government of the republic is a powerful political weapon for establishing a most advanced socialist system on this land and for constantly strengthening and developing it. Only when all people consolidate the government of the republic through elections can our socialist system, won with blood through arduous struggle, be further glorified.

Today's elections are also of great significance in effecting new upsurges in socialist construction. The government of the republic is a powerful weapon in the construction of socialism and communism. Our government has victoriously carried out social reforms and construction under the banner of chuche idea by surmounting all sorts of difficulties and trials. As a result, our fatherland, which once disappeared from the map of world, today has become a powerful socialist industrial state with self-reliant industries, developed rural economy and brilliantly developing national culture. Its magnificent appearance is admired throughout the world.

Without the strengthening and development of the government of the republic, we could not firmly safeguard the gains of revolution nor pioneer the brilliant future of our fatherland victoriously. Today our people and the government of the republic are faced with a heavy task to implement the grand program of the Sixth KWP Congress. We should change our country into a better place in which to live and a rich paradise of the people and further improve the people's living standard by vigorously accelerating the vast nature-remaking program and effecting a great upsurge in socialist economic construction. These vast and rewarding tasks demand that our revolutionary government be firmly and constantly strengthened and its function and role further enhanced.

The elections of deputies to the SPA will serve to more firmly deepen our revolutionary government and will lead the government of the republic to outstandingly carry out its mission and duty of thoroughly implementing the decisions of the sixty party congress and of brilliantly accelerating the task to model the entire society on the chuche idea. These elections will also greatly contribute to encouraging the South Korean people's struggle and to expediting the cause of national reunification.

Today all people in our republic are to directly elect genuine representatives of the people as deputies to the SPA with equal political rights. This demonstrates the democratic election system in our country and the popular nature of the republic. This political right that our people exercise will give great power and faith to the South Korean people struggling to liquidate the fascist military ruling system and to achieve democratization of society. This will also encourage the national pride and honor of all overseas compatriots, including the 700,000 compatriots in Japan who are vigorously staging the patriotic struggle for their democratic national rights and the reunification of the fatherland.

The elections of deputies to the Seventh SPA, held at a time when a new historic change is taking place in the development of our revolution, are a significant event to provide a new milestone for the government of the republic in completing the chuche cause under the leadership of the party. The KWP is the guiding force which leads our republic to victory. The government of the republic is a weapon which accomplishes the leadership of the party. Upholding and following the leadership of the party is the honorable mission of the government of the republic. Only when we firmly consolidate the government of the republic can we firmly guarantee the leadership of our party -- which is the guiding force in the proletarian dictatorship system -- and brilliantly complete the cause of the party.

The votes of loyalty in the elections to be conducted today constitute an important work which will make it possible for our revolutionary government to actively contribute to resolutely safeguarding and defending the party and to strengthening the combat power of the party by deepening the political foundation of the government of the republic.

All voters should understand the significance of these elections to be conducted today and unanimously participate in the work to successfully ensure the elections and evince their status as masters of the country. The votes of loyalty that voters cast today constitute a proud act of exercising their duty and rights as the people who grasp the sovereignty of the country in their hands. Since our people lost their country and sovereignty in the past, they were oppressed and treated contemptuously.

Now, however, they as the masters of sovereignty are directly participating in the politics of the country and enjoying their rights to vote and be elected. This is a great favor bestowed on the people by the party and the leader and our glory and pride. Deeply cherishing this happiness, all people should unanimously go to the voting places and observe their sacred duty. All voters should express their ardent support of SPA deputies they recommended and unreservedly demonstrated their ardent patriotism.

The candidates for SPA deputies are the people's representatives who were recommended in accordance with our party's great political trust and the people's decision. They are the people's warriors who have devotedly struggled for the party, the leader, the fatherland and the people in a long period of revolutionary struggle. They are also the party's nuclei who struggle in the van of the masses, possessing a high party spirit, working class spirit and people-mindedness. When the supreme organ of power is solidly formed by the representatives who devotedly work to implement the party's line and policy, our revolutionary power will be further strengthened and the revolution will victoriously advance.

As they did in the past elections to power organs, 100 percent of the voters should participate in the elections, and 100 percent of them cast "yes" votes, once again demonstrating the unity and cohesion firmly united around the party and the leader and the firmness of the power of the republic.

The country is seething with a burning revolutionary spirit. By successfully ensuring today's felicitous elections and vigorously advancing, our people should effect a new upsurge in all fronts of socialist construction, thereby glorifying this year -- a most significant year in the history of our people's revolutionary struggle -- as a victorious year. Firmly uniting around the party Central Committee led by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the people should win the complete victory of socialism and expedite the independent reunification of the fatherland by consolidating the foundation of the power of the republic.

NORTH URGED TO RETURN FUGITIVE PLOTTER TO CANADA

SK270843 Seoul YONHAP in English 0819 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 27 (YONHAP) -- South Korea urged North Korea Saturday to return Choe Chung-hwa to Canada, and come to the conference table as proposed by South Korea. Choe, the South Korean-born Canadian citizen who played a major role in an abortive attempt on the life of President Chon Tu-hwan, is being sought by the Canadian police, and is believed to have fled to North Korea.

In a statement issued in his capacity as government spokesman, Culture-Information Minister Yi Kwang-pyo said, "If the North Korean communist authorities did not mastermind the assassination, they have to return Choe Chung-hwa to Canada and follow the dictates of their nationalistic conscience by accepting our offer to come to the conference table." South Korea on Thursday proposed that inter-Korean high-level talks be held in March to discuss the unification of the peninsula and other related issues.

Yi said the South Korean Government cannot but express strong indignation at the outcome of the international police investigation, which disclosed the assassination attempt masterminded by North Korea at a time when the Seoul government is urging North Korea to come to the conference table for national conciliation. "The (North Korean) attempt to assassinate the (South Korean) president betrays the fact that the North Korean communist regime is not interested in peaceful reunification, but is intent on communizing the South by subversion and armed provocations," Yi said.

DIPLOMAT DISCUSSES PLOT AGAINST PRESIDENT CHON

SK270902 Seoul SINMUN in Korean 27 Feb 82 p 6

[Report on 26 February interview with ROK consul general in Toronto by Washington correspondent Hwang Pyong-son]

[Excerpts] As the plot to kill President Chon Tu-hwan has been reported in the United States and Canada, Korean compatriots in both countries expressed astonishment and anger against the North Koreans who are reported to have been hatching such a plot at a time when a North-South dialogue is urgently desired. They are denouncing the North Koreans.

In an interview with this reporter, Yi Sang-hun, ROK consul general in Toronto, talked about the atmosphere created by disclosure of the plot to kill President Chon Tu-hwan.

Question: We hear that Choe Chung-hwa has fled to Pyongyang, but his father Choe Hong-hui is still in Canada.

Answer: We know that Choe Hung-hui is still in Canada, but we do not have correct information about his whereabouts.

Question: It is possible that Choe Hong-hui might have been involved in this incident. What do you think?

Answer: We are convinced he was involved in it. I believe he has not been arrested because the Canadian police have no proof to back such a conviction. As you may well know, he is one of the core elements collaborating with North Korea with frequent shuttles between Pyongyang and Canada and is now alienated from Korean compatriots here. He runs the International Taekwondo Federation and rarely appears in public.

Question: It seems that the ring received the secret order to kill the president and the necessary funds when Choe Hong-hui and Choe Chung-hwa were visiting Pyongyang between September and October last year. What do you think?

Answer: In my private opinion, that is what happened. However, the Canadian police have not yet made public a detailed picture of the plot.

Question: When convicted by a Canadian court, what punishment do you think they will get?

Answer: A trial for the ring will start on 1 March. I presume they will be severely punished.

Question: Are there many collaborators with North Korea among compatriots in Canada?

Answer: A handful, about 20, are collaborating with North Korea.

Question: Do you think they are receiving funds for their activities from North Korea?

Answer: I think so.

KOREA TIMES COMMENTS ON ASSASSINATION PLOT

SK280028 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 28 Feb 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Vicious Conspiracies"]

[Text] Morning papers yesterday were laden with news accounts of several gruesome and distressing occurrences at home and abroad. Making up the lead story was the intrusion of a man into the downtown head office of a local bank in broad daylight, which ended with the death of two men from the explosion of grenades the intruder was carrying with him. On the back page were accounts of murder cases involving Korean residents in the United States -- in three separate localities in a span of six days.

Equally eye-catching -- and particularly having far greater national concern and international implications as well -- were reports about an alleged attempt on the life of President Chon Tu-hwan, which had been uncovered and foiled by the Canadian authorities.

According to reports from Toronto, two Canadians were arrested last week and two others, including a Korean resident, are wanted by the Canadian police on charges of conspiracy to assassinate the Korean president -- an attempt reportedly planned to be undertaken during one of his overseas tours.

The wanted Korean was identified as Choe Chung-hwa, alias James Choe, a son of Choe Hong-hui, who has been widely known as an anti-Seoul activist operating in cooperation with North Korea. Besides, the Canadian police said they were investigating a group of North Koreans involved with the wanted Choe, who is believed to have fled Canada to North Korea.

One of the two arrested was reported to be an international terrorist, who had been previously arrested -- and was out on bail at the time of last week's remand -- for his part in another foiled conspiracy to overthrow the Dominican Government in the Caribbean.

In connection with the latest case involving Korea, the Canadian police have seized $68,000 in U.S. funds and one of its sources revealed that the assassination payoff was to total about $600,000, a huge amount to be borne by individuals or a petty action group.

These initial findings and other reports make it most probable that the vicious conspiracy against President Chon was engineered and funded by Pyongyang -- as suggested by the Canadian police and concluded by the Korean National Police, who said they had been in close touch with their Canadian counterparts from the beginning of the investigation along with authorities in several other countries in America and Europe.

The reports are distressing and deplorable -- all the more so as they came to light when Seoul was making all-out bona fide efforts to ameliorate relations with Pyongyang, presenting practical and reasonable proposals to pave the way for territorial unification. And it is astounding to learn that the North Korean communists, for all their bellicosity and adventurism, have even resorted to hiring foreign terrorists to assassinate the South Korean leader.

Pyongyang has already been widely accused of the dispatch of military "advisors" to a number of trouble spots abroad, while training international terrorists on its own soil on the pretext of helping "liberation" movements."

Yet the latest attempt is most detestable and abhorrent for its sheer maliciousness as well as duplicity in view of its propaganda campaign. In another aspect, it may well testify to the futility of North Korea's performance both toward the South and in the world community.

PRESIDENT CHON CALLS UNIFICATION 'DUTY,' 'RIGHT'

SK010218 Seoul YONHAP in English 0204 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 1 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Monday called for a halt to acts "fueling animosity and aggravating alienation among the Korean people," and said that actions had to be taken "at the earliest possible time" to stop the loss of Korean homogeneity.

In an address at a ceremony marking the 63rd anniversary of the Samil (March 1) independence movement, a national uprising against Japan's colonial occupation of Korea, the South Korean leader said that Korean unification should be realized on the basis of the principle of self-determination.

"We have to heed the historical lesson of the Samil movement in our search for a right path to unification. Unification should be achieved on the basis of the principle of self-determination. It should be done on the notion that the Korean people are one," Chon said. "Korean unification should be achieved in such a way as would contribute to the peace and happiness of mankind."

Chon, who proposed a package formula for Korean unification last Jan. 22, described the job of unifying the Korean Peninsula conviction that underlied his new formula for a democratic and peaceful unification of the two Koreas.

BUSINESS GROUP PREDICTS SLOW ECONOMIC RECOVERY

SK251215 Seoul YONHAP in English 1156 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 25 (YONHAP) — South Korea is not expected to recover from its economic slump during the first half of this year, although a slight upturn is forecast. According to a business analysis released Thursday by the Federation of Korean Industries (FKI), domestic business activity, which declined last year, will enter a slow recovery during the period since the demand for construction materials is expected to rise while price stabilization is likely to shore up purchasing power.

The FKI analysis was based on a survey conducted for the nation's 2,680 enterprises.

The FKI study said such negative factors as the prolonged worldwide slump, the aggravation of trade conditions and the weak investment demands of domestic firms would hinder South Korea's economic recovery considerably.

COAL PRODUCTION REACHES RECORD HEIGHT IN 1981

SK271233 Seoul YONHAP in English 1212 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 27 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's coal production last year reached 19,865,000 tons, the largest in the country's history, according to the Energy-Resources Ministry Saturday.

The figure is 865,000 tons (4.6 percent) more than last year's target of 19 million tons and 1,241,000 tons (6.7 percent) more than the amount of coal produced in 1980.

The state-run Daihan Coal Corp. produced 4,883,000 tons, exceeding its goal by 83,000 tons. Daihan's production represents a 97,000-ton increase over its 1980 coal output.

Private mines produced a combined total of 14,982,000 tons of coal, 782,000 tons (5.5 percent) more than their target and 1,144,000 tons (8.3 percent) more than their combined output in 1980.

The ministry attributed the record-breaking coal production last year to ministry efforts to boost production since 1978, coupled with the dry summer in the mining areas last year.

HUN SEN BLASTS U.S. ON TOXIC CHEMICAL WEAPONS

BK261538 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1433 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Feb (SPK) -- Hun Sen, vice chairman of the PRK Council of Ministers and foreign minister, has said that the U.S imperialists' hue and cry about the use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea is a base slander which they should be familiar with. In an interview granted on Thursday, 25 February, to Hulge Gyllenberg, chief of the Finnish delegation now visiting Kampuchea to inquire into Pol Pot's crimes, Minister Hun Sen said:

After being defeated in its deceitful propaganda, Washington pressed the United Nations to send a special mission of its henchmen to conduct an inquiry into the use of chemical weapons. The results of the mission's work proved to be unsatisfactory to the United States. U.S. imperialism then sought to divert world opinion by showing that it is the Americans who are concerned with the Kampuchean problem and who work for this goal with the aid of the ABC television network. However, the U.S. imperialists remain blind to the fact that we -- the Indochinese peoples -- are victims of the chemical weapons used by the United States in this region. They have never asked an international organization to make an inquiry into these matters.

The United States has accused the USSR and Vietnam of using chemical weapons in order to cover up its hypocrisy and its decision to produce toxic gas -- a decision which violates the UN Charter. Recently, at Reagan's request, the U.S. Congress voted for an increase in military expenditures, particularly for the production of neutron and chemical weapons. It is evident that the United States has supplied chemical weapons to Thailand. On 11 and 14 February, Thailand fired chemical shells into Kampuchean territory, especially in the area south of Phom Malay. Somd 20 Kampuchean civilians were hit [as heard].

Minister Hun Sen stressed that this is the game of the thieves crying stop thieves. The U.S. imperialists' slanders are doomed to defeat.

SPK Commentary

["Commentary: A Method Habitual to Washington and Bangkok" -- SPK headline]

[Text] Citing the Thai newspaper NATION REVIEW, on 22 February Radio Beijing reported on the spraying of the toxic chemical yellow rain by Vietnamese planes in the areas adjacent to the Kampuchean-Thai border.

U.S. imperialism, Chinese expansionism and the Bangkok reactionaries have reactivated the question of the use of chemical weapons which they had raised months ago and which rang in empty air despite their efforts. This is another eternal maneuver by Washington and its henchmen in playing the thief who cries stop thief. Is it not true that it was the U.S. imperialists who dumped millions of liters of toxic chemicals during their war of aggression in Indochina? The effects of their aggressive chemical warfare have left an indelible mark on men and the environment. Even the U.S. soldiers who had been in contact with Agent Orange have suffered the disastrous consequences of this substance. By accusing Vietnam of having used chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Washington and Bangkok hope to distract the public attention from the crimes committed by the Americans themselves against the Indochinese and other peoples in the world and also to lead public opinion toward an imaginary fact: the use of chemical weapons by Vietnamese troops. It is Washington which provides the regimes on its payroll with chemical substances. It is Washington which has decided to produce chemical weapons on a large scale, decision which and justice in the world. [sentence as received] Through a noisy propaganda campaign about the so-called use of chemical weapons by Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea, the Pentagon bigwigs intend to shift the blame onto other peoples.

Can we believe in the use of chemical weapons against another people by a people who have already been the victim of these weapons themselves and who today still suffer from their consequences? Why does Vietnam want to cause others the woes that they suffered in the past? Having been a victim of U.S. chemical weapons, Vietnam knows about their effects better than anyone else. The Kampuchean, Vietnam and Lao peoples always wish to live on good terms with their neighbors in order to rebuild their war-torn countries. they desire peace and stability and always respect the sovereignty of Thailand and security in the region.

Washington, Beijing and Bangkok act like Sisyphus in their efforts to make people believe in the use of toxic chemicals by the Vietnamese troops. The UN experts, members of a mission sent out by the United Nations to probe into the use of chemical weapons by Vietnamese troops in Thailand under U.S. pressure, wasted their efforts to collect samples of soil and trees and to contact victims on the spot as the results of the analysis are worthless. And very recently, the Thai minister of public health, Sem Phringphuangkeo, himself refuted the fallacious allegation by Thailand and China by declaring to the THAI NEWS AGENCY that the laboratory research carried out by Thai specialists was not able to confirm that Vietnam has used the yellow rain. Washington and Bangkok could have anticipated it.

SPK: THAILAND SHOULD NOT REJECT INDOCHINA PLAN

BK280525 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0400 GMT 28 Feb 82

[SPK commentary: "Has Thailand Weighed the Pros and Cons?"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 28 Feb (SPK) -- According to AFP in Bangkok, the spokesman for the Thai Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 26 February issued a statement rejecting the peace proposals put forth by the Indochinese countries at the fifth conference of their foreign ministers held in Vientiane on 16 and 17 February.

The Bangkok authorities, caught between Beijing and Washington, have committed a blunder by continuing to follow their lead. Thailand's refusal to begin talks with Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos shows that it always pursues a hostile policy against these countries, a policy which only benefits expansionist China and the warmongering United States. Its blind actions only heighten tension at the Kampuchea-Thailand border at a time when there is a good opportunity to reduce it. Bangkok should know that, in so doing, it has run counter to the aspirations of the peoples in the region and of the Thai people themselves. The Thai authorities are only doing what they please without taking into account the ardent desire of the Thai people and other peoples in the region for peace, stability and security. Bangkok wants to please its masters in Beijing and Washington, who wish only to prolong tension at the Kampuchean-Thai border for their own benefit. China intends to destroy the Kampuchean revolution with the assistance of the debris of the Pol Pot army which it supplies and maintains through the intermediation of Thailand. At the same time, China supports the activities of Maoist groups outlawed by the Thai Government. This undoubtedly is aimed at keeping these groups in China's orbit. Why does Thailand not look correctly at this problem, which has plagued it for a long time? While the Indochinese countries are extending their hands, China brandishes its padded stick and the Thai ruling circles have made a wrong choice by turning down the Indochinese countries' invitation to dialogue. In so doing they will only invite protests by progressive opinion around the world and arouse the dissatisfaction of the Thai people themselves.

As the victims for decades of the wars of aggression waged by the French and then the Americans, the Indochinese peoples only want to restore peace and stability. This was not the first time that they have shown their good will to initiate a dialogue with the five ASEAN countries and with Thailand in particular. The work of the five conferences of their foreign ministers have reflected their correct and constructive attitude toward the settlement of the disputes in the region.

The communique of the fifth foreign ministerial conference in Vientiane has confirmed this attitude. It said: The three Indochinese countries are prepared to discuss with Thailand all questions of common interests. These contacts may be undertaken directly or indirectly, bilaterally or between the three Indochinese countries on the one hand, Thailand on the other. Such contacts are in no way linked with a mutual de facto or de jure recognition. Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos are concentrating all their efforts on building new relations on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence between all states with different political regimes. They are ready to examine and support any initiative, from whatever quarter, that contributes to stabilizing the situation along the Kampuchea-Thailand border. What is Thailand waiting for to begin to resolve problems of common interest with the Indochinese countries? The Indochinese countries' good will is unquestionable. It is as clear as daylight and has won the support and sympathy of the peoples of socialist countries and peace- and justice-loving peoples throughout the world.

The Indochinese peoples have once again affirmed their good will to resolve their dispute with Thailand in particular and the ASEAN countries in general through peaceful means. They pledge to respect Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity. It is high time that Bangkok thinks of its own interests before plunging itself into an impasse and before the chance to begin talks with the Indochinese countries slips away.

KHMER COALITION TALKS 'FARCE' STAGED BY PRC

BK280940 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "The Beijing Authorities are Behaving Simultaneously as Actors and Spectators"]

[Text] According to reports from Western countries, on 21 February Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan held a bipartite meeting in Beijing. According to some observors, Son Sann was also invited to attend this meeting. Due to the fact that either Son Sann was slow or refused outright to attend, the planned tripartite meeting became a bipartite meeting.

What results did the bipartite meeting between Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan in Beijing manage to achieve? Following the bipartite meeting in Beijing on 21 February, Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan agreed on three points which more clearly indicated the perfidious deceit of the two traitors. According to a UPI dispatch from Beijing on 21 February, one of the three points agreed upon during the meeting is that should the tripartite coalition government be formed one day, they must see to it that this government is based on the legitimate status of Democratic Kampuchea which is a full member of the United Nations.

We have been well aware that the effort to establish a coalition of the three reactionary traitors will be in vain, for each of them is too autonomous from the others and has his own judgment and reasoning. Therefore, does the agreement between Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan have any meaning at all? It does, for the tough bargaining between the two traitorous ringleaders in Beijing resulted in the victory of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang over Sihanouk. In this case, the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang forced Sihanouk to comply with each and every one of its whims. Therefore, even if a loose coalition government is established, it will always be in the same old cage: that of Democratic Kampuchea.

As for Sihanouk, outwardly he gave the impression of being most indignant at the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang, but at the end he instead knelt down, kowtowed to this genocidal clique and crawled into the same cage. This proves that the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang gained the advantage over Sihanouk at the Beijing meeting, and also that China holds the advantage over the three reactionary lackey groups.

It is well known that, as in the past, Beijing is the protector and supporter of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan remnants. It has kept these traitors alive, to date. Thus, we can say that the coalition meeting between the reactionary groups in Beijing was sponsored and directly staged by China. Sihanouk's role is merely to come to Beijing and apply his signature. Moreover, we should note that the Beijing authorities intended to convene the three reactionary lackey groups in a tripartite meeting. Why did Beijing rush to call up the meeting when only two of them were present? This is not surprising, for China is afraid it is losing its position as it sees that the votes supporting the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang at the United Nations are rapidly dwindling. For this reason, Beijing has helter-skelter summoned the three reactionary groups to meet in Beijing in order to establish a loose coalition government to be used as a smokescreen to cover up the anti-national and anti-popular image of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan murderers. Therefore, the act staged by these traitors is not surprising to us, for immediately after its stooges had reached the agreement, Beijing did not waste time to hail and applaud them.

According to an AFP dispatch of 22 February, at a banquest in honor of Khieu Samphan in Beijing, Premier Zhao Ziyang praised the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique's efforts to establish this loose coalition government. The bipartite meeting in Beijing is nothing more than a farce staged and applauded by Beijing itself.

Let us take a look at millionaire Son Sann. Will he agree with the scheme of the Beijing authorities? At present, Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan have already been placed in the same cage. Will Son Sann dare to stick his neck into the noose?

Many Western observers in Beijing stressed that the bilateral agreement between Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan is useless. This is true. We can even add that the agreement of these reactionaries, not only bipartite but even tripartite, is useless. The situation in Kampuchea becomes more stable with each passing day. No obstacle can block this development. Therefore, even if they succeed in forming a loose coalition government or even if they receive additional aid from Thailand and other ASEAN countries, their anti-national and anti-popular alliance could in no way reverse the situation in Kampuchea.

SRV CHARGE ON THAI TOXIC CHEMICALS CALLED TRICK

BK280501 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Do Not Fall for the Deceitful and Tricky Maneuvers of the Le Duan Vietnamese Enemy Aggressors"]

[Text] On 21 February the radio of the Hanoi Vietnamese and the Vietnamese aggressor's administration in Kampuchea made an accusation against Thailand, saying that on 11 and 14 February Thai troops used 105-mm artillery pieces to fire chemical shells into Kampuchea's northern area of Phnum Malai in Battambang Province, causing 20 Kampuchean people to suffer. This is a threadbare trick of "theives crying stop thief" used by the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy -- ringleader of the archcriminals whose hands are stained with the blood of millions of Kampuchean people. In fact, it is the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy and its Soviet boss who are being condemned, with clear proof, for committing the crime of using toxic chemical weapons to kill the Kampuchean people. They have turned to blaming Thailand. This is most ridiculous and unbearable.

It was at the criminal hands of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy that more than 2.5 million Kampuchean people died -- killed by the Vietnamese aggressors either by toxic chemical weapons or conventional weapons and famine. There is clear and irrefutable proof of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy's crime of using toxic chemical weapons to kill the Kampuchean people. Tens of thousands of Kampuchean people died instantly while those who were not killed instantly suffer from chronic ailments.

Now that they are facing a total impasse on the military field, the Vietnamese aggressors have intensified the use of toxic chemical weapons to massacre the Kampuchean people in a more cruel and barbarous manner than before. They have systematically used toxic chemical weapons in every area both in the zone temporarily controlled by themselves and in the Democratic Kampuchean zone.

Even in the Kampuchea-Thai border area, which is close to the eyes of the world, the Vietnamese aggressors do not hesitate to use toxic chemical weapons. The Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors have now expanded the use of toxic chemical weapons into the Thai border area. For example, on 19 February a Vietnamese plane sprayed toxic chemicals over five Thai villages in Pong Nam Ron District of Chanthaburi Province. According to preliminary analysis, this chemical is composed of a toxic substance called mycotoxin.

While vigorously intensifying the use of toxic chemical weapons to kill the Kampuchean people and beginning to spread this chemical warfare into Thailand, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy has clamored that Thailand fired toxic chemical shells from artillery to kill the Kampuchean people. This is a dark maneuver launched by the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy in an attempt to conceal its crimes and avoid world condemnation of its use of toxic chemical weapons to kill the Kampuchean and Lao peoples, as well as to create a pretext for its large scale aggression against Thailand.

The Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman has said: Thailand has never sought to obtain toxic chemical ammunition, let alone fire it into Kampuchea. Vietnam has created this story in order to divert world public from concemning its use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea and Laos.

The world is well aware of the tricky nature of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors and that whenever they are in an impasse, they always turn to blaming others.

However, no matter how hard the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors try to turn while into black and black into white, the world will never fall for their tricks. The world is well aware that Vietnam is the ringleader of the bandits who committed aggression against and occupied Kampuchea in a gross defiance of the principles of the UN Charter; that Vietnam is the archcriminal who massacred millions of Kampuchean people through all types of cruel and barbarous methods, including the use of poisonous chemicals and toxic gas; that Vietnam is the one who has provoked and committed aggressive acts against Thailand, and who posed threats to and destroyed security, peace and stability in the Southeast Asian region; and that Vietnam served as the cat's paw of the Soviet international expansionists by sending hundreds of thousands of troops to invade and occupy Kampuchea so that Vietnam and the Soviet Union can further their southward drive according to their strategies of aggression and expansion in Southeast Asia and the Asian-Pacific region.

For this reason, it is necessary for the countries in the Southeast Asian region and all other countries which cherish justice, uphold the UN Charter and want peace in the world to join forces and take timely measures to check the spread of chemical warfare by the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors, especially to pressure and force them to withdraw their troops from Kampuchea totally and unconditionally in accordance with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly.

It is certain that no one will fall for the Vietnamese-Soviet tricks. The tricks of partial withdrawal and negotiations on border problems that they launched are only aimed at legalizing the Vietnamese aggression against Kampuchea and furthering the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea so that Vietnam and the Soviet Union can advance toward implementing their strategies of aggression and expansion in Southeast Asia, Asia and the Pacific.

PRC JOURNALISTS VISIT PHNUM MALAI ZONE

VODK Report

BK280930 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] A Chinese journalists delegation led by (Yang Mu), chief correspondent of XINHUA; (Wang Jaiyun), correspondent of GUANGMING RIBAO; and [name indistinct], a Khmer translator, visited Democratic Kampuchea's Phnum Malai zone.

Upon its arrival in Democratic Kampuchea on 22 February, the friendly delegation was warmly and cordially welcomed by a number of cadres from various ministries and departments. On the afternoon of the same day, Mrs Ieng Thirith, minister of social affairs, received and had a cordial and friendly conversation with the delegation at an office of the Democratic Kampuchean Government.

On the afternoon of 23 February the Chinese journalists delegation met and interviewed military cadres attached to the Phnum Malai and Mak Hoeun battlefields on military problems.

During their stay -- lasting 3 days and 3 nights -- in Democratic Kampuchea, the Chinese correspondents met and interviewed Democratic Kampuchean combatants of both sexes who were victims of the Vietnamese enemy's toxic gas shells in Tuol Chrei, visited the village and interviewed the village headman and people there. From the interviews, the Chinese correspondnets found out that due to the Vietnamese enemy's acts of aggression, expansion, annexation, massacre and extermination against the Kampuchean race, the people in this village were compelled to leave their homes and flee to live in the Phnum Malai area. When the Vietnamese enemy sent a large number of troops to attack the Phnum Malai area, these people fought valiantly to defend their new village.

The Chinese friends also met and conversed with the female combatants of the transport units and male combatants of our Democratic Kampuchean army who were actively and resolutely launching activities against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors in order to bog them down and bury them in the Malai battlefield. When they met our male and female combatants, the guests noted: The Vietnamese are facing difficulties in getting reinforcements to the Kampuchean battlefield. The comrades will certainly win.

The delegation ended its visit to the Malai area and left on the afternoon of 24 February.

CHET COMMENTS ON INFORMAL ASEAN MEETING

BK270950 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Commenting on a planned ASEAN summit in Bangkok, Director General of the Foreign Ministry Information Department Chet Sutcharitkun said the idea was proposed by Thailand and some other ASEAN members, who believe that an informal meeting of ASEAN leaders should be held some time, since only two such meetings have been held -- in 1976 and 1977. ASEAN leaders should meet in order to exchange views on general matters, including the political situation, economic, technical, investment and industrial cooperation. The plan is being worked out by ASEAN members.

The ASEAN foreign ministers' meeting scheduled for June in Singapore, meanwhile, will be held as scheduled.

Concerning the summit, the director general of the Foreign Ministry Information Department said Thailand had proposed Bangkok as the venue. However, the venue of the meeting as well as the time will still have to be discussed and agreed upon by ASEAN members. He noted that in April the Thai Government would be busy welcoming foreign guests invited for the celebration of the Bangkok bicentennial and would not be able to host the ASEAN summit meeting properly. If the ASEAN summit is to be held in Thailand, it would have to take place after April. However, no fixed date has been set for it, he said.

NATION REVIEW NOTES NEW PRO-SRV COMMUNIST PARTY

BK270555 Bangkok NATION REVIEW In English 27 Feb 82 p 10

[From "Weekly Issues" feature: "'Phak Mai' -- New Red Party in the Making"]

[Text] Thai intelligence officials have quoted communist defectors as confirming that the new loosely-organized pro-Vietnamese Thai communist party, known as "Phak Mai" (New Party) has its "head office" at Wattai Airport in Vientiane.

"The defectors have also told us that at least nine houses in a certain area in Vientiane have been used by people involved with the new Thai communist party which has split from the pro-Chinese Communist Party of Thailand (CPT)," the official told the NATION in a recent briefing.

Testimonies from the defectors also charged that Vietnamese soldiers and some "Caucasian-looking" persons, believed to be Russian trainers, were also spotted mingling with the Phak Mai members in Laos, according to the officials. But knowledgeable sources cautioned against overestimating the strength of the new pro-Vietnamese communist grouping. "The estimates of their strength range from 200 to about 1,000 and there is no way just yet to determine the authenticity of the new grouping's strength," Thai intelligence sources added.

The defectors, however, confirmed that some former Vietnamese refugees in Thailand had reportedly served as advisers to "Phak Mai."

In one unit, said the intelligence reports, three former Vietnamese refugees and one Laotian official were serving as advisers. A Laotian minister attached to the Prime Minister's Office was said to be serving as the "coordinator" of the new Thai communist party.

Defectors have also charged that Bunyen Wothong, formerly a lecturer at the National Institute of Development Administration (NIDA) who was elected to the house from the northeastern province of Ubon Ratchathani in 1969 continues to be residing in Laos. Accusations that he may have been made the "figurehead" of Phak Mai remains unconfirmed. Also unconfirmed were the reports that Bunyen was present as an observer at the 26th Soviet Communist Congress in Moscow.

Thai officials monitoring the communist party's movements pointed out that back in 1978, the Vietnamese and Laotians were providing assistance to train a special elite battalion known as "Battalion 121" of the CPT with an aim to "liberate" Nan Province in the north with the specially-trained military unit, which was to comprise top CPT fighters from all regions of the country, serving as the spearhead. But the situation reversed drastically in 1979 when the Chinese-Vietnamese conflict broke into the open and Laos handed over an ultimatum to the CPT elements in Laos to move out in a huff.

"But before the kick-out order was handed over, the Laotian communists recruited some members of Battalion 121 to join Phak Mai. Some Thais in Laos were also approached to join the new pro-Vietnamese grouping. Even the CPT later admitted having lost some of their men to the new party," said another Thai government intelligence source.

Others who joined the new party, willy-nilly, were those who at the time settled down in Laos.

"So far, we can identify 200 names belonging to Phak Mai. But other sources claim 300 to 400 while others have cited the figure of 1,000. The latest figure may be somewhat exaggerated. The average would, we presume, be about 200 to 300 in strength," the government intelligence sources said.

A defector at the middle level in 1980 told government authorities then that Laotian soldiers were providing training to members of Phak Mai in Laos. Some of them were sent for training in Phou Khao Khouai north of Vientiane. It was confirmed that at least seven members of Phak Mai in the defector's group were picked to be trained in Vietnam.

"But they do use Laos as the springboard to infiltrate into Thailand. Loei, being a geographical salient point jutting into Laos, is one of their infiltration points. Other points for their entry include Seka District straddling Phusing Mountain Range of Nong Khai Province and Renu Nakhon of Nakhon Phanom. The fourth point of infiltration for Phak Mai is north of Ubon Ratchathani," the source said.

In the past two years, government authorities said they had arrested five terrorists who admitted to being members of Phak Mai. "They said the New Party adopted the policy of sending their infiltrators back to their original home areas. Their main thrust of propaganda was to attack the CPT, accusing it of having failed in the past to set up liberated areas while in Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea, the communists had done a better job."

Thai military intelligence sources said that Phak Mai members also told local villagers that the CPT had taken a wrong line by being too close to China and that Phak Mai would not turn down assistance from other sources including Vietnam and Laos.

Phak Mai's line was also clearly not against "outside intervention" -- which is part of the Vietnamese practice.

"In 1975-76, Vietnam proposed to the CPT to send in Vietnamese troops to help liberate certain areas in Thailand but with certain conditions, including the possession of seized property and weapons and for the CPT to give the assurance that Vietnamese refugees would be allowed to stay on in Thailand. The CPT turned down the offer," the government intelligence sources added.

The CPT's argument then was that the Vietnamese, once they send in troops to a certain country, would not withdraw without some tough compensation, the sources added.

The government sources said that Phak Mai remains a loosely organized grouping and that the progress in the past two years had not been significant "although one can't discount the possibility of the party getting some big boost should the situation change drasticallly," warned a senior security official.

"From our intelligence reports, the Phak Mai people have managed to establish influence in certain villages on the border once under the CPT's influence in Renu Nakhon District of Nakhon Phanom. We have also got it from good authority that a member of the upper north-eastern committee of the CPT had admitted that in some villages, the CPT and Phak Mai had to divide up their spheres of influence. In some cases, they designate a stream in a jungle as the line of division of influence. In other cases, defectors have reported that CPT's men sent out to neutralize the Phak Mai's influence had even been recruited by the New Party..." the government sources said.

According to these sources, Phak Mai had been trying to extend their influence to the north to Amphoe Muang District of Nakhon Phanom where the CPT had been wielding influence. That new infiltration route had been a target of great blockade by the CPT.

While Phak Mai may be busy building up its influence, government authorities have warned that the CPT may at the same time try to blow Phak Mai's importance and strength out of proportions to use it as a tool to drag the government into a direct confrontation with Vietnam.

"The CPT has tended to exaggerate the existance of Phak Mai which is not all that big and powerful yet. Of course, we can't be complacent either," said the government sources. For one thing, as far as the Thai Government authorities could gather, Phak Mai has yet to establish a politburo. Neither has it managed to form a central committee. Its organization remains small. "But it would always be used as a tool. That's what we have to watch out for..." The sources added.

COMMANDER COMMENTS ON COMMUNIST SUPPRESSION

BK241537 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] Army Commander Gen Prayut Charumani has quoted the prime minister yesterday as saying that the government's success in the suppression of communist terrorists was due to the people's cooperation. The army commander said, however, he believed that the success can be attributed to the fact that we have a good government and a prime minister who is willing to sacrifice himself to fight and win over the communists. Other factors which must be considered are the prime minister's policy and attention to suppression operations which have been carried out with the tactics of using political measures over military ones. Once we win a military victory, we must develop the area for the well-being of the local people.

The army commander cited the ongoing development of Khao Kho and said: We formerly thought that it would be difficult to suppress the communist terrorists in the area. Everybody can see, however, that we have made achievements in road construction and encouraging the people to settle in the area as well as enabling them to be self-reliant.

He said the capture of the communist camp at Khao Chong Chang has proved the effectiveness of such tactics. We are now able to separate the people from the terrorists. In the past, we would send military forces to capture the area and let them stay only for a period of time. The terrorists, however, later returned to the area because of the fertility of the land. After the military operaton this time, however, development projects will be launched to bring about prosperity to the area.

The army commander disclosed that the government forces have captured Camp 508, the big command headquarters of the terrorists in the southern region. The army commander said that the biggest strongholds of the communist terrorists -- Camp 508 and Khao Kho Camp -- have been captured by the government forces who will continue the suppression drive until final victory is achieved.

Asked about the remnants of the communist terrorists, the army commander replied: They have been broken down into small platoons. They are now unable to regroup themselves to form a company-size of combat unit. We have learned that we should fight the guerrillas using their own tactics against them, and the most suitable force for fighting guerrilla warfare is the defense volunteers and ranger soldiers.

The army commander said the terrorists should surrender to government authorities because they are also Thais. So far, seven or eight terrorists have surrendered to government authorities at the Chong Chang areas. The number of those surrendering is expected to increase.

FORCES TO REMAIN IN CAPTURED SURAT THANI CAMPS

[Text] The 4th Army Region will retain its forces in the occupied communist strongholds -- Camp 357 and Camp 508 -- in Surat Thani Province until the plan to develop these areas is completed. The government is planning to embark a multimillion baht project to turn this zone into self-defense villages to fight against the communist insurgents. The government has already begun constructing a 23-km long road leading to Chong Chang pass. Camp 508 is said to be the biggest communist stronghold in the south and Camp 357 was the main satellite camp of Camp 508 in Chong Chang pass. The two camps fell to government forces last week.

MILITARY REPORTS CAMP 508 NOT CAPTURED

[Test] Surat Thani -- In a surprise announcement yesterday, a senior field officer said government forces fighting in a suppression operation against communist strongholds in the Thung Chang Mountain Range had captured three satellite camps, but were still unable to gain full control of Camp 508. Last week, military authorities reported that government troops had captured Camp 508, the strongest communist position in the south.

But yesterday, in a briefing at the forward section headquarters of the fourth Army region, the section's Assistant Chief of Operations Lieutenant Col Atthaphon Champanoi told Deputy Interior Minister Banyat Banthatthan, senior government officials and newsmen that government forces had so far only succeeded in taking positions around the perimeter of the stronghold.

Lieutenant Atthaphon said the area around Camp 508, which serves as the headquarters of communist insurgents in the area, had been heavily planted with landmines and booby traps. He said there were between 300 and 500 guerrillas in the camp and they had strongly resisted the government troops.

However, he said the government would continue the suppression drive until Camp 508 is captured.

Lieutenant-Col Atthaphon said government forces had so far seized satellite Camps 108, 511, and 357. Another satellite post, Camp 79, believed to be an ordnance depot, had not yet been captured.

Since the operation was launched on February 18, government forces have suffered 13 killed and 123 wounded, according to military authorities. A large number of communist guerrillas are believed to have been killed, but so far government troops have found the bodies of only 11 insurgents. A total of 29 insurgents have surrendered to the authorities during the operation.

POST DESCRIBES 'CRIPPLED' KHUN SA FORCES

BK150650 Bangkok POST in English 15 Feb 82 pp 1, 3

[By The Chongkhadikit]

[Text] Khun Sa's drug-trading forces have been decimated with 200 or one tenth of their armed band in Thailand killed, ten tons or 40 million baht worth of their weapons seized and three of their heroin refineries destroyed, according to an official report. Government officials say that with almost all of their sophisticated communications equipment having fallen intact into the hands of Thai authorities, Khun Sa's forces are crippled as far as gathering intelligence on Thai military and police movements and keeping in touch with opium-carrying caravans and other units are concerned. The above was disclosed following an evaluation trip to Ban Hin Taek, Khun Sa's former base near the northern border with Burma.

The claim that 200 men of Khun Sa's Shan United Army (SUA) were "killed in action" during the recent Thai attack was made to top Thai officials making an on-the-spot analysis of the effects of the assault. Thai casualties came to 16 killed, compared to 30 in an October probing action.

This is also the first time that the destruction of three of Khun Sa's heroin refineries was reported. Situated north of Ban Hin Taek, they were bombed from the air.

Meanwhile, Thai intelligence uncovered that Khun Sa had already contacted the Burmese Communist Party [BCP] and been buying opium from this pro-Beijing force, which is expanding control over a large section of Burma stretching from the Chinese border southwards. However, the threat by Khun Sa that he would cooperate with the BCP as a result of the Thai operation was dismissed by knowledgeable Thai officials because of ideological incompatibility. The BCP needed money due to a cut-off in funds from the Chinese Communist Party and the SUA needed the opium during the shortage prior to last year's bumper crop.

Khun Sa's family has fled his Bangkok house at Sukhumvit Soi 71 as well as relatives of his own and his men at Ban Hin Taek, joining him two kilometres across the border in Burma.

Responsible officials discredited speculation on the capability of the SUA to make vengeance strikes. They also pointed out that Khun Sa could not afford to antagonise hill tribes and other villagers by attacking frontier settlements. Officials reported that they had traced the purchase of the highly efficient communications equipment by Khun Sa to the Bangkok representative of a major overseas electronics manufacturer. An investigation is to be conducted.

As a result of the raid on Ban Hin Taek, officials anticipated a change in drug routes to markets abroad. They take into consideration the fact than an uncle of Khun Sa, Khun Saeng, has refineries in Burma just across the border from Mae Hong Son Province in the northwest.

The programme to get the hill tribes in Thailand's northern provinces to voluntarily give up opium cultivation is proceeding with education of the tribes, providing them with rice and helping them with substitute cash crops. Officials closely connected with the prevention and suppression of the narcotics trade are headed by the prime minister himself, General Prem Tinsulanon, and include Deputy Prime Minister Prachuap Suntharangkun, Secretary-General Prasong Sunsiri of the National Security Council, Secretary-General Phao Sarasin of the Office of the Narcotics Control Board, and Director-General Piya Chakkraphak of the Central Intelligence Department -- the "five P's."

Sources denied speculation that the United States had asked Thailand to go after Khun Sa. General Prem himself gave the orders for the attack, according to General Prachuap.

NHAN DAN CITES REAGAN 'MISSTATEMENTS' ON VIETNAM

BK281330 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 28 Feb 82

[From the review of the Hanoi press for 28 February]

[Text] A NHAN DAN story headlined "Sheer Ignorance," appearing on page 4, is of current interest. It says:

If people believed U.S. propaganda and chose a metaphor used by Cao Ba Quat [a noted Vietnamese literary figure of the 19th century], they would say that of the universe's three baskets of knowledge the United States already claims two and the remaining one is distributed among the rest of the world. This is nothing, however, but a fallacy.

One day during the anti-U.S. resistance in the south, we captured an American soldier. He was a white man with a handsome and intelligent face. Yet he was completely illiterate and could not write his own curriculum vitae. The following explanation was given in this regard: This fellow was merely a soldier of the lowest rank and it was inevitable that there were some illiterate people among American GI's.

It has been discovered however, that some U.S. officials are equally ignorant. Not a few U.S. ambassadors have misquoted historical facts and have even mistaken the capital of one country for that of another. This matter does not stop here though. The rash of ignorance has now spread to the highest level of the American state in the personification of Mr Reagan, the current President of the United States.

At a press conference on 18 February, Reagan made the following misstatements on Vietnam: Vietnam was originally two separate countries -- North Vietnam and South Vietnam -- before the French invasion in the 19th century; in 1956 the DRV Government, and not Ngo Dinh Diem, rejected general elections; and President Kennedy ordered the landing of U.S. troops in Vietnam, while, in fact, it was Johnson who did this.

Is Reagan ignorant or did he deliberately distort the truth to suit the U.S. expansionist design? The answer to either question is definitely affirmative. Our comment, Cao Ba Quat style, is that it was unfortunate for the American newsman who had to put up with the stink of ignorance of the 40th President of the United States, who, despite all this, aspires to become another George Washington.

[Text] On 13 February the Council of Ministers issued Decision No 22/HDBT on amendments to the juridical duties of economic arbitrators and on the rectification of the time limit for filing a complaint for settlement.

The decision says that the Council of Ministers assigns to the economic arbitrating agencies at various levels and of all sectors the duty of making judgments according to law on all disputes involving the insurance of merchandise and the settlement of debts in connection with economic contracts between economic units having funds provided by banks.

The decision revises Articles 13 and 22 of a temporary statute which stipulated rules to be followed in making judgments on the enforcement of economic contracts as outlined in Decision No 49-CP, dated 23 February 1962, of the Council of Ministers.

As for those cases involving breaches of economic contracts detected in the course of the implementation of the contacts, the affected party can file a complaint during the implementation of the contracts. The time limit for filing complaints will be 6 months from the expiration date of the contracts.

No economic arbitrating agencies may accept for judgment those cases of breaches of economic contracts that are past the above time limit for filing complaints, except in those cases with a legitimate reason approved by the senior economic arbitrators at the sites of judgment.

Decision No 22-HDBT says that all the previous stipulations at variance with those in this decision are void.

TASKS OF MILITARY STUDENT SELECTION EXPLAINED

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 25 February editorial]

[Text] Following the law concerning military service and VPA officers, the Council of Ministers on 16 February issued a decision on the system of military academies, colleges and advanced schools and tasks concerning the selection of military students for these institutions. This is a new policy of our party and state which stems from the requirement to build a modern and regular army. It is an important decision which defines the nature of various VPA schools in light of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau resolution on educational reform.

In the past the admission of military personnel and officers to various VPA schools was conducted according to the student-recruiting system. This system was developed and it contributed satisfactorily to building a contingent of military officers. However, this system is now no longer suitable. The combat requirements and development of a modern regular army demand that a military officer must not only be of outstanding character and always be loyal to the fatherland and the party revolutionary cause, but he must also have sufficient education and knowledge of military science and related sciences. He must be enthusiastic and responsible throughout his long voluntary service in the army. He must act as the basis for a supervisory organization, educational management and the training of military personnel. He must be able to strengthen his unit and fulfill all his assigned tasks.

From now on, the Ministry of National Defense will select military students each year from among military personnel and youths who are not in the army but want to further their studies in military academies, colleges and advances schools.

The military students selection system is, first of all, aimed at selecting elite military personnel, which include noncommissioned officers, combatants, career soldiers, workers and personnel of national defense establishments who meet the requirements and are willing to make a career of the military service. The system is also aimed at selecting more and more youths who are not in the army, including graduates of general high schools, cadres, workers, civil servants and discharged troops who meet the requirements and are willing to serve in the army on a long-term basis.

Graduates from general schools are not only a great force that helps strenthen the contingent of workers for socialist construction, but are also qualified, strong and competent youths who will be trained as officers for various branches of our modern armed services and forces. The talented men among them will be selected and trained to carry out, inherit and develop the revolutionary and struggling tradition of their brothers and forefatehrs. Every year hundreds of thousands of these youths graduate, instilled with many legitimate ambitions.

The military students selection system has opened up a new opportunity for the youths to choose their fields according to their aspirations, educational background and capability. It will pave the way for the qualitative improvement of military training courses in various general schools and develop the students' general knowledge in preparation for joining the army, as stipulated in the law on military service.

The selection of military students is a new task which requires careful preparation and proper coordination between related sectors and establishments. This will help implement the plan on the selection of military students for the 1982-83 academic year and establish a good pattern for the coming years.

Various echelons of the selection councils must carry out their tasks promptly and in accordance with their duties and functions. They must promptly provide information and explain details of essential rules and regulations and the selection of military students according to the principles and standards of the examinations.

To increase the students' knowledge, various military units must organize refresher courses for combatants and noncommissioned officers who have completed general schools and want to sit for the entrance examinations to further their study in military colleges and schools. Tasks concerning preliminary selection must be satisfactorily carried out in order to create favorable conditions for the entrance examinations.

Various schools, units and mass organizations must comprehensively disseminate the objectives of the selection of military students to military colleges and schools to motivate and encourage citizens to carry their political obligation in both national building and defense.

By educating youths and the people effectively to defend the socialist fatherland in the new stage and by completely implementing various steps,the task of selection of military students for various military colleges and schools during the 1982-83 academic year will surely meet with splendid success.

RADIO, TV COMMISSION HOLDS MEETING IN BAC GIANG

OW281251 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] A VNA report says the Vietnam Radio and Television Commission recently held a conference in Bac Giang city of Ha Bac Province to discuss measures to improve the quality of radio and hired radio transmissions in localities from Nghia Binh northward. The conference was attended by large numbers of representatives of local radio stations.

In 1981 local radio and wired radio transmissions effectively helped in carrying out propaganda about party and state policies among the people and positively contributed to helping motivate the people and publicly praise good models in productive labor, combat readiness and fighting. They also satisfactorily performed tasks of countering the enemy's propaganda. The radio and wired radio stations of localities and grassroots units satisfactorily helped in organizing the local people to listen to radio transmissions from four levels: the central, provincial, district and grassroots level. Many radio stations in Hanoi, Quang Ninh, Ha Bac, Lai Chau and Quang Nam-Danang closely followed up on the implementation of political and production tasks to satisfactorily perform their tasks of keeping the local people informed, motivating them and timely meeting their needs. Many local radio and wired radio stations have done well in organizing radio transmissions.

MALAYSIA'S WARNING ON KHMER ROUGE ENDORSED

BK201321 Hong Kong AFP in English 1111 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 20 Feb (AFP) -- Indonesia today endorsed Malaysia's view that the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) should warn the ousted Khmer Rouge government that it may lose ASEAN support at the United Nations if it still refuses joining a proposed coalition with two other Kampuchean resistance groups.

Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja made the statement to newsmen after meeting President Suharto, who briefed him on his discussions on Kampuchea with Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Datuk Musa Hitam Thursday.

Mr Mokhtar however cautioned against haste in making such a move, noting that ASEAN was continuing efforts to seek a political solution in Cambodia. He also warned ASEAN leaders against making a false step or a wrong statement and said that it would be better for ASEAN not to appear too active in dealing with the problem.

There was the risk of creating the impression that the issue was an ASEAN-Vietnam confrontation, which was certainly not the case, he added. The problem has its source in a conflict between China and Vietnam, he stressed.

On his talks here last week with French presidential adviser Regis Debray, he said he had informed Mr Debray that Indonesia had sent two special emissaries to Hanoi, with no positive Vietnamese response.

Vietnam appeared determined to present ASEAN with a fait accompli (that the current Kampuchean situation is "irreversible", something with which ASEAN could not possibly go along, he noted.

For ASEAN to accept the fait accompli would mean sacrificing one of its members, Thailand, Mr Mokhtar said. He added that he had also told the French envoy that Indonesia would welcome a role for a non-ASEAN country such as France in seeking a Kampuchean settlement. But he added that this should not involve a "mediation," as this would require a basic agreement first.

He also disclosed that he had received a communication from Mr Debray when the latter was in Kuala Lumpur stating his regrets for a press misquotation of Mr Mokhtar's remarks.

A press statement had wrongly quoted Mr Mokhtar as having urged France to play a mediating role in Kampuchea.

KAMPUCHEA'S FUTURE AFTER TALKS ANALYZED

BK280219 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesia 1200 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The recent Kampuchean anti-Vietnamese resistance group meeting in Beijing, which was attended by former Kampuchean head of state Norodom Sihanouk and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan but not by former Prime Minister Son Sann, raises the question of what is going to happen to the anti-Vietnamese group and, more importantly, to Kampuchea in the future.

Son Sann has refused to attend the Beijing meeting, because he is not of the same opinion as the Khmer Rouge. To be more exact, Sann has rejected the idea of maintaining the Khmer Rouge regime which, generally speaking, is responsible for the mass murder of Kampucheans when it was in power from 1975-79.

In their talks in Beijing, Khieu Samphan and Sihanouk agreed on the basic principles for forming a coalition in Kampuchea. Among other things, it was agreed to maintain the official status of Democratic Kampuchea, or the Khmer Rouge administration, which still occupies the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations.

Son Sann's concern about the Khmer Rouge is understandable, especially since the communists justify any means serving their interests. Nevertheless, in the current phase of the struggle, it would only be natural if Son Sann adopted a compromising attitude, because only a compact Kampuchean resistance group can form an effective force for driving the Vietnamese troops out of that country. Besides, Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan also agreed that in any future coalition, each group will maintain its own (?autonomy). Moreover, any important decision would be made by consensus and in line with rules still to be laid down.

Therefore, the agreement reached between Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan has at least partially, if not fully, met the conditions for forming a loose coalition as demanded by Son Sann. Sihanouk also said that an anti-Vietnamese coalition could not exist without Son Sann and that the coalition is waiting for Son Sann to join.

No matter what the outcome will be, the Kampuchean problem is the responsibility of the Kampuchean people themselves to settle. However, the Vietnamese military occupation of the territory has caused more serious problems and worldwide reactions, including that of ASEAN which lies in the same region as Kampuchea. This means that the Kampuchean problem is no longer merely a problem between the groups of forces in Kampuchea or a confrontation between Kampuchea and Vietnam but also reflects big power rivalry in Southeast Asia. If unsolved, the problem will be a great danger, because it could lead to direct involvement of the big powers and eventually to their permanent stay in this region.

It is for this reason that ASEAN countries have done their best to find a political solution to the Kampuchean problem through the United Nations and other diplomatic forums, urging Vietnam to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea and fully entrust to the Kampuchean people the task of settling their problem and determining their own future.

ASEAN countries do not wish to see Southeast Asia become an arena of conflict between the big powers, because such a development not only endangers the independence and integrity but also the stability and development of the countries in this region.

MALAYSIA

SIGNING OF MARITIME TREATY WITH INDONESIA HAILED

BK261309 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 26 Geb 82

[Text] Yesterday Malaysia and Indonesia signed a treaty that will in time to come be recognized as a bold and major step forward in the annals of international relationship. This treaty, which recognizes and accepts on the part of Malaysia the sovereignty of Indonesia of a portion of its surrounding seas of the archipelagic principle could not be really possible but for the links of friendship and cooperation among the two countries that have been strengthened by ASEAN.

Almost every conflict between nations, and particularly neighboring ones, has tended to be over boundaries, especially of the high seas. Indonesia is a nation of many islands and except in the island of Borneo [Kalimantan], there are no land boundaries between Malaysia and Indonesia.

Internationally, the Law of the Sea Conference is still in the process of fashioning an international agreement which should bring order to the whole question of territorial and economic sovereignty -- a source of any conflict and problem.

What Malaysia and Indonesia have done is to work out for themselves an agreement, which should accept the archipelagic principle which had more or less been agreed to by the Law of the Sea Conference, while at the same time acknowledging the traditional rights of one another. It is this willingness to give and take that is the common major feature of Indonesian-Malaysian relationship and to a large extent of intra-ASEAN realtionship. Without this kind of understanding, such a treaty could not have been signed.

There are portions of the territory of Indonesia under this agreement which have been traditionally the fishing grounds of Malaysians. Indonesia has, in this agreement, recognized these traditional rights. It has also recognized the rights of Malaysian shipping to have free passage over the sea. It has still respected Malaysia's rights to lay submarine cables and pipelines.

The archipelagic principle is highly controversial, but by becoming the first nation to accept the recognize the principle, Malaysia has not only given a boost to Indonesia's negotiations with Austrialia, the Philippines and Vietnam, but more significantly, Malaysia and Indnesia have together shown what can be achieved by good will and a political will to reach a mutually beneficial agreement.

OFFICIALS, UN'S AHMAD DISCUSS KAMPUCHEA

BK231233 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Prince Sihanouk says China has in the past few days delivered weapons for 3,000 of his supporters in Kampuchea. The Prince was speaking to newsmen in Beijing before a lunchtime meeting with the Khmer Rouge leader, Mr Khieu Samphan.

Over at the United Nations, a special committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea says it will wait for the result of the current talks between the prince and the Khmer Rouge before reconvening its session. The committee also decided to await the outcome of a mission to Southeast Asia by the UN Secretary General's special representative for humanitarian affairs in Southeast Asia, Mr Rafiuddin Ahmad.

Mr Rafiuddin Ahmad, who is now in Singapore, has held talks with the deputy prime minister, foreign affairs, Mr Rajaratnam, and the foreign minister, Mr Dhanabalan, at city hall this morning. They changed views on the Kampuchean problem. Mr Ahmad said he was sent to find ways to further ASEAN's efforts in implementing the principles of the UN Charter. He added that Singapore, being the current chairman of the ASEAN Standing Committee, had a special responsibility.

Mr Ahmad is on a 9-nation Asian tour to discuss the Kampuchean issue relief operations and other matters. He leaves for Bangkok tomorrow.

STRAITS TIMES NOTES SON SANN'S 'LIMITED CHOICE'

BK261145 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 25 Feb 82 p 16

[Editorial: "Waiting for Son Sann"]

[Text] Apparently by making an offer that Prince Norodom Sihanouk could not refuse, China has skilfully shifted the burden from the Khmer Rouge to Son Sann of being the odd mann out among the three Kampuchean factions trying to form a coalition against the Vietnamese. All eyes are thus on the noncommunist former prime minister, and Mr Son Sann is not helping his cause by staying away from Beijing where Prince Sihanouk and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan are waiting for him to join them for talks.

Mr Son Sann's stand is well-known. Despite intense ASEAN persuasion, he was prepared to be part of only a loose coalition with the Khmer Rouge, fearing that any closer identification with that group would cost him support among Kampucheans who lived through Pol Pot's atrocities. It is an understandable position, but Mr Son Sann needs at least to go through the motion of reminding Mr Samphan of it and, more important, to explain it to the Chinese hosts, who are the Khmer Rouge's only supporters. As it was, the Khmer Rouge had been under pressure to suggest an alternative to ASEAN's proposal of a loose coalition which it rejected recently.

It now appears that the Khmer Rouge has not only stuck to its origianl formulation -- that is, an institutionally-structured coalition -- but has, with Chinese help, persuaded Prince Sihanouk to agree to it. The prince's reward, it turned out, was the supply of light infantry weapons for his 3,000-strong Moulinaka group. Beijing has in the past reportedly given Mr Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front a similar shipment as a token of recognition for its struggle against the Vietnamese. Mr Son Sann, who has claimed that his several thousand fighters would grow to as many as there are guns to arm them, may be able to obtain from China the military aid he has so far failed to get from the West.

It will be a test of his leadership to make a compromise with the Khmer Rouge acceptable to his supporters. He had little choice up to now. With Prince Sihanouk ving taken the plunge, he has even less. The prince has also added to the pressure or left an escape route by making clear that there would be no coalition without Mr Son Sann's participation.

It may seem unfair that Mr Son Sann is put in such a spot, but he should be able to turn that to advantage. From that position he can demand the share of power the coalition that he could not achieve before the Bangkok talks broke up late last year. It he stays out of the current initiative, he risks becoming a nonentity. If he waits until later in the year, pressure will begin to mount against him as preparations start for another battle to keep Democratic Kampuchea's seat at the United Nations. Mr Son Sann needs to make the best of a limited choice now.

MARCOS REJECTS MOVE TO TURN POLICE OVER TO MAYORS

HK010151 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 28 Feb 82

[Excerpts] President Marcos has turned down the move to hand over to mayors the control and supervision of police forces. The president said the proposed move would violate the constitution, which places in the state the power to control and supervise an integrated national police. Also, the president said, he does not want any more repetitions of police forces being used as private armies by local officials. He said records of pre-martial-law days document well this abuse. The president however gave mayors recommendatory powers in the selection of local treasurers and assessors.

The chief executive announced his decisions in a speech before the second national convention of the Municipal Mayors' League.

The president instead invited the mayors to play a vital role in the government's Kilusang Kabuhayan Kaunlaran [KKK] Livelihood Program. The President appointed all the municipal mayors as action officers of the KKK.

Turning to another topic, the chief executive declared that there is now no legal impediment to the setting up of a communist party in the country, but he declared that it must seek political power by parliamentary or democratic means and must not espouse violence. Thus, he said, the communist party of the Philippines may operate legally if it renounces its violent methods. The party had been declared illegal by an antisubversion law enacted by congress in 1957, but the president issued a decree in 1976 that superseded that law. The decree did not single out any communist party, but banned associations of all parties aiming to overthrow the government.

[Begin Marcos recording] Thus there is therefore no legal impediment to the establishment of the communist party, which will seek political power by parliamentary and democratic means. What is outlawed is violence, or the conspiracy to use violence, and of course subversion. Subversion comprises [words indistinct] which seeks the overthrow of government, and I quote, by force, violence, deceit, or other illegal means: Section 2, Cabinet Bill 885. [end Marcos recording]

In yet another move, the president said he had reorganized the Ministry of Local Government and Community Development. The ministry will now be known as the Ministry of Local Government. Its community development functions have been transferred to the Ministry of Human Settlements, under the first lady.

CARDINAL SIN CRITICIZES GOVERNMENT RESTRICTIONS

OW251245 Hong Kong AFP in English 1111 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Manila, 25 Feb (AFP) -- Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin today questioned the government's invocation of national security in restricting the people's "essential freedoms" saying it might have a constitutional but not a moral basis. Speaking before Manila's Rotary Club, the cardinal touched on what he called "the essence of freedom" -- "choosing within the law" -- as applied particularly in the press and government.

The cardinal's speech prompted an immediate reaction from the government which virtually told him to "mind his own business" on the grounds that the subject should best be left to the authorities concerned since it was "not within the purview of other personalities like public officials and preachers of the faith."

"A government official, be he village chairman or chief of police or mayor or president, is free to run the affairs within his jurisdiction in any manner he wants, but he must remain within the law." Cardinal Sin said. "Thus, he should not violate human rights, he should not deprive his constituents of the essential freedoms guaranteed to him by political and moral law," the cardinal added.

"Government leaders, as we all know, have on occasion been known to restrict those freedoms -- in the name of national security," Cardinal Sin said. "Maybe there is a constitutional basis for this restriction but what of the moral basis?" he asked.

He went on to quote a portion of a speech delivered by Pope John Paul II during his visit here last year which held that "even in exceptional situations that may at times arise, one can never justify any violation of the fundamental dignity of the human person or of the basic rights that safeguard this dignity."

The archbishop welcomed reports of the government's plan to restore the writ of habeas corpus in 13 provinces in the southern Philippines describing the measure as "encouraging" although "a lot of work in this direction still has to be done."

The government's claim about the existence of press freedom in the country seemed to be contradicted by the fact that the newspaper columns of a Filipino woman journalist "continue to be censored," he said in an apparent reference to Arlene Babst, author of a thrice-weekly column in the English language THE BULLETIN TODAY.

In answer to the Manila archbishop, Information Minister Gregorio Cendana voiced his appreciation of the concern expressed by the cardinal on the issues he raised, but then went on to reject his views point by point. "On dealing with the situation in the southern Philippines, we believe it is best left to the judgment and competence of the civil and military authorities who are intimate with the developments of that area," he said. "On the issue of alleged censorship of certain opinion columns and other published writings, this is a matter between individual writers and their editors and publishers -- and not within the purview of other personalities like public officials and preachers of the faith," Mr Cendana's statement said.

"Finally, on papal admonition, it would do well for the faithful to learn the holy father's much publicized counsel to one of the world's religious orders of men of the cloth to adhere to propagating the faith and avoid straying into the perilous tasks of politics," Mr Cendana added.

'DEMORALIZATION' OF MNLF SEEN DEPLETING RANKS

HK270105 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Demoralization is depleting the ranks of the Moro National Liberation Front, or MNLF, in Mindanao. This, plus the government's tactics in [word indistinct] the rebels, has brought unprecedented peace to former rebel strongholds like Cebu, Tawi-Tawi, and the two Lanao provinces. At a briefing in Zamboanga City, southern Commander Delfin Castro said the KKK [National Livelihood Program] is doing wonders in forging peace in Mindanao.

[Begin Castro recording] The best thing that ever happened to us here is the KKK program started by the first lady and our president. If you look at the people making trouble here in Mindanao, the MNLF and the NPA [New People's Army], all these forces are engaged in black dealings and would want the people to live in misery. The program of the president to improve the economic life of the common man has stolen the thunder from the rebel movement, and hopefully the KKK program will succeed. [end Castro recording]

POLICE CHIEF DENIES 'SECURED HAMLETS' REPORTS

HK260217 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Police Chief Fidel Ramos says there is no truth to reports that farers of San Vicente, Davao del Norte, have been herded into só-called secured hamlets. Newspapers earlier carried reports that the farmers had been gathered and forced to live in those hamlets, patterned after those in Vietnam. Lieutenant General Ramos said the farmers settled themselves in Barangay centers of their own free will. More on that story from (June Francisco):

[Begin (Francisco) recording] In a report to Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile clarifying reports on the alleged hamletization of San Vicente town, General Ramos said the military only acceded to the popular will and did not in any manner transgress the civil rights of the residents of the said town. General Ramos said the civilian populace were temporarily resettled in the strategic villages or Barangay centers of their choice to fight the harassment, intimidation and extortion tactics of the New People's Army [NPA] terrorists. The residents, he said, requested military authorities in the area for assistance in security against NPA terrorists. The police chief also reported that the (Sanguniyam Bayan) of San Vicente [words indistinct] ordered them to cooperate with the military to counter the activities of the New People's Army. SUZUKI BRIEFS SAKURAUCHI ON STANCE FOR U.S. VISIT

OW030615 Tokyo KYODO in English 0556 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 3 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday instructed Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi to exchange views with U.S. leaders on not only bilateral economic friction but also other matters from a wide viewpoint when Sakurauchi visits the United States late in March. Suzuki gave the instruction when Sakurauchi met him to confer on Japan's basic position for the foreign minister's visit to Washington. Japan's concrete measures to cope with trade demands by the U.S. and other countries have yet to be worked out.

Suzuki told Sakurauchi: "It is important that Japan talk with the U.S. and West European countries as leaders in the world, sharing common values amid the present severe world situation." In briefing reporters on the Suzuki-Sakurauchi meeting, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said: "It is important for Japan to have partnership with allies which share values with our country."

Sakurauchi told reporters he will tell American leaders that Japan will work out measures to open its market wider and seek U.S. understanding. He also said he would exchange views with American leaders on the Polish situation, U.S.-China relations, the situation in Latin America as well as the Asian situation to strengthen Western unity.

COVERAGE OF EC COUNCIL PRESIDENT TINDEMANS' VISIT

Stresses Trade Dialogue

OW021045 Tokyo KYODO in English 1005 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 2 (KYODO) -- Visiting Belgian Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans Tuesday called for greater dialogue among Europe, the United States and Japan to resolve their trade problems. He also called for a relationship between their currencies, to ensure a stable monetary basis for trade.

Tindemans, who is president of the EC Council, told reporters at the Japan National Press Club there is real danger of a return to protectionism and even autarchy in the present world economic recession. He said Europeans were concerned that the reciprocity concept now being discussed in the United States may be "a euphemism for protectionism." However, he said in Europe "we have a feeling that there is an improvement, an opening of the Japanese market."

Tindemans said steps must be taken to overcome Europe's trade imbalance with Japan, but said he did not think the EC would resort to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) in settling the problem. "Why not discuss it instead of organizing a kind of trade war that would be bad for everybody," he said.

In talks with Japanese leaders here, the EC Council president said he discussed ways for Japan and the EC to coordinate their policies on crises like Poland, Afghanistan and the Middle East. "The main objective of my visit is a political one," Tindemans said. "How can we dissociate politics from economics in 1982?"

Ends Visit, Speaks to Press

OW030831 Tokyo KYODO in English 0644 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 3 (KYODO) -- Political cooperation between Japan and the European Community is still "largely dependent on crises," such as the Polish situation or Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, the president of the European Council, Leo Tindemans, said here Wednesday. But he said Japan was gradually increasing its political role in the world and showed interest in closer political cooperation with the EC countries.

"Bit by bit, there will be a new third element in world politics, and it will be Japan," Tindemans said.

Speaking at the Foreign Correspondents' Club at the close of his five-day official visit here, the Belgian foreign minister said the EC countries were eager for closer political cooperation with Japan. He said the 10 EC nations welcomed Japan's readiness to play a role in the North-South dialogue or the Middle East and were willing to cooperate closely with Japan on these issues.

Though close relations exist between the EC and the United States, on one hand, and Japan and the United States, on the other, "the third side of the triangle, namely the Japanese-European relationship, still needs to be reinforced," Tindemans said. He said closer political relations would also help in resolving trade problems between the EC and Japan.

GOVERNMENT, GROUPS COMMENT ON ROK AMNESTY

OW021255 Tokyo KYODO in English 1220 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 2 (KYODO) -- The Japanese Government Tuesday welcomed commutation of the life sentence of South Korean dissident Kim Tae-chung to a 20-year term, while some circles criticized it as a political gesture and called for his outright release. Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa told reporters Tuesday night, "The government welcomes the commutation as a humanitarian move."

Kim had his sentence commuted in an amnesty announced by the South Korean Government Tuesday to mark the first anniversary of President Chon Tu-hwan's inauguration.

In commenting on the commutation, the Japan Socialist Party criticized the move taken by the Chon government on the grounds that it was merely trying to pose as a democratic regime. The opposition party called for Kim's release.

Komeito welcomed the commutation as a first step toward restoration of Kim's freedom and the Democratic Socialist Party also praised the commutation. The United Social Democratic Party described the move as a gesture to boost South Korea's image, and called for Kim's release and a guarantee of freedom for his political activities.

The Japan headquarters of the Korean Congress for Democracy and Unification (Hanmintong), an anti-Seoul group of South Korean residents in Japan fighting for relief for Kim and other political prisoners, said the amnesty was nothing but a fraudulent act to clean up South Korea's image so as to dampen criticism at home and abroad against the 1980 Kwangju massacre and the suppression of human rights. Hanmintong also said the commutation would not bring any change in Kim's critical condition in prison and called for his immediate and unconditional release together with other political prisoners. It also demanded that the Japanese Government stop propping up the Chon regime.

Tokuma Utsunomiya, a member of the House of Councillors and one of Kim's friends, called the commutation good news but described it as a political gesture and looked forward to Kim's release.

PROTEST LODGED ON 2 MAR SR-71 'INFILTRATION'

SK021648 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1555 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors have perpetrated an act of espionage by infiltrating a high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance plane into our territorial airspace. The U.S. imperialist aggressors, who are leading the situation to the highest pitch of strain while kicking up powder-reeking war rackets, committed an act of espionage against the northern half of the republic by infiltrating the high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance plane deep into the air above the Kangyong Peninsula, southwest of South Hwanghae Province of our country, at around 1106 on 2 March. At around 1259 on the same day, they committed a vicious military provocation by again infiltrating the spy plane into the air within the military boundary line east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country.

Because of the U.S. imperialist aggressors' frantic war exercises staged in the area near the military demarcation line, their continuous introduction of numerous aggression forces into South Korea and their espionage acts against the northern half of the republic, a grave situation, which reminds us of the eve of war, is being created in our country.

Our people are watching with heightened vigilance the U.S. imperialist aggressors' new war maneuvers, which have reached a reckless stage.

It is an anachronistic illusion for the U.S. imperialist aggressors to try to gain something by resorting to power. Our people will never pardon those who infringe upon the sovereignty of our country. The U.S. imperialist aggressors should contemplate the grave consequences arising from their criminal maneuvers and should not indiscreetly run wild.

'TEAM SPIRIT' CALLED 'NUCLEAR WAR EXERCISES'

[NODONG SINMUN 3 March commentary: "Dangerous Nuclear War Exercises"]

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors are waging the large-scale war exercise "Team Spirit 1982" against the northern half of the republic by mobilizing the U.S. and puppet army's troops in South Korea and many troops and various kinds of modern weapons of massacre from the U.S. mainland and overseas bases.

According to a foreign news report, it has been revealed that 45 aircraft, including A-4 Skyhawk nuclear attack planes from the U.S. airbase in Iwakuni, Japan, are participating in these war exercises. According to the same news report, it is highly probable that the personnel handling nuclear arms in the aviation unit of the 12th U.S. Marines in this base are participating in the exercises. It cannot be overlooked that the present U.S. ruling circle has mobilized nuclear arms and personnel handling nuclear arms in large-scale war exercises in South Korea while simultaneously undisguisedly building up nuclear arms and clamoring about nuclear wars in limited areas.

This shows that the United States is pursuing a nuclear war policy in the Korean Peninsula and that the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercises are a test war and preliminary war on this assumption. Owing to the U.S. imperialists' reckless military adventurist policy, the danger of war -- nuclear war -- is increasing with each passing day. With an ambition to forever maintain South Korea as their colony and military base and annex Korea, the U.S. imperialists have deployed hundreds of nuclear weapons to South Korea, are increasing a military buildup and are even trying to deploy neutron bombs and medium-range nuclear missiles. It is an ominous military move that, just as new cruise missiles have been deployed with the U.S. 7th Fleet and the number of reconnaissance flights by the SR-71 spy plane against the northern half of the republic has been unprecedentedly increasing, the mobile aircraft carrier fleet, composed of an attack aircraft carrier, missile cruisers and destroyers and attack atomic submarines, has conducted a large-scale military exercise on the East Sea in great secrecy.

Also participating in the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, waged in a frantic way, are F-16 fighter bombers, which can carry nuclear bombs, and strategic aircraft units. The vessels of the U.S. 7th Fleet, which carry nuclear arms, are concentrated at naval ports and on the coastal seas of South Korea.

This clearly shows that the warlike U.S. circles are fiercely making preparations for nuclear war against the Korean people. Owing to the U.S. imperialists' large-scale military buildup and their commotions for war, the situation in our country is being strained and the danger of war breaking out at any time is increasing. If the tense situation is aggravated and war breaks out on the Korean Peninsula, the war could develop into a nuclear war and easily spread outside Korea. This kind of development evokes deep apprehension among our people and the world's people.

It is no secret that while clamoring about limited nuclear war, the United States has deployed 155-mm guns capable of firing nuclear and nonnuclear shells with the U.S. troops in South Korea. This means that the difference of concepts between nuclear and conventional weapons has been narrowed and the possibility of a limited nuclear war is more probable.

It is not by chance that a foreign news report recently said the emergency on the Korean Peninsula may develop into a limited nuclear war. The peaceful settlement of the Korean problem as well as peace in Korea is a key to peace in Asia and the world. This notwithstanding, it is extremely reckless and dangerous for the United States to wield nuclear weapons, which are not in their exclusive possession, and to adhere to a wicked scheme for nuclear war against the Korean people. It is an unpardonable criminal act blocking our people's independent and peaceful reunification cause, threatening peace in Asia and the world and driving mankind to the ravages of nuclear war.

By leaving the sacred fatherland in the aggressors' hands for their nuclear war exercises, following the U.S. imperialists' aggressive policy, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is publicly challenging the nation and the world's people aspiring for peace and peaceful reunification. They are inspiring North-South confrontation by means of the military commotions in league with outside aggressors. Accordingly, it is nonsense for them to babble about talks or reunification. Their babble is a cunning trick aimed at misleading public opinion and covering up their splittist nature and will only reveal their ugly nature as nation-sellers and warmongers.

Our people and the world's progressive people are keenly watching the reckless military commotions of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring. People will never tolerate the U.S. imperialists and their stooges' dangerous ropedancing of nuclear war. The U.S. imperialists should stop the criminal maneuvers to ignite a new war by occupying half of the other country's territory by means of force and should withdraw without delay from South Korea, taking along all aggressive troops. This is a demand of the times. If the U.S. imperialists ignore this just demand and continuously seek a new war provocation, they will be strongly denounced and rejected by our people and the world's people. They cannot escape the judgment of history.

SKO: 437 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0334 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 3 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialists who started the criminal "Team Spirit 1982" military exercises in South Korea on February 13 are moving their aggression forces on a large scale from the U.S. mainland and overseas bases into the exercise areas, according to a report.

VRPR HITS REINSTATEMENT OF S. KOREAN POLITICIANS

SK022236 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Talk from "Echo of Public Sentiment" program]

[Text] It is widely rumored that Kim Chong-pil, Yi Hu-rak and Pak Chong-kyu will soon be reinstated in the political circles. What on earth supports this rumor of the reinstatement of Kim Chong-pil, Yi Hu-rak and Pak Chong-kyu, who were the heads of the political circles during Pak Chong-hui's Yusin regime and the ringleaders of South Korea-Japan collusion? It is said that the reinstatement of these three remnants of the old era is linked to the $6 billion military loan issue involving Japan.

In an effort to beg for the $6 billion military loan from Japan, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is negotiating behind the scenes by mobilizing new pro-Japan officials, including Choe Kyong-nok, South Korean ambassador to Japan; Kong No-myong, chairman of the South Korea-Japan Economic Committee; and (Yi Ki-chu). However, it seems that a secret channel for new South Korea-Japan collusion has not opened. For this reason, Chon Tu-hwan, who traced the lineage of the pro-Japan personnel, made a decision to use Kim Chong-pil, Yi Hu-rak and Pak Chong-kyu to advance South Korea-Japan collusion, which has begun a new phase.

Selected as negotiation brokers to beg for the $6 billion military loan from Japan, Kim Chong-pil, Yi Hu-rak and Pak Chong-kyu, who have been outcasts for their illicit accumulation of wealth, will make their appearance in political circles. Because of this, people say that they are all bastards, linking them to Pak Chong-hui's pro-Japanese treachery.

KIM CHONG-IL CITED AS 'PARAGON OF KIMILSONGIST'

SK010520 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 28 Feb 82

[HYONGMYONG CHONSON 16 February editorial: "Let Us Live Eternally as Kimilsongists"]

[Text] Today our RPR members and patriotic people, who continue marching toward independence, democracy and peaceful reunification, greet the 40th birthday of dear Comrade leader Kim Chong-il, who inherits the revolutionary cause of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation.

Dear Comrade leader Kim Chong-il is the paragon of a Kimilsongist, who is loyal to the great leader and has all the qualities of the great leader: extraordinary ideological and spiritual manners, leadership and virtue.

He has formulated the great leader's revolutionary ideology as Kimilsongism and is inheriting and developing it. He leads the struggle for socialist construction and national reunification toward an upsurge. He is creating the heyday of national culture, including literature. Never before has there been such a time when the great leader's revolutionary cause flourishes.

With the dear comrade leader perfectly inheriting the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary cause, our nation and people are finally able to accomplish the leader's revolutionary cause, the cause of chuche.

This is why all party members and patriotic people, on the occasion of dear Comrade leader Kim Chong-il's birthday, extend the greatest honor and warm congratulations to the great leader and the dear comrade leader, sincerely wishing them good health and longevity, and renew their determination to live now and forever as honorable Kimilsongists.

Living now and forever as honorable Kimilsongists is the most valuable and rewarding life and the due course of the revolution. The Kimilsongist is a title accorded true revolutionaries and a standard in the contemporary era, an era for independence. It is none other than Kimilsongists and their ranks that are called for by the South Korean revolution [hanguk hyongmyong] today and that lead the revolution at the fore.

Our RPR is the unit of Kimilsongists who value nothing as more important than loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who opened the chuche era and leads it to the single road of victory, and dear Comrade leader Kim Chong-il. They are chuche-type revolutionaries who regard Kimilsongism as a conviction and creed and are righteous vanguard fighters who make it a duty to devote themselves to achieving Kimilsongism.

Accordingly, the life of a Kimilsongist is a life of loyalty to the greatest men who are admired by mankind and a life of devoted service to the fatherland, nation and mankind. Living and fighting as a Kimilsongist is the key to personal honor and grace, to the nation's dignity and prosperity and to the happiness of mankind.

The way to drive out foreign aggressors and realize national sovereignty and to overthrow the fascist dictatorship and achieve democratization of society is by raising more Kimilsongists and consolidating their ranks. Herein lies the secret to victory and happiness.

When the ranks of the Kimilsongists march forward, creating a gust of wind in their path, and the banner they are carrying -- the banner of chuche -- flutters high in the sky, the storm of revolution, which thrashes at aggression, nation-selling and fascism, arises and the shackle of suppression and the yoke of subjugation break in pieces and are buried once and for all.

Accordingly, it is the most urgent task facing the South Korean revolution that our RPR members prepare themselves as honorable Kimilsongists. Living and fighting as a Kimilsongist is the demand of the times and the revolution and is the demand of those who aspire independence.

To accomplish and live forever as Kimilsongists, it is important to remain loyal to the great leader and the dear comrade leader. Loyalty to the great leader and the dear comrade leader is the nucleus of the ideological and spiritual manners of Kimilsongists and their lifeline.

When they trust, follow and serve the great leader and the dear comrade leader, maintaining the stand that they know no one but the two of them and cherishing the conviction that there is nothing in the world they cannot do as long as they remain loyal to them, they are true Kimilsongists.

Kimilsongists should thoroughly arm themselves with the chuche view of the revolution, be well versed in the great Kimilsongism and the dear comrade leader's ideological and theoretical policies -- which inherit and develop Kimilsongism -- and regard them as the unique guideline for their thinking, behavior and revolutionary practices.

Kimilsongists should know Kimilsongism only. Nothing but chuche-type blood should flow in their veins. Only Kimilsongism should pervade their ranks. When ideologies different from Kimilsongism are allowed, and when thoughts and acts accommodating such ideologies exist, their qualifications as Kimilsongists cease to exist.

Under any circumstances and conditions, Kimilsongists should put their thoughts and acts only on a chuche ideological and theoretical basis. Only when they do so can they keep their feet on the right path of the revolution and reap good results in the end, unperturbed by imperialism, no matter how menacing it may be, by fascist traitors, however frantic they may be, and by all sorts of pseudo-ideologies and opportunists, no matter how tricky they may be.

Kimilsongists should know how to realize the chuche cause, and they should realize it. The Kimilsongists who do not commit themselves to revolutionary practices are not Kimilsongists. Kimilsongism is not just knowledge and "Kimilsongist" is not the title of a learned man. Kimilsongism is a revolutionary sword which crushes all forms of domination, subjugation, suppression and exploitation and replaces anything worn-out, and Kimilsongists are fighters who chart a new world of independence, holding the sword tight in their hands.

All the Kimilsongists on this land should be resolute in eliminating the foreign aggressors and fascist nation-sellers and in establishing a democratic government for the cause of independence, democracy and reunification.

Because "Kimilsongist" is the title of a most valuable revolutionary, the requirement for becoming one is strict and rigid. Therefore, all party members and revolutionaries should, through constant and energetic studies, implant deeply in their hearts the greatness of the respected and beloved leader and the dear comrade leader, should constantly take the nutriment of Kimilsongism and should eradicate old-fashioned ideologies. At the same time, they should endlessly discipline their ideology and will through various forms of revolutionary organizational life and revolutionary struggle, including party organizational life. Those who are to sustain themselves, fight and live eternally as honorable Kimilsongists should endlessly take revolutionary pabulum and constantly train their ideology and will through revolutionary studies, organizational life and revolutionary struggle.

Let us, all party members, not spare our sweat and blood in the struggle to complete ourselves as Kimilsongists for the true life and revolutionary victory and give all we have to fight for expanding and consolidating our ranks and for our storm-like march.

[NODONG SINMUN 2 March editorial: "Show of our People's Rock-Firm Will To Consolidate the Government of the Republic by Firmly Rallying Around the Leader and the Party"]

[Text] At a historic period when a great turning point is being made in our people's struggle to imbue society with the chuche idea and socialist construction is being accelerated energetically, the elections for the deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] have successfully been conducted. As has been pointed out in the reports by the Central Elections Committee, except those travelling abroad, all the voters registered in the list of voters turned out to vote by 100 percent and 100 percent of the voters cast ballots in favor of the candidates for deputies to the SPA.

All the voters in the nation, including those in the No 181 election district of Tokchon, by upholding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as a deputy to the SPA, showed their firm will to consummate the revolutionary cause by rallying around the party and the government of the republic. The elections for the deputies to the SPA were held at a time when the future of our revolution is further illuminated under the leadership of the party and the government of the republic is being consolidated in accordance with the demand of imbuing society with the chuche idea.

The results of the elections clearly evinced the firm will and belief of our people, who are determined to follow the party's leadership upholding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as a great leader. They also displayed the invincible vitality of the government of the republic. The elections this time served as a very important opportunity to strengthen the political and economic might of the government of the republic under the leadership of the party. This is very significant in the implementation of the revolution by our people.

With the supreme organs of power organized with true representatives of the workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals who are endlessly loyal to the party and leader and who are schooled in the struggle, the people's government is able to smoothly carry out its glorious mission and duty to follow the party's leadership and display its functions and role in every aspect.

The successful holding of the elections gave faith and encouragement to the South Korean revolutionaries and patriotic personages who, regarding the northern half of the republic as a beacon of hope, are struggling for the rights to exist and democratic freedom, never succumbing to the fascist repression of the U.S. imperialists and the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique. It also gave a great national pride and dignity to all the compatriots abroad, including the 700,000 Korean compatriots residing in Japan. Again it was a severe blow to enemies opposing reunification and running wild with maneuvers to provoke a new war.

The elections were a historic event which firmly paved the political and ideological basis enabling the government of the republic to develop and strengthen into a permanent chuche-type revolutionary government and opened a path for the republic, struggling for the consummation of the chuche cause under the leadership of the KWP. The elections vigorously displayed how fervent is our people's respect to and admiration of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and how firm is the political and ideological unity of the people, who are firmly rallied around the party and leader.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our people's political and ideological unity, based on the chuche idea, is indestructible. Thanks to this invincible unity and cohesion of our people, the prosperity of the republic and the final victory of our revolution are firmly guaranteed.

The rock-firm unity and cohesion based on a single idea and will are the key to all the victories achieved by the government of the republic and a foundation of the might and solidity of the state and social system.

For this reason, our people always value this unity and cohesion. Our people's unity and cohesion are another name of unity and cohesion of the people who are firmly rallied around the party Central Committee led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with a single idea and will.

This unity and cohesion are the most solid and vital which nothing can destroy. Thanks to such unity and cohesion centered around the party and leader, the government of our republic enjoys invincible might.

As is shown by the results of the elections, our people now are regarding it as their incomparable joy to carry out the revolution by upholding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the great leader under the leadership of the party. They are following the leader under any circumstances, filling their hearts with loyalty to share weal and woe with the party.

Our people's absolute confidence in and endless admiration for the party and leader emanate from deep historical roots. This absolute confidence in and endless admiration for the party and leader are a noble idea and emotion which stem from the deep understanding of the respected and beloved leader's greatness. At the culmination of national suffering, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, assuming responsibility for the destiny of the nation, explored the Korean revolution by taking the lead. The history of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary struggle of 50 years since then is a brilliant history in which he has created a history of significant events while devoting himself to the sacred cause of the fatherland and people.

Thanks to the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who had established the chuche idea and organized and led our revolution to victory under the banner of the chuche idea, the fatherland and nation experienced a fundamental change in their position. Led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party has been developed and consolidated into an invincibly strong and mighty party, the people's government has been consolidated like a rock and our people have become a dignified and independent people who are enjoying unlimited happiness in the most superior socialist system.

Even today the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is working out a brilliant plan for the permanent prosperity of the republic with unlimited energy and is organizing and leading the struggle for its implementation to victory. The history of the working class' revolutionary struggle has never known such a great leader as the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who, with extraordinary wisdom, outstanding leadership, steel-like will and dexterous organizational skill, has erected such a powerful, independent, self-reliant and self-supporting socialist nation in such a short time after overcoming colonial backwardness and ruin.

Now our people have a clear vision of the future of the government and a happier future for themselves in the energetic leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and are cherishing deep in their hearts a firm belief to uphold always the great leader. As has been clearly proved in the course of the elections, our people's loyalty to uphold and follow the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song forever is clearly displayed in their determination to uphold the party's leadership. The KWP is a great guide which assumes responsibility for the fatherland and people and is leading the people to a brilliant communist future.

Thanks to the positive activities of our party, designed to turn the socialist fatherland, regained and erected by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, into a paradise of the people, our country's socialist system is daily developing and consolidating. The might of the republic is endlessly growing stronger.

Without the leadership of the party, today's happiness enjoyed by our people and the brilliant future of the republic are inconceivable. For this reason, our people regard it as the noblest task for the unlimited prosperity of generations to come and the ultimate consummation of the revolutionary cause to uphold the party's leadership.

Every vote of loyalty cast by all voters in the elections this time clearly shows how pure is the loyalty of the people, who are upholding the party and leader, and how firm is their determination to consummate the revolution under the party's leadership. Thanks to this unwavering belief and will of our people, our party's unity and cohesion are being consolidated, and a boundlessly vast prospect is being opened before the republic. The results of the elections this time also show clearly that all the people have absolute confidence in the government of the republic and that they have an ardent fighting spirit to devote themselves to struggle for the prosperity of the republic.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Today all the people in our country have true and deep confidence in the people's government, trust their fate to the people's government and are fully determined to wage a vigorous struggle to achieve the final victory of the revolution by firmly rallying around the people's government.

The people's support to and confidence in the government are the precious proof showing its might and solidity and preconditions which enable the government to play its role and functions to the full extent. Only the government that has deep roots among the masses and is supported and confided in by the masses can become a true revolutionary government capable of maintaining its revolutionary character under any circumstances, accelerating its revolution and construction energetically.

The government of our republic, with the chuche idea as its firm leading guidance, is a chuche-type revolutionary government which has inherited a glorious revolutionary tradition and a true people's government which assumes it as its mission to serve the working people and defends their interests. Today our people are absolutely supporting the government of the republic and socialist system and are devotedly struggling for its consolidation and development. This stems from their firm conviction acquired through their new life that the revolutionary government provided by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a government struggling to ensure the people their freedom and rights and for the prosperity of the fatherland.

Under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people's government has tenaciously defended the revolutionary gains, overcoming the maneuvers of the enemy of all sorts for aggression and disintegration, and by achieving the two-stage social revolution and historic task of industrialization in so short a period, it has turned our country into a paradise of the people.

Today our republic is at the peak of its prosperity. Our working people are substantially guaranteed all the political freedom and rights in the bosom of the government of the republic, fully blossoming their talent and hope. Living in the bosom of the republic, at no previous time in the long history of the nation have the people enjoyed a more independent and creative life. For this reason, our people are determined with fighting spirit to devote themselves to the struggle to safeguard the government of the republic and the superior socialist system from the encroachment of all sorts of enemies and the unlimited prosperity of the republic.

Our people have participated in the elections with one mind with high political consciousness and zeal. Every one of them cast a vote in favor of the candidates. This is an expression of their confidence in and support of the government of the republic, which has been provided by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and is developing and consolidating under the leadership of our party. It is also a manifestation of the rock-firm will and fervent patriotism of the people who are determined to consummate the socialist and communist cause under the banner of the republic.

Indeed, through the elections this time our revolution's future has been brightened, the future of the nation has firmly been guaranteed and our republic's future has been illuminated.

Since another firm guarantee enabling us to advance socialist construction to victory and consummate the chuche cause has been provided, the elections will shine as especially significant ones in the history of the development of the republic and our national history. By advancing more vigorously spurred by the great successes made in the elections for the SPA deputies, we should achieve the complete victory of socialism and the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland and hasten the final victory of our revolutionary cause.

To hold in high esteem forever the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a firm guarantee for the happiness of our people's offspring and the prosperity of the fatherland. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a great leader of our party and people who is devoting himself to the sacred cause of the fatherland, revolution and people.

As is the case with the government of the republic, which has its glorious past and its present due to the presence of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the brighter future of our fatherland and the final victory of the Korean revolution lie in holding the leader in high esteem forever. Upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a firm and unwavering belief which is etched into the hearts of our people. All the party members and working people, arming themselves with the revolutionary idea of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, should follow only the leader and prepare themselves to become passionate chuche-type communist revolutionaries who devote themselves to achieving the victory of the revolutionary cause pioneered by the leader.

It is the glorious mission and loftiest duty of our people's government to uphold the party's leadership. The leadership of the KWP is the decisive factor for all victories of the republic and firm guarantee for endless properity of the fatherland. Without our party's leadership, the people's government can neither be strengthened and developed nor can socialism and communism be successfully constructed. By always upholding the party's leadership and remaining boundlessly loyal to the party's cause, our people's government should excellently carry out its glorious mission and duty assigned by the nation and the people.

We should firmly establish the party's unitary ideology within the government organizations and thoroughly establish an orderly work system and rock-firm revolutionary discipline to unconditionally fulfill the party's lines and policy, decisions and directives, and unanimously act in accord with the intention of the party center.

An important guarantee for strengthening the republic's political and economic might in every way and for highly demonstrating the superiority of the socialist system is to vigorously accelerate socialist construction under the banner of the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural. The three revolutions constitute a most important revolution of the party and the state of the working class after the socialist system is established and a basic measure for chuche-orientation of the entire society.

Our people's government should register great revolutionary upsurges in all domains of the socialist construction by firmly adhering to the party's line for the three revolutions and by implementing this line continuously and thoroughly. Thus, we should brilliantly accomplish the programmatic tasks put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth KWP Congress and in his new year message. The magnificent revolutionary tasks we are confronted with today demand that we enhance the responsibility and role of the functionaries of the people's government and constantly improve the working method as well as working style.

As required by the working method of the anti-Japanese guerrillas and the Chongsanri method, functionaries of all government organizations should go down to grassroots units and deeply understand the realities, solve the problems in a timely manner and thoroughly implement the party's policy in a political manner to inspire the masses. The deputies to the incumbent SPA, in particular, should safeguard the people's interest and should more faithfully serve them. Thus, they should meet with loyalty the lofty political trust and concern by the party and the leader and accomplish their mission as the people's servants.

Our people's revolutionary cause is just and the republic's future is endlessly bright. The future of the republic, which is struggling to achieve the revolutionary cause under the banner of the chuche idea, will always be illuminated with victory and glory. Let us all expedite the complete victory of socialism and national reunification by further consolidating the government of the republic in firm unity around the party Central Committee headed by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

KUFNCD MARKS 26TH CPSU CONGRESS ANNIVERSARY

BK021242 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Text] The Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council held a grand meeting at the Romdaoh cigarette factory at 1500 on 27 February to mark the first anniversary of the 26th CPSU Congress. The meeting proceeded in a joyous atmosphere.

After Comrade (Peou Meng), chairman of the factory committee, made a speech welcoming the success of the 26th CPSU Congress which attests to the efforts for stability and peace in the world, including Indochina, Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council and chairman of the Kampuchea-Soviet Friendship Association, expressed great elation over the first anniversary of the 26th CPSU Congress which is a day of great victory for the Soviet people as well as the Kampuchean people. The comrade highly appraised the resolution of the congress which included significant benefits to the expansion of the socialist system and the settlement of crises that caused tension in the world in order to advance toward a good, advanced society.

The comrade stressed: All the peace-loving people throughout the world always support and are firmly confident in the plan which is the key to the settlement of the current problems as well as a way to seek peace in the world.

Later on Comrade (Kolonikov), minister advisor of the Soviet Embassy in Kampuchea, spoke on the cruel and barbarous acts of the Beijing expansionists colluding with the U.S. imperialists and the international reactionaries who have caused complex problems and tension in the world. Particularly, they have attempted to undermine the solidarity of the three countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- in order to use them as their military bases. The comrade added: Due to this problem, the congress has set forth a proposal of great significance in the search for stability and peace in Indochina as well as the world as a whole.

The comrade stressed: The Soviet Union will always continue to support the just and legitimate cause of the three peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

NY TIMES 'FAKE' STORY CALLED 'NOT UNUSUAL'

BK030236 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Text] The New York TIMES on 22 February admitted that it had published a fake report on Pol Pot's activities.

In an article a reporter of the newspaper wrote that he had been at a base of the Pol Pot commandos in the southwestern region of Kampuchea. He said that he witnessed a battle during which armored vehicles and helicopters were used, and claimed he saw Pol Pot standing on a nearby hill.

This is the third flagrantly fake report published by the New York TIMES during the past more than 1 year. It is not unusual for the Western press to make up stories, and this fake published by the New York TIMES is only one of many such reports published in Western newspapers. The Western press has made continuing efforts to mislead the public into believing that there are two zones of control and two state powers in Kampuchea, but the facts completely belie the claims of these made-up stories. The negligence of this paper serves as an object lesson to anybody who tells lies about Kampuchea.

At the same time, the armies of our two countries, which share time-honored traditions and a history of jointly fighting against the common enemy, have constantly strengthened and expanded these brilliant traditions by standing shoulder to shoulder and fighting against the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary remnants and the Son Sann-Sihanouk reactionaries backed by the Beijing powerholders and U.S. imperialists, thus inflicting successive defeats on them on the Kampuchean-Thai border battlefields.

On this occasion, I extend best wishes to you, Comrade Minister, and, through you, to all the cadres and combatants of the VPA. May you enjoy good health, great strength and more victories. May the bonds of friendship and combat cooperation between the armies of our two countries grow stronger and firmer with every passing day in the interest of our nations and peoples that of peace and social progress.

Please, comrade, accept our sincere salutations and regards.

KAMPUCHEA URGES STRENGTHENING AGRICULTURE OUTPUT

BK021210 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 1 Mar 82

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Be Determined to Defend and Gather Our Paddy Production Well" -- date not given]

[Text] This year our people are ardently struggling in production with pride and firm confidence in their abilities as masters of the country and in the destiny of the nation. Due to zealous activities on the production battlefield, although drought and floods seriously affected agricultural production, a number of regions such as Battambang, Pursat, Svay Rieng, Prey Veng and Kompong Chhnang Provinces scored praiseworthy achievements -- more than planned -- in rainy season rice production. Among these provinces, Battambang is the most advanced region which planted 252,881 hectares of rainy season rice compared to 227,300 hectares in 1980. Preah Vihear, Ratanakiri and Mondolkiri Provinces achieved satisfactory results as planned. Based on the present results, our people are actively struggling to increase the dry season production and are carefully looking after the rainy season rice.

The harvesting season is arriving and it is an exciting period that our people have joyfully awaited. This shows the results of their hard work performed with sacrifices during the past season. From the experiences of the past harvesting season and in order to defend and gather paddy production, our people must make cautious preparations and take a number of necessary measures as follows:

Insecticides must be used against plant diseases and insects to prevent them from destroying rice. Grass must be pulled out, fertilizer must be used and a sufficient amount of water in ricefields must be assured in order to allow the rice to grow well and produce a high yield. A movement to kill rats must be started. Activities to chase doves, parrots, sparrows, and so on must be performed to prevent them from destroying rice. Harvesting tools must be sufficiently ready such as sickles, harrows, threshing boards, yards for performing threshing, and so on. Small round bamboo baskets, woven baskets and mats must be repaired and more must be produced. Large baskets for rice must be prepared. Granges must be strengthened and repaired to ensure the good storage of rice production. Concurrently, carts and drafting forces must be ready in order to guarantee rapid transportation.

Manpower must be ready and well distributed to harvest the paddy promptly when it is ripe. Avoid letting the paddy ripen and fall down which can result in losses in rice production.

Harvesting must be performed in ricefields away from the villages. During the past year, a number of localities received good results by performing harvesting and threshing in ricefields.

The local state power must closely cooperate with militiamen guerrillas, mass organizations and our people to defend our rice production carefully. We must heighten our vigilance and revolutionary spirit to obstructing all of the enemies' activities which are aimed at undermining our production gathering by clandestinely harvesting or destroying our rice production. Military units posted in all of the regions must increase their vigilance to assure security for our people in order to permit them to harvest their production peacefully. Concurrently, it is necessary to develop the good spirit during the past harvesting season when our revolutionary armed forces as well as the VPA volunteered to cooperate ardently with our people in helping them in their harvesting work, threshing and gathering rice production in time.

Various central and provincial sections, especially the Central Trade Office, must make satisfactory and timely preparations to organize active purchasing networks between the state and the people. Many types of goods must be ready in order to serve our people's demands. The purchase of our people's production must be carried out on a timely basis and based on the principles of encouragement of production and of facilitating our people's lives.

All solidarity groups must not only make efforts to gather and store production well but they have to care about the reasonable distribution and use of these productions.

In our splendid regime we are the owners of production which are the results of our sacrifices. Therefore, everybody should heighten the owner spirit by distributing production in accordance with well-defined regulations in groups by firmly abiding by the spirit of sacrifice, respecting the community's interest, maintaining harmony and sustaining strong solidarity in groups.

Good paddy must be selected for satisfactory seeds in sufficient quantities to ensure the increase of production in the new year concurrently with the bartering of a number of productions with the state in order to buy materials for serving and increasing works in the groups.

Each member who receives his or her share of production should use it reasonably by avoiding spending it without the saving spirit, with wasteful habits, or without carefully thinking about the future such as the selling of paddy and rice for gambling or producing wine.

The local state power must closely cooperate with the entire army and people and be determined to defend and gather paddy production successfully. This is an enthusiastic movement in contributing to the successful implementation of various resolutions of the party congress. This is our high and unanimous determination to achieve our common goal, that is the prosperity of our people and the development of our country.

BANGKOK NATION: TOURISM TO RESUME IN MARCH

BK140237 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 14 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpts] For the first time in seven years, Laos will open its door to tourists and the first package tours to the communist landlocked country are expected to take place next month. The directorate of tourism of Laos has reportedly approached Bangkok-based Diethelm Travel, one of the region's largest travel-tour operators, to act as its agent in arranging group tour packages.

The communist regime in Vietiane has closed the country to tourists since it took power in 1975.

A spokesman of the Laotian Embassy in Bangkok said yesterday that the decision by the Laotian Government to welcome tourists was part of its plan to promote tourism in the country under its five-year economic development plan. He said no tourists had visited Laos since 1975 except for those going to do business or visit relatives.

The "open-door policy" of Laos is seen as a new sign of Vientiane's attempt to attract income from foreign tourists for its economy which has been in bad shape.

The Loatian Government has been strict in screening applications for visits to the country and the permission for the package tours is a change in its policy for the first time.

Loas and France agreed to reopen embassies in their capitals late last year after over years of suspension in diplomatic relations. [sentence as published]

Thailand and Laos have also bolstered their trade relations during the past year following strained relations.

A Thai trade team, to be led by Director General of the Foreign Trade Development Phatchara Itsarasena, is scheduled to visit Vientiane early next month. They are expected to discuss sales of 20 major Thai products to the country which wishes to sell wood and forestry products to Thailand.

Interior Minister Gen Sitthi Chirarot will also lead a delegation to Laos next month for discussion on bilateral issues.

CPT CONGRESS REPORTEDLY DELAYED BY CAMP 508 RAID

BK030255 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 3 Mar 82 p 3

[Text] Surat Thani -- The massive military onslaught against "Camp 508" of the Communist Party of Thailand [CPT] here has disrupted plan for the CPT to hold its fourth congress here, earlier set for April or May, this year, a defector from the insurgent's side told the NATION here yesterday.

This was the first time that definite indications had emerged about the venue of the CPT's much-speculated fourth congresss, the first major gathering of the CPT's leaders in 20 years. The last congress was held in 1961.

A defector from Camp 508, who was in the area under the influence of the CPT until only a few days ago when the fourth army launched a series of all-out strikes against the main and satellite camps, said that on Nov 21, 1980, almost all members of the CPT's Politburo held a meeting at "Camp 508" to discuss the holding of the fourth congress and the disarray caused by the Chinese-Vietnamese conflict as well as the spate of defections from the jungle at the time.

It was significant that Wirat Angkhathawon, acting secretary general of the Politburo (working on behalf of Charoen Wanngam who was then reportedly hospitalized in Beijing), also took part in the meeting -- indicating the significance of the "Camp 508" conference at the time.

Subsequent reports that Charoen later died in Beijing have yet to be confirmed by Thai intelligence sources.

The meeting of the CPT's Politburo members in November 1980 set down corrective measures to resolve internal rifts within the party. A resolution was reportedly arrived at, according to the defector, and a new set of directives was issued to all senior party members.

The defector reported that the conflicts between China and Vietnam had the sudden effects of crippling the CPT's activities in an abrupt manner. "The CPT's activities in the north and northeast were forced by the conflicts to shrink tremendously. Problems involving logistics and feeding the insurgents surfaced. Assistance in various form had to be sought from other front organizations," the defector said.

That was in 1979. One year afterwards, the conflicts expanded and the CPT's top leadership decided that the problems were critical enough to convene the fourth congress to settle the problems once and for all. But resistance from the top leaders was also strong against the calls from the middle-ranking and low-ranking members for changes towards a more "independent" line.

The plan to call the congress was therefore delayed. And when it was decided that "Camp 508" near Chong Chang Pass in Surat Thani would be used as the venue for the gathering, the new fourth army commander, Lt Gen Han Libanon, stormed it with an unprecedented attack.

For the CPT's operations in Surat Thani, the way things were running here was different from other CPT zones in other regions of the country, according to the defector.

"The CPT unit in Surat Thani Province distinguishes itself from other communist operation units in other regions in the sense that it would be self-reliant on the economic front. That's why the top CPT leaders, having suffered setbacks in the north and northwest, had to retreat to the south -- to Camp 508 which was set up as 'special headquarters.'"

The defector claimed that the fourth army had yet to take Camp 508 despite official claims to the contrary.

Recalling the high-level conference of the CPT Politburo at this camp in November, 1980, the defector said that the jungle parley agreed on four major points: closer alliance with students still sympathetic with the CPT; criticism against students who had raised the conflicts within the party in their work at various zones; corrective measures must be meted out to solve another serious problem: some students were still operating outside the direction of the party; and that all zones must put a halt to the drawbacks.

The defector said some members of the CPT Politburo were critical of certain students who had joined them but continued to be undecided on whether to throw themselves all the way with the CPT or not.

It was clear that the top CPT leaders very concerned about the "dissidents" among the students who had taken to the hills.

"The problem became so critical, in fact, that it was reportedly decided in the meeting that year that if any group of students showed signs of increasing dissidence against the party directives, they should be sent back to the cities," the defector said. He added that the meeting also decided in the meeting to assign a member of Politburo, Damri Ruangsutham, to sneak into Bangkok to establish contacts with other work units in preparation for the convening of the fourth congress.

Damri, however, was arrested in Surat Thani before his planned trip to Bangkok.

"That's why Damri had to resort to a new strategy of declaring that the party had assigned him as a representative of the party to talk truce with the party," the defector said.

After Damri was arrested, government intelligence officials began to get wind of the location of "Camp 508." The Fourth Army dispatched about two battalions of troops to the site, sending the CPT leaders scurrying for shelter to nearby camps. Only the provincial-level committee members of the CPT were left behind to map out plans to counter the government assault.

The defector also reported that in November last year, the Surat Thani Provincial Committee of the CPT called a meeting in preparation for the fourth congress. The conference was called the first extraordinary meeting of Surat Thani Provincial Committee meeting. Soon after that, Gen Harn, declaring his "Tai Rom Yen 9" operation was launched, partly aimed at crippling the major base and thwarting the fourth congress.

"Camp 508" is located in rugged, mountainous terrain -- a geographical fact which has hampered the government suppression drive.

The defector said that even if Camp 508 was to be eventually captured, the retreating insurgents would still be able to use their jungle hideouts at Camps 79, 514, 523 (in Surat Thani) or Camp 520 in Krabi as well as Camp 31 in Nakhon Si Thammarat. "In Chumporn area, the CPT has also maintained Camps 21, 22 and 23," the defector said.

The CPT has certainly been seriously affected by the ongoing massive operation launched by the Fourth Army. But the actual extent of the impact would not be known for quite some time to come. One thing is sure, though, the defector said:

"The long-awaited fourth congress of the CPT would have to be postponed again...."

HANOI COMMENTS ON SHANGHAI COMMUNIQUE ANNIVERSARY

BK021140 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] On 28 February, Beijing and Washington unofficially commemorated the 10th signing anniversary of the Shanghai joint statement, 26 February 1972. That was the day on which the Beijing hegemonists renegaded and conspired to oppose the revolution and Vietnam. While pretending to sulk at their new friend, they continue to implement their too notorious two-China policy -- a shame protested by the Chinese people.

The Sino-U.S. friendship, however, has not been impaired at all by such protest. On 26 February, Chai Zemin, the Chinese ambassador to the United States, held a reception for Richard Nixon, a signatory to the statement opening the Sino-U.S. collusion. XINHUA on the same day solemnly and prominently presented Nixon's statements that Sino-U.S. relations could change the world and that without these relations, there would be disasters, and Chai Zemin's words stressing that the Sino-U.S. strategic relations should continue to develop in order to intensify the collusion.

According to AFP on 28 February, on this occasion the U.S. State Department released a communique emphasizing that the identity of views between China and the United States on global as well as regional issues is more important than the differences. The communique asserts that in the past 10 years, Sino-U.S. relations have made great progress and differences are only normal, and that these relations will actually be intensified in the coming years.

According to foreign sources, Washington and Beijing are holding secret talks about the U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. This is a problem about which Beijing pretended to raise a hue and cry while it had actually agreed with Washington. The U.S. State Department further disclosed that U.S. President Reagan recently sent a letter to Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang on the anniversary of the signing of the Shanghai statement. Although the contents of the letter have not been disclosed, observers said that it contained Washington's praises and promises to Beijing over the feasibility of intensifying the strategic Sino-U.S. collusion.

NHAN DAN: DECISION 25-CP WILL IMPROVE EFFICIENCY

[NHAN DAN 2 March editorial: "Continue To Implement Decision No 25-CP Together With the Necessary Amendments and Revisions"]

[Text] Decision No 25-CP of the Council of Ministers on broadening the enterpreneurial right of state-run enterprises in production and business was promulgated more than a year ago. The implementation of this decision has had a direct impact on the status of production and business and on managerial work at economic establishments. Divergent views have been put forth and broadly discussed at conferences held by the various sectors and localities for review and recapitulative purposes as well as by means of the press. To make a correct assessment, however, we must analyze the matter in an objective, realistic and comprehensive manner.

Decision No 25-CP was introduced at a time when our country's economy was experiencing imbalances in many respects and the system of management was undergoing a change. In 1979-80 many types of state-controlled supplies were insufficient for distribution to the enterprises as planned; basic wages were low; prices fluctuated wildly; and the life of the workers was fraught with difficulties. The planning system and the bureaucratic system of subsidy management revealed many shortcomings and had a dampening effect directly on production. Many enterprises had to either suspend production or to operate at only a fraction of their capacity. Some localities, however, actively sought a way out by engaging in extracurricular activities.

Decision No 25-CP was promulgated with the aim to loosen the restrictions hampering production and business activities of enterprises and to help the enterprises uphold their active role in overcoming difficulties, firmly maintaining production and caring for the livelihood of the laboring people. Based on the spirit of the resolution of the party Central Committee's sixth plenum, this decision met the demands of both production establishments and the workers. Many enterprises, thanks to the resourcefulness and the sense of responsibility of their management, have fulfilled their plans as entrusted by the state, enriching the wealth of society and increasing the income of both the state and the laboring people.

Errors and negative phenomena, however, have occurred in the course of implementing this decision. For instance, the principle of ensuring the state's centralized and unified management through planning has not been observed satisfactorily; the use of raw materials, the computation of production costs and the marketing of products have been mixed up among the three parts of the plan to the detriment of the common interest; and the state has failed to control all the products turned out and to collect all the collectible sources of revenue. There have existed irrational differences among the incomes of enterprises belonging to different sectors as well as of production and administrative units. A number of administrative and service units have also made the error of applying the three-part plan and the three interests.

Decision No 25-CP is correct but it reveals many shortcomings and loopholes. Meanwhile, the failure to reorganize production establishments and change the system of management in a timely manner has given further rise to negative phenomena. We point out the positive effects as well as the shortcomings and loopholes of this decision with the determination to continue implementing it together with the necessary amendments and revisions. The guiding thought and the general requirement for such amendments and revisions consist of continuing to broaden the enterpreneurial right and the financial independence of enterprises on the basis of using the plan as the focal point and encouraging the enterprises to make full use of their production capacity and drop their passive role and their dependence on the state.

By harmoniously combining the three interests and ensuring that the state can control the products and increase its budget revenue, enterprises and their workers will have more work and, consequently, earn more income, and the difficulties facing the workers' life will ease. In overcoming by a step the irrational differences among the incomes of enterprises, we must first of all rule out the method of boosting income by relying on price differencces and other dishonest business practices.

The aforementioned guiding thought must be thoroughly understood in revising the methods for formulating plans. The entire plan formulated by the enterprise on the basis of the materials supplied by the state as well as the materials procured by the enterprise at its own initiative is a unified plan that has the effect of an order by the state. In the process of implementing its plan, the enterprise may sign up for supplemental production. Supplemental production is encouraged but it must be strictly consistent with state regulations.

This guiding thought must also be fully understood in resolving specific problems concerning the exploitation of supplies and raw material, the marketing of products, the computation of production costs and the distribution of income.

The new regulations to be adopted by the state will strongly encourage the enterprises to embark on production and business and carry out their operations in an economically-oriented, active and viable manner. On the other hand, they will help in restoring economic order, maintaining production and market discipline and stabilizing prices.

The continued implementation of decision No 25-CP together with the necessary amendments and revisions will accelerate the development of production and further improve our managerial efficiency.

VO CHI CONG ADDRESSES CONFERENCE ON WAGES

BK020707 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 10 Feb 82, pp 2, 4

[Address by Vo Chi Cong, Political Bureau member and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, at a recent conference held by the Council of Ministers to discuss the payment of contract and product-based wages in state-owned production units]

[Text] In the past few days of work, we have heard reports by some sectors, primary production installations and localities on the payment of product-based and contract wages and bonuses in state-owned installations of the agriculture, forestry, maritime products, water conservancy and rubber sectors. This is the first conference to discuss contract wages in state-owned installations of these sectors.

On behalf of the Standing Committee of the Council of Ministers, I thank all the comrades present at this conference, especially those from the primary installations who have made considerable contributions to making this conference a success.

Now I would like to discuss some matters raised at the conference. Implementing various decisions of the Council of Ministers, all ministries, sectors and local authorities have recently provided guidance for the primary state-owned production installations to implement the various forms of paying contract wages and bonuses in many fields of production and business.

Some 50 percent of state-owned primary agricultural production units have applied the system of contract wages with bonuses to different extents. Primary state-owned installations subordinate to the Agriculture Ministry such as companies for poultry, vegetables and fruits, and breeding hogs have broadly applied the contract wages system to the whole sector. Many other units in Vinh Phu, Thanh Hoa, Ha Bac and Nghe Tinh Provinces, and in Ho Chi Minh and Haiphong cities have applied various forms of contract wages payment to many sectors and jobs.

In forestry, approximately 40 percent of the 249 forests have seen the contract system applied at different levels. The joint industrial-forestry companies, afforestation sites and factories of the Forestry Ministry have organized and implemented the contract system more broadly.

All installations of the maritime products sector have implemented the new contract system. Particularly, state-run fishing installations at the central and local levels have all applied the new contract system under several forms.

Nearly all the capital construction and industrial production units of the Water Conservancy Ministry have applied the system of contract wages and bonuses. The Water Conservancy Ministry's construction companies have applied the contract wage system to approximately 50 percent of their work.

Depending on the nature and characteristics of production in each sector and each job, the primary state-owned installations at the central and local echelons of the aforementioned sectors have applied the payment of contract wages and bonuses under several forms. Some units have applied the simple or old contract forms while others have carried out the contract system in a very creative manner, achieving high economic results. Although good forms of contracts have been implemented, they are still not perfect. For example, the Con Dao fishing company has applied a very creative form of contract to achieve very high economic results, but this still has to be improved for even better results.

The new contract system has been implemented well by some primary installations in all sectors. Let me cite here some noteworthy ones:

The Trieu Son rice seeds farm, (Thanh Hoa), which is a unit growing short-term crops, has awarded contracts for finished products to individual workers. It previously suffered some losses but since the new contracts were applied, it has been able to make some profit, reduce production costs, increase productivity and balance the three interests.

The central poultry-raising company has awarded contracts for finished products to individual workers in a comprehensive manner. As a result, the company has fulfilled its tasks adequately although the state has supplied it with only 50 percent of its demand for feed. If the company was not authorized to take initiatives in its business and if it did not apply the contract-wages system, it would lose half of its poultry. Since it applied the new contract system, it no longer suffers losses and has made some profit.

The Dong Nai rubber plantation company which deals in long-term plants, has also awarded contracts for finished products to individual workers. The contracts cover all the tasks of clearing land, preparing soil, building nurseries, planting and tending trees, harvesting -- tapping latex -- and processing. All of the tasks have linked workers to the finished products. As a result, high results and labor productivity have been achieved, ensuring all three interests.

There are also many good models in forestry such as the Con Cuong, (Nghe Tinh) timber exploitation forest, where product contracts have been given to workers. As a result, its production volume has increased by 48 percent as compared to when the contracts were not used; its accumulated state profits have increased by 22 percent, and the income of its workers has doubled.

In fishery, there are two model state fishing companies: The Con Dao and Quang Nam-Danang companies which have each applied a different form of contract wages. The Con Dao fishing company has awarded contracts for finished products to collectives aboard each ship at each sailing. Its annual fishing productivity has reached 32.7 tons per capita. No other company in the country has reached such a level. The Haiphong Joint State Fishing Corporation, though fully equipped and striving its best, has achieved an annual per capita level of only 16 tons. Other units have achieved from 3 to 4 tons or the highest level of 10 tons. State investment in the Haiphong fishing corporation is several times higher than that given to Con Dao fishing company, but the Haiphong corporation has achieved only 7,000 or 8,000 tons per year in production volume, and the highest this year with 10,000 tons, The Con Dao fishing company received 11 million dong of state investment in 1980 and 30 million dong in 1981, but its fish production volume was 22,000 tons. It has delivered 11 million dong to the state. The two remaining state fishing companies are still incurring losses. Con Dao fishing company has applied the first form of contract set out in decision No 16-CP.

The Danang fishing enterprise has applied the second form of contract in decision No 16-CP, which is the contract of norms plus bonuses for each fishing boat at each sailing. I agree with the Marine Products Ministry that the contractual form adopted by the Danang fishing enterprise can be implemented more easily because in the present situation, the general management system is still rife with difficulties. However, its economic results are not as high as those of the Con Dao fishing company.

In the water conservancy sector, there is Water Conservancy Construction Corporation No 6. By contracting out an entire minor project or a part of a major one to each production unit, the corporation succeeded in overfulfilling the annual plan by 10 percent. The amount of profit the corporation turned over to the state represented a sevenfold increase over the previous year, while payments for the depreciation of vehicles and machinery, workers' wages, the production and welfare funds, and so forth, also went up.

These are just a few examples. There are many other good models all of which I cannot cite here because of the time limit. Generally speaking, however, the summary reports of the various ministries, general departments and units which have performed their tasks well have clearly shown that payment of contract and product-based wages and bonuses is an important factor in developing a close relationship among production, management and distribution. Once the interests of each unit and each worker are linked with the final results of their production efforts, and if the responsibility for the material aspect of production is fully upheld aside from moral responsibility, and if the bureaucratic, subsidy-based mode of management is shunned and a management system in which responsibility is closely linked with interests is established, they will help create a new moving force which will heighten the laborer's voluntariness in labor and the management of production and business.

In those units which have satisfactorily applied the contract and product-based wage and bonus system, production has been developed and the amount of products and the value of output have increased. These increases have been substantial in some localities and negligible in others, but, generally speaking, they have come to about 30 percent, and even 50 percent in some cases. In certain units, such as the Con Dao fishing enterprise and the orange production unit of the Tay Hieu state farm in Nghe Tinh Province, output has doubled or even tripled.

In the agricultural sector, the Ministry of Agriculture holds that application of the contract system has helped increase the working time of workers in state-run establishments by about 30 percent over the pre-contract period.

In the forestry sector, labor productivity in those state forestry sites applying the contract-wage system has gone up by 50 percent and even doubled in some places.

In the maritime products sector, the productivity of each worker of the state-run Con Dao fishing enterprise has increased rapidly, from 7-8 tons per year in the past to 15 tons in 1980 and to the current rate of 32.7 tons.

Linking personal income with end-products will help promote economization in production. It will also help promote a rational economical and effective use of manpower, means of production, raw materials and supplies, and lower production costs. Those units which have satisfactorily applied the contract system have shifted from suffering losses to making profits; those which have not yet performed this task well have gradually reduced losses.

All the three interests have been promoted. The state's interests are reflected primarily in the fulfillment and overfulfillment of plan norms. Naturally, the fulfillment of production plans and the delivery of products to the state depend on many conditions, but payment of contract wages and bonuses is an important measure which helps create proper conditions for promoting production and fulfilling plans. Due to the rational application of contract wages, bonuses and three-part production plans, efforts have been stepped up to fulfill production plans, thereby increasing contributions to the enterprise and welfare funds and promoting collective interests. The income of workers laboring under the product contract system has been increased, primarily due to the incentive policy of the state.

To implement the contract system, many units have had to study production and manpower organization, economic and technical norms, and so forth. This has helped promote the strengthening of socialist production relations and the protection of socialist property. Regulations and discipline have been implemented more satisfactorily. Workers have worked and applied technical procedures enthusiastically and voluntarily, thereby further exercising mastery in their enterprises.

The various forms of contract wages, however, have not been applied evenly and forcefully in the state-run establishments of various sectors. Suitable and highly effective forms of contracts have not been clearly defined for each sector and profession. A number of establishments still show confusion in contracting out the cultivation of perennial plants. Some other establishments have not yet paid attention to studying and applying end-product contracts with each laborer and labor group and still place emphasis on contracting out work to collectives and teams. A suitable form of contract has not yet been devised to associate the responsibility of the components which participate indirectly in production units. In some enterprises, the director's income has been lower than that of his workers, despite the fact that the enterprises have overfulfilled their production norms. This is absurd.

In many places, the three interests have not been satisfactorily guaranteed. It is rational to attach importance to the interests of laborers to ensure that they strong enough to work, and to guarantee a high income for industrious and competent laborers. However, there have been cases in which sufficient attention has not been given to the interests of the state and enterprises.

To apply the contract and product-based wage system correctly, there must be effective economic and technical norms. In some places, this task has not been carried out carefully and rationally. Many places have tended to lower norms as a way to increase workers' income.

The study of various government decisions on contract wages and bonuses has been perfunctory, and no effort has been made to promote a thorough understanding of these documents among all echelons, all establishment, and all workers. The responsible sectors and localities have been lax in their leadership and have not penetratingly studied and promptly resolved the many problems faced by production establishments. Many aggregate sectors have not yet seriously implemented the decisions already promulgated by the government and have failed to guide production establishments in implementing them or to resolve problems concerning the management apparatus so as to create conditions for production establishments to carry out production and business activities. For its part, the Council of Ministers Standing Committee, of which I have been put in charge, has not yet provided effective guidance. It has not devoted much time or adequate effort to consolidating and strengthening the management of state-run production establishments.

The shortcomings must be promptly corrected.

Through the payment of contract wages and bonuses in state-run establishments, we can draw the following initial conclusions:

1. In changing the managerial system, a matter of the greatest importance is that all sectors and echelons must thoroughly understand the set policies and reach an identity of views from top to bottom. Hitherto, we have been used to the restricted and bureaucratic business method based on the management of subsidies; this has led to the habit of relying on subsidization from higher echelons. This habit is rooted in our subconsciousness and is very difficult to change. Therefore, any new thing that is somewhat "different" from the wonted method is bound to draw immediate reactions. However, understanding can only come gradually through practice. Only through practical experience can we develop the basis for understanding, accepting and carrying out a new system that meets the requirements of production.

This is a struggle between the new and the old. The bureaucratic system of subsidy management is currently creating a mentality of dependence and a lack of responsibility that obstructs the development of production. A deadlock will set in unless we resolutely do away with this managerial system. The contract system that has just been developed at the grassroots level is in fact a creation of the masses.

The use of product contracts in agricultural cooperatives originated at the grassroots level, and has been welcomed, tested and broadly applied by a number of localities and the central level. Therefore, all establishments, echelons and sectors must boldly and resolutely do away with the bureaucratic system of subsidy management and find a new form of management. If errors occur, resolute efforts must be made to rectify them. In reality, it is not easy to find a new form of management. A lot of work must go into research and attention must be given to innovations developed by the grassroots level while monitoring and promptly developing new factors and remedying shortcomings.

2. The central conference has devoted much time to discussing our shortcomings in economic management. There are many causes, among them overenthusiasm and conservatism. Overenthusiasm is reflected in some aspects, while conservatism is deep-rooted and dominant as reflected most markedly by the bureaucratic system of subsidy management which has led to economic stagnation and prevented production development.

Contracting is a link in the entire system of economic management. To develop production and create new things, we must eliminate the restrictive system of management mentioned above; but in guiding economic activities, it is important that we apply contract wages and correctly resolve the problem concerning interests. In the recent past, localities that satisfactorily applied contract wages and bonuses in various forms have succeeded in breaking through the impasse in many other links, thereby contributing to eliminating the bureaucratic system of subsidy management, promoting economic accounting, developing business and economic efficiency, scoring business profits and streamlining the organization. Therefore, we must vigorously and broadly apply contract and product-based wages while seeking ways to renew the entire managerial system. Steady advance can only be made with integrated actions, but we should not count on uniform progress. Actions must be taken immediately in one link of the operation when it is profitable to do so; and this will favorably influence other links. In carrying out economic activities, economic efficiency is the most important yardstick to evaluate a form of management.

3. Wages are a remuneration for state-run establishment workers and civil servants. Contract wages, however, are a form of management which links the income of each person and each team with both the quantity and quality of the products they turn out. This is a progressive form of wage payment which conforms to the socialist principle of distribution. Obviously, the agricultural, forestry, maritime products, water conservancy and rubber production sectors can fulfill any task. However, suitable forms of contracts must be chosen for each sector, each crop, each animal and each task to ensure results. The more suitable the forms of contract, the better the results will be. The best form of contract is one which links the end-products with laborers or labor groups -- the smaller the better. In the case of making those products which cannot be contracted out to individual laborers, we must apply the form of contracting out volume of work. In so doing, we must hold the laborer responsible for the end-products and give him a bonus for any product he turns out in excess of the work.

Implementation of contracts in various sectors will help bring into play all their potential in manpower, land, forests, sea areas, means of production and material and technical bases. It will also help promote the development of many trades and science and technology, and the saving of raw materials and supplies.

Any establishments which apply the contract system well will be able to develop the mass revolutionary movement. If this system is correctly implemented, it will prompt laborers to work zealously, increase their labor productivity and become the real masters of their units in the economic, political and social fields.

4. If the relationship among the three interests is correctly settled, the masses will be inspired and production will be developed. This is a basic task in the effort to change the management mechanism. This problem, however, must be resolved in a well-coordinated manner.

For example, in tackling the problem of labor management, we must satisfactorily apply three kinds of measures simultaneously: First, the economic measures, by paying attention to laborers' interests on the basis of a correct relationship among the three interests; second, the educational and ideological measures, which should not be belittled; and third, the administrative measures, by practicing broad democracy while maintaining strict discipline. Of course, these three kinds of measures are closely related. In reality, implementation of the policy of linking wages with end-products and responsibility with interests will create proper conditions for each worker and each unit to exercise concrete mastery in production and will help strengthen their sense of responsibility, organization and discipline in production. Such a wage policy, however, can by no means be a substitute for political indoctrination, ideological, managerial and administrative work.

5. As I said earlier, we must respect the independence of the grassroots units and highly value their initiatives. This does not mean that the grassroots units must be allowed to do anything they like. In saying so, I want to point out the weighty responsibility of the upper echelons. Those units which have implemented the contract system well have obviously benefited from effective and timely guidance from the higher levels. The success of the state-run Con Dao and Quang Nam-Danang fishing enterprises is due to the fact that the local party organizations, administration and state organs fully supported them and helped them promptly resolve all relevant problems. For this reason, the various forms of contract wages and bonuses can be satisfactorily applied only if the party and administrative committees at all levels, the responsible sectors and the aggregate sectors (especially, the planning, banking, labor, financial and other sectors) achieve a high identity of views, actively support the grassroots units and cooperate to overcome difficulties.

To fulfill the basic tasks and the strategic objectives set forth by the tenth and eleventh party Central Committee plenums, in 1982 we must make the utmost use of the forces of the entire country and all sectors and echelons. Tremendous progress must be made in agriculture in order to solve the most vital grain and food problems. Accelerating agricultural production to meet the people's needs is a very important task which, I believe, can be fulfilled if all aspects, especially management, are improved.

Along with producing grain and food products, we must accelerate the cultivation of short-term industrial crops and expand the long-term industrial crop area in order to increase the volume of export products and provide sufficient raw materials for industry. We must continue to carry out the policy of making animal husbandry one of the main production sectors.

In forestry, efforts must be made to overcome weaknesses and intensively protect, restore and develop the wealth of the forest. In this way, we will be able to meet adequately the demands of the economy for the volume of lumber of all kinds and to ensure an ecological balance between agriculture and forestry.

In fishery, there must be a major struggle to overcome weak aspects so that fishery will progress in the right direction. Meanwhile, the rearing and catching of marine products must be developed strongly.

State-run agricultural, forestry and fishery production units, including water conservancy and rubber-producing units are state units the duty of which is to accelerate production so as to contribute worthily to attaining the norms for grain, food products, cloth, and consumer and export goods of the country.

To this end, it is necessary to actively reorganize production and manpower and improve management. As of 1982, we must switch vigorously from bureaucratism and the practice of subsidization to the application of profit-and-loss accounting in production and business. From now on, except for special cases where the state makes up for losses, all state-run production units must ensure that their production activities yield profits and achieve high economic efficiency. They must absolutely strive to avoid a loss of capital.

In 1982, we must perfect the various forms of contract wages and bonuses and apply them extensively to all state-run production units of all sectors, to all trades and all categories of workers engaged directly in production and to managerial cadres. All sectors must draw upon experience, find the most effective forms and fulfill set requirements satisfactorily.

The purposes of the payment of contract wages and bonuses as well as of other aspects of management by state-run production units are to develop production, increase economic efficiency and encourage everyone to enthusiastically emulate in increasing labor output. This will result in increasing individual income.

We must hold firm to the principles of decision No 26-CP, which, I think, can be applied to state-run agricultural, forestry, marine products, water conservance and rubber establishments. These principles are:

— To increase labor output and the quantity and quality of products and to economize on materials and raw materials;

— To consolidate socialist production relations, to strengthen their role of planning as the center of the management system, to maintain and strengthen labor discipline and socialist ethics among cadres, workers and civil servants and to exercise the independence right of enterprises and the collective mastership right of workers;

— To ensure the unification of the three interests (that link workers with end products).

State-run agricultural, forestry and fishery production has its own characteristics which differ from those of other production sectors. It is different from industrial production because it bears a distinct biological and zonal character and is dependent on and strongly affected by natural conditions. In view of this, besides holding firm to the law of nature, we must carry out state-run agricultural, forestry and fishery production tasks uniformly, promptly, resourcefully and creatively.

The production materials of state-run establishments are the property of the state, and their economic-technical level is far higher than that of the materials owned by collective production establishments; therefore, state-run establishments are required to bring about higher economic returns, play a leading role and serve as an example and a driving force in all respects. State-run establishments must produce a higher output than collective establishments and achieve higher economic results.

Agriculture, forestry, fishery and water conservancy are organically related; and they can only develop in a steady and vigorous manner with close coordination and strong support from industry.

Proceeding from this, on the basis of firmly grasping the objectives and principles, all sectors can apply various suitable contractual forms with the aim of linking the workers' responsibility with the end product. I would like to make the following suggestions:

For short-term crops, we may improve on and apply the contractual form based on end products developed by the Trieu Son rice seed farm (Thanh Hoa). With this contractual form, the farm has obviously increased its rice output and yield, improved the quality of rice seed and satisfactorily developed its organizational, ideological and other activities. The experiences in contracting gained by the Minh Ha, Song Hau and other state farms in the Mekong Delta are also valuable and must be studied so that conclusions may be drawn for dissemination.

For rubber trees, we should improve upon and apply the form of giving out end-product contracts to laborers developed by the Dong Nai rubber corporation in order to link the responsibility of laborers with the end products of work stages, the capital construction process and the resin-processing stage, harmoniously combine the three interests, increase the workers' income and deliver products in great quantities to the state. The experiences in giving out contracts and bonuses for the cultivation of perennial crops accumulated by the Dong Giao, Tay Hieu, 26 March, 3 February, Moc Chau and Sao Vang state farms are quite diverse and suitable for each type of crop.

In livestock breeding, we must improve upon and apply the contractual form developed by the central poultry corporation. A production chain linked to the end products has been formed throughout the corporation -- from the head office to the various chicken farms. By applying the contract system in conjunction with the three-part production plan, the corporation has increased its production volume, improved its economic efficiency and turned over bigger profits to the state. The experiences in contracting gained by state-run livestock breeding establishments such as the Dong Trieu, Tam Dao, Thanh To and Cong Hoa farms are good and should be reviewed so as to draw the necessary lessons.

For the tractor units, we should improve upon and apply the contractual form developed by the Quynh Phu tractor station (Thai Binh). This tractor station has satisfactorily organized the operation of tractors, linked workers with tractors, linked both workers and tractors with the collectives -- namely, the cooperatives -- and made arrangements to meet the requirements of each specific area. Although the station issues the orders, direct supervision of the tractor teams falls under the responsibility of the cooperative chairman. Since the cooperative is directly in charge of the tractor teams and the workers are familiar with their work areas, each tractor has achieved a standard capacity of 600 hectares (whereas the standard capacity established by the Ministry of Agriculture is 500 hectares) and the consumption of oil has dropped below the norm set by the Ministry of Agriculture.

For the state forests, we may apply the contractual form developed by the Con Cuong state forest (Nghe Tinh). The state forest gives out contracts to production units based on the end products delivered to its warehouse at loading zone 1; each production unit then offers contracts to cells based on the end products of each work stage; and each cell in turn awards contracts to groups of laborers and each piece of machinery working on each lot of forest. As a result of this, the state forest has overfulfilled the plan; its production cost has decreased by 8 percent; its net profit has increased by 11 percent; the capital it has accumulated for the state in the past 2 years has grown by 22 percent; and the average income of its laborers for 1980-81 increased by 1.5 times over 1979.

For marine products, there are at present two contractual forms developed by Con Dao and Quang Nam-Danang as described above. The method that produces better economic results should be popularized. In the present situation, the method developed by Con Dao is obviously more effective.

For capital construction, we should apply the contractual form developed by the Water Conservancy Construction Corporation No 6 of the Ministry of Water Conservancy as described above.

The introduction to these models is simply an initial step. We must study further, analyzing both strong points and shortcomings; make comparisons; and select the best methods that give the highest economic results for application. The weaknesses of the selected methods must be pointed out so that efforts will be made to overcome them. We should not talk one-sidedly.

In carrying out any undertaking, we must prepare the conditions for making steady progress. This also applies to the expansion of the payment of product-based and contract wages and bonuses.

First of all, all sectors, localities and establishments must understand even more thoroughly the various decisions of the government, especially decisions Nos 26-CP, 16-CP and 25-CP. Decision No 25-CP is applicable chiefly to industry, but I think that it can be used as well for the state-run agricultural, forestry and fishery establishments. The payment of contract wages and bonuses must help achieve the objectives and principles mentioned above.

As long as production and business are not yet reorganized and the crop cultivation and livestock breeding patterns remain irrational, we are prevented from carrying out production, business and the system of contracts and bonuses. With a cumbersome and ineffective managerial apparatus and with a deficient and incompetent contingent of professional cadres, we cannot guide contractual work effectively. This situation must be rectified on a first-priority basis.

Planning must be done in such a way as to ensure continuous work for the basic units. Planning must be carried out at the three levels -- central, local (provinces and districts) and basic units -- with the basic units being the most important level. Plan norms should be reduced in number. Only three norms -- concerning output, amounts to be turned over to the state, and wage funds -- should be assigned. The rest should be left to the discretion of the grassroots units. With regard to three-part plans, we must, first of all, see to it that part A, the main part, is fulfilled satisfactorily. All units must carry out parts A and C, that is, the main and secondary parts. Part B should be implemented only when conditions permit; in such cases, we must take care not to allow the implementation of part B to affect the main part.

To achieve good results in applying the contract wage and bonus system, we must actively set uniform and ever better norms. Contracting out work when adequate norms have not yet been set is to establish contracts on the basis of guesswork and in an unscientific manner. If the norms are set too low, the three interests will not be ensured. If they are set too high, contracts will have to be canceled, and this will not help to encourage production.

The rates of compensation and bonuses must be determined in strict accordance with the principles and regulations in force. The bonus system should not be applied alone, but should be used in conjunction with the penalty system. Bonuses and penalties should not be used in an artibrary manner; otherwise, they will foment disunity among cadres, workers and civil servants. Proper conditions must be created for the contract wage and bonus system to be applied uniformly in both the production and management sectors. In the process of implementing the system, we must strictly check the quality of products delivered by production units.

In any kind of work, we must help cadres firmly grasp not only the policies but also the methods related to their work. We should organize the training of cadres really satisfactorily before broadening their work. Cadres can fulfill their tasks only if they have adequate professional skills, conduct themselves in an exemplary manner and are honest.

A problem which many comrades have mentioned is the powers of a state enterprise director. An enterprise director must adhere to the objectives, principles, systems and law of the state. He, however, must be allowed to act on his own initiative. We should not tie his hands; otherwise, he will not be able to do anything at all. Therefore, a director must have powers.

Firstly, he must be empowered to formulate economic plans and programs, to choose and apply the form of contract wages already proven to be the most effective, and to satisfactorily organize the implementation of his enterprise's plans, especially the norms and plans assigned by the state. No one should interfere in a director's performance of these tasks.

Secondly, a director must enjoy financial independence. According to state regulations, a director must study and seek every means to increase his enterprise's capital and must use it in strict accordance with the state law and the enterprise statutes. He must conduct production and business operations in such a way as to ensure the highest economic efficiency and the most profitable and best results.

Thirdly, a director must have the authority to use his work force. He must be empowered to choose his own personnel. In Con Dao, where brother Nam Ve works, boat captains are authorized to pick their workers. A director must have the power to fire those employees who have become degenerate or undisciplined. He must also have the right to choose cadres. Of course, the choice of cadres at some levels necessarily involves the decision of higher echelons and other organs. A director, however, must be empowered to select his cadres. Our present process of selecting, using and dealing with cadres is still too complex and hampered by too many restrictions.

A director must be given adequate power to work to ensure his enterprise's profits. The more profits an enterprise makes, the more its director should be paid, and vice versa. A director who fails to fulfill his responsibilities and his plans and who makes mistakes should be held responsible for his performance and should even be relieved of his post.

Improving the management mechanism in the grassroots units is a task involving various aggregate state organs. Just like the various ministries, these aggregate organs definitely must fully implement all party and state policies. Many grassroots units have suggested that the State Planning Commission should provide guidance in formulating three-part plans; that the state banks should create proper conditions for the payment of wages and bonuses and make an effort to ensure that wages are paid on time; that the Ministry of Labor should decentralize the authority to consider and approve labor norms and provide guidance in implementing the incentive policy under the contract wage system; that the home and foreign trade ministries should help facilitate the sales of products and buy products turned out under parts B and C of production plans at agreed-upon prices.... These organs should study ways to promptly help the grassroots units vigorously expand their production. To fulfill these tasks, they must display a revolutionary spirit and sense of responsibility to the grassroots units. They must also be conversant with managerial work and resolutely opposed to the bureaucratic subsidy-based management system and conservatism.

Implementation of the contract and product-based wage and bonus system has been welcomed by many grassroots units. Nevertheless, this is a novel and complex problem and the instructions issued by the many ministries regarding this system have been vague and impractical. The forms of contract and the bonus and penalty systems differ from one place to another. There must be more concrete and effective guidance. All ministries, sectors, localities and grassroots units should establish a component in charge of contracting. This component must assist the leadership in guiding the implementation of the contract and product-based wages and bonus system, and in following and supervising this work so as to gain experience and to further promote the implementation of the system.

Inspection should be carried out regularly and new factors should be commenced. At the same time, errors and deviations must be rectified. Experiences should be reviewed to create new models for each unit. This is aimed at promoting a really rational implementation of the contract and product-based wage and bonus system, thereby contributing to stimulating the development of production.

GDR NAVY, AIR FORCE OFFICIAL VIEWS SRV RELATIONS

BK021520 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 28 Feb 82

[Statement by Lt Col (Helmut Foerster), naval and air force attache to the GDR Embassy in Vietnam, on the 26th GDR Army Day -- recording begins in German]

[Excerpt] Fine cooperation between the armies of the GDR and the SRV has developed satisfactorily. Specifically, relations between our national defense ministries and organs, such as the military technical institutes of our two armies, have been strengthened.

Many infantry officers from our country have actually assisted the Vietnamese army in building the technical NCO school in Ho Chi Minh City and formulating its teaching and training programs. Meanwhile, many Vietnamese officers have been sent to the GDR for long-term training to become lecturers and instructors in the Vietnamese army.

These relations have culminated in the official friendship visit to Vietnam early this year of the GDR military delegation led by Gen Heinz Hoffmann, member of the SED Central Committee Politburo and minister of national defense of the GDR.

The agreements signed by Gen Hoffmann, on behalf of the chairman of the National Defense Council, and other aid programs will contribute to further strengthening the fine tradition of friendly, fraternal and militant relations between the peoples and armies of our two countries, and will continue to develop these relations, particularly in the military field.

On behalf of the cadres and combatants of the National People's Army, I would like to assure you, comrades and friends, that we will always stand by your side. Workers, peasants and combatants of the SRV and GDR are brothers of the same social class and combat partners who can always confide in each other.

MOKHTAR VIEWS TRADE WITH EAST, WEST EUROPE

BK021302 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0913 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] Jakarta, 2 March (ANTARA) -- The new export policy announced by the government in January has also been discussed by chiefs of Indonesian diplomatic missions in Europe who gathered in Jakarta the last few days for a working conference, Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said Tuesday at the end of the conference.

The conference, which lasted six days, concentrated on three main topics, namely the perceptions of European countries on international problems, political developments in East Europe, particularly Poland, and relations between West and East Europe.

Mokhtar said on the export policy the conference provided much useful information for its implementation by Indonesian missions in the European countries. He said five years ago the Indonesian Government decided to diversify its trade by entering new markets, including the East European countries. But he admitted that the United States and Japan still remained as Indonesia's main trading partners.

Indonesia also exerted efforts to intensify its trade with West and East Europe with fair results, especially with the latter. Less progress was achieved with East Europe due to a number of reasons [as received]. One of the reasons was that there had been no direct transportation to that part of the world.

Exports of goods from East Europe to Indonesia had traditionally been conducted through markets in West Europe.

Concerning events in Poland, Mokhtar said Indonesia's attitude had not changed. "There is no reason to change the Indonesian attitude toward that country," he added.

Indonesia hoped Poland could resolve its own problems without interference from outside.

According to his schedule, Foreign Minister Mokhtar will leave Jakarta Tuesday afternoon for The Hague and later New York. It will be an official visit but no other details of it has been announced.

BORDER COMMITTEE FORMED WITH PAPUA NEW GUINEA

The committee consists of 19 members, including the minister of defense and security commander of the Indonesian Armed Forces, the foreign minister, the Irian Jaya governor and the commander of the 17th Cendrawasih Military Region.

ENRILE DISCUSSES ARMING LOCAL DEFENSE FORCES

HK020107 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Excerpts] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile says the question of arming civilian home defense forces must be settled on a case-to-case basis. Enrile said the choice must be judicious, because the move is open to abuses.

[Begin Enrile recording] The policy on this, I think we have to handle the problem on a case-to-case basis, we cannot allow everybody to be holding guns again. In those areas where we consider criticial, especially where there are inadequate police forces in a municipality, or there are not enough forces of the government around, then maybe we can consider the request and organize what we call integrated home defense forces in those barangays. But in areas for instance like the environs of Manila where the barangays are accessible, or in other similar areas in the country, I think we must be very careful that we do not create another problem that might turn out to be a headache for officials. [end Enrile recording]

ARMY BEGINS TRAINING RURAL POLITICAL OFFICERS

HK030037 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] The military has begun training political officers to offset the propaganda being waged by subversives in the rural areas. The military said the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] has been intensifying its campaign to win sympathizers to its cause. Government officers are being trained to counter the campaign. More on that story from (June Francisco):

[Begin (Francisco) recording] Under the training program of political officers, Enrile said the armed forces political officers will enlighten people on the current efforts of the government to provide social and economic stability. He said the political officers will coordinate closely with local executives. Defense and military officials noted that the dissidents' propaganda campaign appeared to be gaining ground, especially in remote areas of the country. The CPP-NPA propaganda network, authorities observed, had been meticulously prepared by intellectual groups like Horatio "Boy" Morales, a former government technocrat, who defected to the communist party. With the armed forces political officers, Enrile said, the CPP-NPA propaganda offensive will be checked, making the citizenry understand the current efforts of the government to attain social and economic stability. [end (Francisco) recording]

MILITARY LEADER REPORTS IMPROVED LEYTE SITUATION

HK250119 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] The Eastern Command [Eastcom] has broken the back of the New People's Army [NPA] in southern Leyte. Brigadier General Salvador Mison reported this to the armed forces chief and Assemblyman (Nicanor Imiges), the minister of state for national defense. The Eastcom, General Mison said, was able to persuade the mass base of the NPA sector in Leyte to return to the folds of the government. These improved military civilian relations, according to General Mison, will bring about faster development of the southern Leyte rice granary, the fertile agricultural town of Hinundayan. The mass surrender of more than 1,500 dissidents and their sympathizers was the biggest turnout of returnees in the Eastern Command in Region 8.

MITI TO URGE AUTOMAKERS TO LIMIT EXPORTS TO U.S.

OW040857 Tokyo KYODO in English 0838 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 4 (KYODO) -- The Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) will shortly advise Japanese automakers to limit their car exports to the United States in fiscal 1982 to about 1.68 million units, about the same as in fiscal 1981, MITI sources daid Thursday.

Rokusuke Tanaka, former minister of international trade and industry, last May issued a statement expressing Japan's agreement to limit car exports to the U.S. over a period of up to three years to help the ailing American auto industry recover. The statement said Japan would hold down its car exports to the U.S. in the first year ending March 31, 1982 -- equivalent to Japan's fiscal 1981 -- to 1.68 million units. In the second year, the statement said, Japan will limit these exports to 1.68 million units plus 16.5 percent of an increase in the American market.

However, in view of the mounting trade friction with the U.S. and the U.S. auto industry suffering from a long slump, the MITI is advising the automakers to hold down their fiscal 1982 exports to the fiscal 1981 level, the sources said.

The sources said the automakers are also inclining to the MITI view. The sources said the MITI would unofficially notify the U.S. at the U.S.-Japan trade group meeting next Tuesday and Wednesday in Tokyo of Japan's car export control policy.

STEEL INDUSTRY OFFICIALS POSTPONE MOSCOW VISIT

OW040511 Tokyo KYODO in English 0441 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 4 (KYODO) -- Tightened Western economic sanctions against the Soviet Union are making Japanese steelmakers apathetic about sending officials to Moscow for new export deals for now, industry sources said Thursday.

Amid uncertainties about effects of new sanctions imposed recently by Washington and Tokyo, Nippon Steel Corp. and other major Japanese steel companies are putting off a planned dispatch of negotiating officials to Moscow at least until after this month, the sources said. The companies fear negotiations with the Soviets now may antagonize the U.S. and Japanese governments and backfire, they said.

In an apparent reflection of this feeling, the five steel producers are no longer in a mood of opening talks on plate shipments in Moscow early this month as they had planned previously. Instead, the Japanese are now giving serious consideration to a long-overdue dispatch of a group of technical experts to Soviet steel pipe plants to try to see what type of plates are most needed there.

Late last year, the Soviet metals import corporation, Promysrioimport, indicated willingness to increase its purchases of plates from Japan to meet growing demand from domestic pipe plants. The Japanese then responded they would send experts to check on Soviet quality requirements, but no formal Soviet invitation has since been received.

What is also making the Japanese lukewarm toward an early start of talks with the Soviets is a backlog Soviet order they received last October for 400,000 tons of plates, which calls for shipment through next July. The Japanese have ample time to negotiate a new deal before the contract expires.

For the plate shipments, the Japanese provided a supplier's credit. Although such credits are still free from the new Japanese sanctions, the Japanese companies fear their talks with the Soviets on a new financing arrangement may awaken a sleeping lion, the sources said.

PRC TOKYO ENVOY INVITES SAKURUCHI TO CHINA

OW030413 Tokyo KYODO in English 0400 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 3 (KYODO) -- China's new Ambassador to Japan Song Zhiguang asked Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Wednesday to visit China in the autumn together with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, government sources said. Song extended the invitation while on a courtesy call to Sakurauchi, the sources said.

Prime Minister Suzuki is scheduled to visit Beijing in the autumn to attend a ceremony marking the 10th anniversary of Japanese-Chinese rapprochment.

Sakurauchi expressed thanks to the ambassador for China's favorable efforts to help 60 residents of Japanese parentage come to Japan for reunion with their relatives, the sources said. Song, who succeeded Fu Hao as China's envoy to Japan, arrived here on February 24 to assume the Tokyo post.

OFFICIALS PREVIEW VISITS OF EUROPEAN LEADERS

OW040245 Tokyo KYODO in English 0221 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 4 (KYODO) -- Japan plans to promote mutual understanding and relations with Western Europe through dialogues with European leaders who are scheduled to come to Tokyo from later this month through April, Japanese Foreign Ministry sources said Thursday. Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and other government leaders will have intensive talks with Italian President Sandro Pertini, French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff, the sources said.

Major topics will include the Japanese-European trade imbalance currently in Japan's favor, high U.S. interest rates and the so-called "reciprocity" bills in the U.S. Congress, they said. Japan's trade surpluses with the common market, which came to dollar 10.3 billion in 1981, will be a major target of European criticism. The sources denied speculation that Japan and Western Europe may form a joint front against the United States on matters of high interest rates and reciprocity bills.

Prime Minister Suzuki plans to exchange views on world peace and disarmament with Pertini, who is scheduled to arrive on March 9 for a weeklong visit as a state guest, though he has no executive power, the sources said. Pertini will be the first Italian head of state to visit Japan. During his stay, Pertini will visit a monument for atom bomb victims in Hiroshima.

The sources said Japan expects Pertini's visit to help promote understanding between the two countries. In fact, Pertini told Japanese newsmen Monday that he was looking forward to meeting with the general public and young people in Japan.

In early April, West German Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff will visit Japan to attend a Japan-U.S.-Europe trilateral meeting of trade officials. Lambsdorff will meet with Foreign Minister Sakurauchi, the sources said.

From France, President Mitterrand will arrive in Tokyo on April 14 for a five-day visit. French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson will accompany Mitterrand. Prior to Mitterrand's visit, Trade Minister Michel Jobert will come to Japan on March 15 to attend a Japan-France trade meeting here, the sources said.

Suzuki and Mitterrand will exchange views on the international situation chiefly, the sources said. Trade remains an important pending issue between Japan and France, they said. According to Japanese figures, France's trade deficits with Japan trebled in the past three years to dollar 1.04 billion in 1981 from dollar 310 million in 1979.

Earlier this month, Belgian Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans visited Japan and held a series of meetings with Japanese officials. During his stay from February 27 through March 3, Tindemans expressed concern about high U.S. interest rates and reciprocity bills. Tindemans and Japanese officials agreed on further cooperation between Japan and the Common Market, they noted.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AID GRANTED TO EGYPT

OW031015 Tokyo KYODO in English 1002 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 3 (KYODO) -- Japan has decided to extend two kinds of grant aid totaling up to about yen 514 million to Egypt for its economic development and national welfare programs, and its Rift Valley fever control project, the Foreign Ministry reported Wednesday. Notes on the grant aid were exchanged in Cairo Tuesday between representatives of the Japanese and Egyptian Governments.

Of the two kinds of grant, one of yen 13.775 million will be used to buy goods and services for the economic development and national welfare programs. This aid is in accord with a resolution adopted in March 1978 at a meeting of the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) calling for efforts at adjusting the conditions of bilateral Official Development Assistance (ODA) for the many developing countries faced with serious debt repayment problems.

The other grant of up to yen 500 million will be spent on medicine and machinery necessary for a project to stamp out Rift Valley fever, a viral disease carried mainly by the mosquito. The disease, which commonly affects domestic animals such as sheep and cattle, has run loose in Egypt, infecting people as well. It posed a serious health problem in that country in 1977.

SUZUKI AGREES TO OPPOSITION DEMAND ON TAX CUTS

OW040831 Tokyo KYODO in English 0819 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 4 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday reversed his earlier stance and reacted positively to an opposition demand for tax cuts totaling yen 1 trillion in fiscal 1982, opposition leaders said. Suzuki told a meeting with the heads of the five opposition parties: "I must view the opposition demand very seriously."

His government and Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) have so far rejected the tax reduction demand, claiming there are no financial resources to do it. The rejection has stalled Diet business.

The opposition leaders present at the meeting with Suzuki in the Diet included Japan Socialist Party (JSP) Chairman Ichio Asukata and Komeito Chairman Yoshikatsu Takeiri. They agreed to accept the prime minister's reply as virtual withdrawal of refusal of the tax cut demand Wednesday by Susumu Nikaido, LDP secretary general.

Following the meeting with Suzuki the opposition parties agreed to resume negotiations among the secretaries general and other executives of the ruling and opposition par ies.

CONVOCATION OF MAC MEETING 9 MAR PROPOSED

SK040112 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0105 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Our side of the Military Armistice Commission proposed to the enemy side on 4 March that the 411th meeting be convened on 9 March 1982.

U.S. ACTIONS IN JOINT SECURITY AREA PROTESTED

SK040839 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0822 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Kaesong, March 4 (KCNA) -- At a meeting of the security officers of the Military Armistice Commission held at Panmunjom today, our side lodged a strong protest against the U.S. imperialist aggression troops and called them to task for rendering the situation strained by committing more vicious provocations and violations against us in blatant violation of the armistice agreement and established order in the Joint Security Area these days.

According to the statement of the security officer of our side, the U.S. imperialists brought more armed personnel than the designated number into the Joint Security Area almost every day in February and introduced a machinegun into the post of their aggression forces northwest of the Panmunjom conference hall on February 15.

On February 25, the enemy committed four cases of provocations, including one in which a puppet army man at an observation post of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces whipped out his revolver and trained it on a man of our side, threatening him to shoot. Such reckless provocations and violations of the U.S. imperialists totalled 34 cases in 20 odd days from February 9 to March 3.

Sternly protesting against the enemy making the situation strained by committing such provocations and violations without interruption, the security officer of our side strongly demanded the enemy side to take responsible measures to prevent such criminal acts. But the enemy side, far from giving responsible assurances of the implementation of our demand, craftily attempted to shift on to us the blame for the tension created in the Joint Security Area.

After sharply refuting the sophism of the enemy, the security officer of our side stressed that the reckless provocations and violations by the security personnel of the enemy side must be unconditionally brought to an end, if the tension is to be removed from the Joint Security Area and the security and order are to be maintained there.

He sternly warned in conclusion that, in case the U.S. imperialists, defying our repeated demand, deliberately rendered the situation strained, persisting in their provocations and violations in the Joint Security Area against us, they would be held wholly responsible for the possible consequences arising from this.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES U.S. MILITARY POLICY

SK031530 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1503 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 3 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today carries a signed article titled "War Hysterics of Imperialists for Domination." Noting that a very complicated situation has been created in the international arena for the reckless war moves of the U.S. imperialists, the paper says:

The U.S. imperialists are stepping up the reorganisation of the existing armed forces and improvement of their equipment in their bid to intensify war manoeuvres. The United States set a record scale of military budget for fiscal 1983, nearly 45,000 million dollars more than the previous years, something hardly imaginable in peace time. It involves a criminal plan to accelerate in real earnest the production of mass destruction weapons including nuclear weapons and the production of sophisticated equipment.

The U.S. imperialists increased the strength of the "fast deploying forces" capable of engaging in a war in any area of the world to 200,000 men from 100,000, established an operational command system for quick transportation to Arab gulfs [as received] and the Far East area and are increasing the airlifting capacity.

The most sensitive areas at present are the major bases of resources and military strategic vantages. The U.S. imperialists regard South Korea and other Asian and Pacific regions as main objects of the operation for expanding their domination.

They intend to keep hold on South Korea indefinitely and, using it as a stepping-stone, to establish their domination over the Far East and ignite another war of aggression. Owing to the ceaseless arms buildup and war preparations of the U.S. imperialists, South Korea has turned today into a huge powder magazine and a dangerous hotbed of war in the literal sense of the term, and there persists a constant danger of a war breaking out any moment.

The U.S. imperialists scheme to form a new military bloc in the Northeast Asian region by tightening the new military tieup with the Japanese reactionaries and binding the South Korean puppets to it and thereby stepping up the creation of a "U.S.-Japan-South Korea triangular military alliance."

The Middle East is an important object of the imperialists aggression for its geographical position and rich natural resources. The U.S. warmaniacs are aggravating tension in this region by conducting military actions, directly or through their followers, against some small nations and those countries strong in the anti-U.S. stand.

In Latin America the U.S. imperialists resort to military threats, interference in internal affairs and espionage and sabotage against Cuba, Nicaragua and other progressive countries, and in Africa, they zealously instigate the South African racists to perpetrate unceasing military provocations against the neighbouring countries.

The U.S. imperialists, who have 2,500 military bases and establishments all over in the world and mobilise hundreds of thousands of aggression troops in constant military provocations, conflicts, interference in others internal affairs and espionage and intrigues, are the chief disturber of world peace and security and the first target of the struggle of the world progressive people. The reckless war frenzy of the U.S. imperialists will be brought to an ignominious fiasco by the united efforts of the people advocating independence and the peace-loving forces of the world opposed to aggression and war.

CHON ASSASSINATION PLOT CHARGES DENOUNCED

[Text] Pyongyang, March 4 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN March 4 prints a signed commentary titled "Groundless Smear Campaign." The commentary reads in full: These days the South Korean puppets spread all of a sudden a strange rumour that a "case of international assassination plot" against the life of the traitor Chon Tu-hwan occurred in Canada and are frantically launching a vicious anticommunist smear campaign, groundlessly connecting it with us.

When put together, reports circulated by the puppets say that Choe Chung-hwa, an overseas compatriot, in collusion with a few Canadians, plotted to assassinate the traitor Chon Tu-hwan abroad and Choe Chung-hwa received this "directive" during his visit to the DPRK. After rigging up this "case," the puppets published one after another announcement of the "director of the police headquarters," a statement of the "minister of culture and information" and a statement of the "Central Consultative Council for National Unification," doing their level best to make it appear credible to certain degree.

But no one of sober thinking and sound observation will believe the groundless "case." The so-called "case of international assassination plot" brought forward by the puppets is a sheer lie which has no truth at all and a fabrication trumped up in the back room of "Chongwadae."

As for terrorist assassination of an individual person, it has nothing to do with our policy. Originally, we who hold that the popular masses are the master of everything and decide everything do not welcome any terrorist act against an individual person but consistently oppose it. To be frank, it is the South Korean puppets themselves stooping to any infamy in suppressing the popular masses and removing their political adversaries for their power who make a practice of committing terrorist acts and perpetrate such acts without batting even an eyelid. If there is anyone who attempted on the life of Chon Tu-hwan, he must be within the ruling circles of South Korea as was the case with the assassination of the former dictator.

Canadians who were reported to be arrested by the Canadian authorities as "prime movers" in the "case of international assassination plot" said that they had never attempted it and the Canadian police announced that the "case" has nothing to do with us. As for Choe Chung-hwa, he visited the homeland once in 1980, together with more than ten Taekwondo instructors, for an exhibition performance of Taekwondo and has no connection with us.

This is the fact. Therefore, foreign press reports said that we have no connection with the "case" and the South Korean puppets themselves could not produce any proof to convince the world people but are merely repeating guess and supposition. Facts clearly show that the "case of international assassination plot" noisily clamoured about by the puppets is one more preposterous and ridiculous anticommunist burlesque. It is not hard to gather why the South Korean fascists are kicking up dust by investing such a groundless lie.

Today the military fascist rule of the Chon Tu-hwan clique is shaking to its very foundation in South Korea. As is seen in the declaration made public recently by the students of the Seoul University, the pro-U.S., pro-Japanese flunkeyist treacherous policy and brutal fascist terror rule of the military fascists have given rise to ever more vehement indignation and resistance among the South Korean people and students. Now the shout "tear off murderer Chon Tu-hwan!" is ringing out from among the South Korean people and overseas compatriots and the tide of the antidictatorship, anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle is rising with each passing day. All this is striking the puppets with irrepressible uneasiness and fear. The traitor Chon Tu-hwan cannot sleep in peace even in South Korea but is hiding himself like a homeless cat, not knowing when he would be meted out retaliation for the crimes he has committed against the nation.

Further, the policy of our party and the Government of the DPRK for the independent and peaceful reunification and the active support of the world's peace-loving people to the righteous struggle of our people for its realisation are driving the South Korean puppets further to bay. The convocation of a 100-men joint conference proposed recently by the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland as a national salvation step for breaking through the deadlock in the way of reunification is enjoying the warm welcome and active support of the compatriots at home and abroad and arousing deep sympathy in foreign countries. On the contrary, the so-called "proposal" brought forward by the South Korean fascist clique was cold-shouldered in face of our just proposal and the puppets' treacherous and splittist manoeuvres are becoming an object of ever more vehement denunciation and rejection by home and foreign public opinion.

This is why the puppets rigged up a false case to wave off the spearhead of resentment and resistance of the people directed against them by misleading public opinion and tone down the discontent of the people and, at the same time, incite North-South confrontation and step up the "two Koreas" plot. The puppets also cooked up such a shocking case in a foolish attempt to block the great influence of our patriotic stand and just national salvation proposal for reunification upon the compatriots overseas and conceal their splittist and treacherous nature.

The Chon Tu-hwan group is these days viciously trying to prevent the ever growing desire of the compatriots overseas to visit the homeland. The puppets intimidate and blackmail overseas compatriots intending to visit the DPRK and persecute those who have visited the homeland and their families, by issuing "orders," "warning talks" and "instructions" in succession and have gone so far as to hatch a plot to kill overseas personages active for reunification. They threw behind bars without hesitation Hong Song-kil, a Korean resident in the United States, who went to South Korea to see his relatives, on groundless charges of being a "spy" for the mere reason that he had visited the DPRK.

The fabrication of the "case of international assassination plot" by the Chon Tu-hwan group is the last resort aimed to put down the ever-growing desire of the compatriots overseas for alliance with communism and for reunification and their mounting movement against dictatorship and for democracy, prevent them from visiting the DPRK and deliver itself from the miserable position it has landed itself in due to the further isolation from and rejection by the compatriots.

The groundless slander the South Korean puppets are hurling at us, clamouring about the "directives of the North," "offer of funds" and "connection with underground terrorist forces," is a third-rate drama to impair the ever rising international prestige of our republic and becloud our image among the world people. In this way the puppets try to cover up their dirty colours as murderers and fascist terrorists and lay the blame at others' door. But, by this means they can never fool people or shirk the responsibility for their crimes.

The "case of the Chongpan printing house" in 1946 and the cases in which the traitor Pak Chong-hui attempted to inflict baseless crimes upon Kim Tae-chung, other democratic figures and overseas personages all proved to be fabrications to bring their murderous nature into bolder relief. It was widely known to the world that the so-called "August 15 shooting case" in 1974 was a drama produced and performed by the puppets themselves.

Even if the traitor Chon Tu-hwan rigs up one hundred more "cases," he cannot shirk public denunciation and curse for his Kwangju massacre and shuddering bloodbath of fellow countrymen.

No matter how hard the puppet clique may try, the international position of our republic will rise higher and the movement of overseas compatriots for democracy and national reunification will continue to make vigorous advance.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must give up its foolish attempt to maintain its dirty power by suppressing even overseas compatriots, not content with fascist suppression in South Korea, and apologize to the South Korean people and the whole nation for its antinational crimes and step down from "power." The further it goes against the desire of the nation, the earlier its destruction will come.

NODONG SINMUN HITS SOUTH KOREAN AMNESTY MEASURE

SK040436 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0425 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 4 (KCNA) -- The announcement of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique on March 2 that the life imprisonment of Kim Tae-chung shall be "commuted" to "20 years in prison" by an "amnesty" is a vicious criminal act challenging once again the public opinion at home and abroad demanding his acquittal and another tricky political drama for evading the heavy pressure from within and without and burying the Kim Tae-chung issue in oblivion, declares NODONG SINMUN today.

A signed commentary of the paper captioned "Hypocritical Amnesty for Flouting Public Opinion" says: Though the Chon Tu-hwan group proclaimed what it calls "amnesty" for "commuting" the penalties and sanctions imposed on persons now in prison or subjected to persecution under fascist laws, it refuses to release the political prisoners thrown behind bars under the notorious "national security law" and keeps in custody democrats and patriots who should have been released, under the pretext that they do not show "signs of repentance."

Referring to the announcement of the Chon Tu-hwan group on the "commutation" of the life imprisonment of Kim Tae-chung by the "amnesty," the commentary says: Kim Tae-chung, by nature, is not a criminal to be made an object of such buffoonery as "commutation" or someone's "mercy." The Chon Tu-hwan group committed the brigandish outrage of penalising Kim Tae-chung, a patriotic-minded democrat, on the charge of "plot of rebellion" by abusing power and is now framing intrigues to destroy him in prison, raising quite a noise over a hypocritical "commutation," thus standing naked once again as a human-butcher bereft of the last shred of reason and conscience.

The "amnesty" advertised by the Chon Tu-hwan group is, after all, a product of a political plot to bridge over the ever deepening crisis of the colonial fascist rule in South Korea and put fresh muscles into the military fascist dictatorship: It is nothing but a clumsy farce for whitewashing its suppression of human rights and concealing its hideous nature as the truculent murderer and fascist tyrant.

It must be noted that this drama was staged by traitor Chon Tu-hwan on the "first anniversary of his inauguration." It was a cheap claptrap tactics for raising the price of his dirty body, delivering himself out of isolation by winning over the popular sentiments and staying in power.

The illegal penalty on Kim Tae-chung must be unconditionally revoked and he be immediately rescued from prison where his life is at stake. The Chon Tu-hwan group must revoke the illegal penalties imposed on Kim Tae-chung and other democrats and patriots and promptly acquit them and step down from power as demanded by the people.

Even though the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique keep Kim Tae-chung and other democrats in prison, they cannot dampen the desire of the popular masses for democracy and reunification; this will only rouse a fiercer struggle against fascism and for democracy to hasten their own doom.

[Text] Today we are greatly moved by the warm welcome and sincere hospitality you have accorded us. Your sincerity and friendliness are in evidence.

The peoples of Korea and Zimbabwe have maintained firm relations with each other on the road of struggle to achieve the lofty ideas of independence, sovereignty and nonalignment. Mugabe. We are satisfied that the friendly relations between the two countries have developed with each passing day.

Resolutely smashing the subversive maneuvers of enemies at home and abroad, the Zimbabwean people are vigorously struggling to develop a self-reliant national economy and national culture and build a progressive society in the aftermath of war. The Korean people sincerely rejoice over the successes the fraternal Zimbabwean people have attained in the struggle for the independent development of the country and the building of a new life.

The Korean people sincerely wish the fraternal Zimbabwean people great success in the struggle to firmly defend the revolutionary gains, building a prosperous and powerful Zimbabwe and achieving the complete liberation of Africa, firmly uniting around Comrade Prime Minister Robert G. Mugabe.

A new proposal to reunify the fatherland by founding a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], leaving the ideologies and systems in the North and South as they are, which was set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth KWP Congress, is fully supported and ardently welcomed by the world's people and displays its great vitality with each passing day. The Korean people's struggle for the reunification of the fatherland is as arduous as ever. With the positive support of the world's peace-loving peoples, including the Zimbabwean people, the Korean people will certainly achieve the historic cause of national reunification by founding the DCRK.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I extend deep thanks to the esteemed Comrade Prime Minister Robert G. POLICE INVESTIGATE SUSPECT IN ASSASSINATION PLOT

SK040322 Seoul YONHAP in English 0314 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 4 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean police is investigating a Korean-born Canadian citizen, who is one of the suspects of the aborted attempt on the life of President Chon Tu-hwan, An Ung-mo, director of the National Police Headquarters announced Thursday.

The suspect was identified as Mun Chi-sik, 34, an owner of a grocery store in Toronto. He was arrested here last September. The exact charges against Mun were not made known.

An said that a probe was continuing, in collaboration with Canadian police and other foreign agencies concerned, and that a detailed announcement would be made as soon as the investigation is completed. He said the probe was expected to make great progress when Canadian investigators arrive here this month to join Korean police.

Mun, a college dropout in Seoul, is said to have set off an explosion in a restaurant in Toronto in January 1980 to get insurance money.

MINISTER VIEWS ASSASSINATION PLOT, OTHER ISSUES

SK040136 Seoul YONHAP in English 0126 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 4 (YONHAP) -- Foreign Minister No Sin-yong said Wednesday that the South Korean Government has been cooperating closely with the Canadian authorities since the start last September of the latter's investigation of the plot to assassinate Korean President Chon Tu-hwan.

Appearing before the National Assembly plenary session, No disclosed that the Korean Government had been notified on Feb. 24 of the outcome of the Canadian police investigation, and that the government conveyed its thanks through the charge d'affaires of the Canadian Embassy in Seoul on Feb. 27, while expressing the hope for a thorough roundup of the suspects who are still at large.

To that end, No said, his ministry has instructed the Korean Embassy in Ottawa and the Consulate General in Toronto to maintain close cooperation with the Canadian authorities, and directed the other Korean diplomatic missions abroad to reinforce their vigilance against possible North Korean attempts to engage South Korean expatriates to carry out their plots. He said South Korea would join pertinent international treaties to provide against similar cases.

On South Korea's continuing negotiations with Japan for Japanese Government loans, the minister said that Japan and South Korea had agreed to hold a foreign ministers' meeting as soon as the circumstances on both sides permit, and that the Seoul government would seek a satisfactory solution to the outstanding issue at the ministers' meeting.

On French-South Korean relations, No, who recently made an official visit to Paris, said that the Socialist government in France has made it clear that it would seek expanded cooperation with South Korea, and that there is "no change whatsoever" in Paris's Korea policy. He added, however, that "no dates have been set at this stage for the Korean head of state's trip abroad."

In a separate testimony before the assembly, Unification Minister Son Chae-sik declared that South Korea would be fully prepared to cope with whatever response North Korea may have to Seoul's proposals for an inter-Korean dialogue, and added, "even if North Korea accepts some of our 20 inter-Korean pilot projects on a selective basis, we would be willing to talk with them anytime and anywhere." Son was referring to 20 projects, including the construction of a road linking the capitals of the two Koreas, which he proposed on Feb. 1 as a means of "easing tension" on the Korean Peninsula.

MAJOR PARTIES WELCOME GOVERNMENT'S AMNESTY

[Text] Major political parties, welcoming the government's amnesty, yesterday commented that it will serve as an occasion to further enhance the atmosphere of national reconciliation.

Rep. Pong Tu-wan, spokesman for the ruling Democratic Justice Party [DJP], said the government's action is meaningful in that it will provide those who "committed errors in the old era" with an opportunity to participate in the national development projects. He said the government's step this time will contribute positively to political stability and national development.

Rep. Kim Chin-pae, spokesman for the first minority Democratic Korea Party [DKP], said his party welcomes the government's amnesty as it is "a proper measure to do away with political feuds in the old days.'

'POLITICAL OUTCASTS' NOT TO BE REINSTATED SOON

SK030104 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 3 Mar 82 p 1

[Text] Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun made it clear yesterday that political outcasts would not be reinstated in the near future, saying that a hasty removal of the political ostracism was feared to disturb the maturing clean political climate. Answering questions by lawmakers in a plenary session of the National Assembly, he said, "I believe that the people wish to see new era politics taking root early, not the revival of the old pattern."

However, he indicated that the removal of the political ban would be possible at any time for those who showed sincere repentance, even though it was a matter of high political determination by the president. He also said, "The former politicians whose activities have been prohibited must bear moral and political responsibility for the irregularities and injustice of the bygone days."

As to the minority parties' demand for early implementation of the local autonomy system, the premier revealed that it was hard for the government to put it into practice at an early date because the administration was required at this time to solve the pressing problems related to economy and security.

"The present political situation evidently does not require suppression and abuse of power as a result of various measures the government has taken in all fields for national reconciliation in the past year," he said.

Pointing out that the lifting of the 36-year-old curfew had brought about affirmative outcomes, he said that the government would push ahead with its policy for opening and self-regulation.

Defense Minister Chu Yong-pok testified before the house sitting that the government had neither developed nuclear arms, nor considered it at the present time. "The government judges that depending on the nuclear umbrella of the United States is more advantageous for the country than possessing it," he said.

PHNOM PENH: SIHANOUK STATEMENTS SHOW STAND ON PRC

BK040422 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Unattributed commentary: "What Did Sihanouk Tell Himself?"]

[Text] A 23 February AFP report from Bangkok on 23 February on Sihanouk's statement to newsmen in Beijing said that recently the Chinese provided a quantity of light weapons to his forces. He also revealed that these arms were provided to him a long time ago. [sentence as heard]

On the other hand, during his recent stay in Beijing, Sihanouk talked so much about his relations with China that we should make note of some of his statements. On the night of 21 January, the BBC broadcast an interview with Sihanouk in Beijing, in which he said that the Beijing Chinese are his best friends and he will do all the work that the Chinese desire. (?The FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW) of 29 January published an article which excerpted Sihanouk's assertion that he is determined that from now on he will develop better relations with the Beijing Chinese. The same magazine added that the Chinese vice premier gave assurances of continued assistance and support for Sihanouk. At the same time, Sihanouk reiterated that the Kampuchean situation cannot be solved peacefully and, on the contrary, it must be solved by war.

During his meetings with Khieu Samphan in Beijing, in order to reconcile with each other to form a loose coalition government, Sihanouk clearly told everybody about his relations with the Khmer Rouge. According to ANSA, on 23 February Sihanouk said that there are no major differences between him and the Khmer Rouge, who are murderers.

Through these above-mentioned statements, each of us can clearly analyze and find out what type of person Sihanouk is.

KAMPUCHEA HAILS PRK-SRV-LPDR SOLIDARITY

BK031312 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 2 Mar 82

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "The Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos Militant Solidarity is the Factor Determining All Our Victories" — date not given]

[Text] In the face of the increasingly dangerous collusion between the Chinese expansionists, U.S. imperialists, a number of ASEAN countries and other international reactionaries aimed at opposing the revolution of the three Indochinese peoples, the Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos militant solidarity has become an objectively necessary factor determining all our victories in the cause of the revolution, and a vital factor for the three nations of Indochina. Our enemies certainly recognize the great strength of this militant alliance which has been an effective weapon in defeating the colonialists, imperialists, neo-imperialists, expansionists, hegemonists and the genocidal clique. For this reason, they have always implemented the divide-and-rule tactic.

In the past they resorted to such schemes as interfering in the internal affairs of our countries, committing subversive acts, sowing distrust among us and aiming at undermining the strategic Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos militant solidarity, thus attempting to weaken the three countries' revolutionary forces so as to facilitate their return to oppress and colonize our nations once again.

Nevertheless, the fraternal peoples of our three countries have been well aware of their discipline and cruel nature. They have closely cooperated with each other and, shoulder to shoulder, have fought tirelessly to preserve the traditional militant solidarity of the three nations despite the fact that the feudalists, capitalists and genocidal gang had already managed to temporarily upset it. More than ever, this militant solidarity has been steadily strengthened and developed. Our peoples in the three countries have maintained close cooperation with each other for a lofty common goal: independence, freedom, social progress, peaceful coexistence and cooperation with other countries in Southeast Asia.

As irrefutable proof of this, the fifth conference of the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao foreign ministers held from 16 to 17 February in Vientiane reflected the strength of the bonds of militant solidarity and all-round cooperation among our three nations. Though our three countries are facing many difficulties caused by the war and hostile acts of the Chinese expansionists, U.S. imperialists and local and foreign reactionaries, the situation in our three countries continues to develop and improve.

In sum, our peoples in the three countries have cooperated with each other in checking all of the subversive acts, perfidious maneuvers and hostilities of the enemies in an effective and timely manner, repeatedly causing stinging and ignominious failures to their dark designs and relentless attempt to weaken Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos so as to reverse the situation in Indochina.

The regular and successive conferences held by the three foreign ministers to discuss problems of common interest have certainly contributed to further strengthening their militant solidarity, cooperation and complete unanimity of views and to actively promoting the cause of national defense and construction. In particular, the well-synchronized diplomatic activities of our three countries in foreign policy have developed steadily and with a great success and have actively contributed to safeguarding peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The latest conference, which discussed and agreed on the preparatory work for the first summit conference of the three Indochinese countries to take place in 1982, more clearly reflected the strengthening and broadening of the bonds of friendship, militant solidarity and all-round continuous cooperation among the three fraternal countries. The conference also highly valued the all-round cooperation between the three Indochinese countries and the world's socialist community with the Soviet Union as the bastion.

In particular, the conference exchanged views on the development of the Nonaligned Movement in order to increase cooperation among the three Indochinese countries with the aim of actively contributing to the success of the seventh summit conference of the nonaligned countries to be held in Baghdad. We intend to contribute actively to the safeguarding of the lofty objectives of the Nonaligned Movement which plays an important role in the common struggle for peace and national independence against imperialism, colonialism and the reactionary acts of exploitation to preserve and maintain peace and a new international economic order.

Strong with their tradition of solidarity in common struggle, of sharing weal and woe with each other and of helping each other, the three fraternal peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos pledge to carry on this tradition of precious militant solidarity and to preserve it forever in order to oppose the enemy of all stripes coming from whatever direction, strongly defending the national independence, democracy, social progress, sovereignty and territorial integrity for a peaceful, stable and cooperative Southeast Asia contributing to the defense of world peace and stability.

HUN SEN DISCUSSES REFUGEES WITH UNHCR OFFICIAL

BK031130 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] At the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 25 February, Comrade Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs, met with Zia Rizvi, UNHCR coordinator for Southeast Asia, and reaffirmed to him the PRK Government's position on the question of Kampuchean refugees in Thailand.

In connection with this question, the comrade disclosed that it was necessary that prior discussions between the two sides should be held before any convention could be signed with the UNHCR which might play the role of a mediator in this question.

On the same occasion, Comrade Hen Sen stressed the correct good will permeated with a sense of humanitarianism of the PRK Government in agreeing to accept the return of orphans without imposing any condition on the Thai side. However, he said, so far the authorities have continued to pursue an inhuman policy, causing a prolonged tension in the refugee question as well as in the Kampuchean-Thai border question.

In his reply, Zia Rizvi stated that he would make efforts to create facilities in this question and to increase cooperation with the Kampuchean Government.

[Text] In order to implement the resolutions of the 34th, 35th and 36th UN General Assemblies, which demand a complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and that the Kampuchean people be allowed to determine their own destiny without external interference by holding free elections under UN supervision, Perez de Cuellar, UN secretary general, appointed Rafiuddin Ahmad, UN deputy secretary general in charge of humanitarian affairs in Southeast Asia, as his special envoy to visit and examine the real situation in Southeast Asia.

This week Rafiuddin Ahmad is visiting ASEAN countries. VOFA LINKS VIENTIANE PROPOSAL TO BORDER INCIDENTS

BK031213 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Unattributed Commentary: "Orchestration Along the Thai-Kampuchean Border"]

[Text] It is much easier to understand now why there had been a spate of incidents along the Thai-Kampuchean border in the last 3-4 weeks. First, there was the Vietnamese military aircraft which flew along the border dropping what later turned out to be powder with poisonous contents in order to poison the water holes, wells and canals. Thai authorities had to warn Thai villagers and to rush in fresh water to those affected. Then, there were other incidents involving Vietnamese military aircraft -- one resulting in the crash landing of the Antonov-26 in Thai territory over 50 km from the border, and the other, a Vietnamese aircraft which dropped yellowish substance 9 km deep into Thailand. Then there was the intrusion of 300 Vietnamese troops into Thailand, resulting in five border patrol police troops being killed and, as a background to all this, numerous shellings into Thailand resulting in loss of lives and damage to property.

At first it was thought that these incidents were not connected, each one being taken in the context that they happened. But then came the so-called Vientiane meeting of the three Indochinese foreign ministers and the communique proposing a demilitarized zone to create stability along the Thai-Kampuchean border, and everything fell into place.

Before proposing a demilitarized zone, would you not first create a lot of military incidents showing how tense the situation was, and therefore the necessity for a demilitarized zone? After so many incidents where Thai officials and civilians were being killed, should not the Thai Government accept such a positive proposal to stabilize the border area? This was the impression which Vietnam wanted to create to the world by instigating and orchestrating the spate of incidents before the announcement of its proposal in the communique. It was an attempt to show how reasonable and fair Vietnam was supposed to be. Unfortunately for Vietnam, there were few takers and this attempt at a fast sale was quickly exposed.

It was obvious that the Vietnamese proposal did not direct itself at solving the root cause affecting the peace and stability of Southeast Asia, which is Vietnamese aggression against and occupation of Kampuchea and which has caused international tensions with far-reaching repercussions well beyond the region.

Vietnam has also declared that it has to maintain troops in Kampuchea because of the Chinese threat and it would not withdraw its troops until the Chinese threat ceased. Given this, Vietnam's call for a settlement with Thailand, which is not a party to the conflict but nevertheless suffers great loss and damage from the Vietnamese action in Kampuchea, is clearly misdirected and not relevant.

A similar Vietnamese proposal for the establishment of such a demilitarized zone was considered in detail during the 35th session of the UN General Assembly in 1980 and was totally rejected by the General Assembly.

These are some of the reasons why the Vietnamese proposal in the Vientiane communique cannot be accepted, because the Vietnamese proposal is not directed at the heart of the problem and therefore would not return real peace and stability to Southeast Asia. The Vietnamese proposal is not reasonable and is only a ploy, and no amount of orchestration of incidents along the Thai-Kampuchean border can change this.

MORE SPRAYING NEAR BORDER IN FEBRUARY REPORTED

Under Secretary of State for Interior Phisan Mulasatsathon says that the decision to close the Nong Khai camp is in line with the Interior Ministry's policy to have only three refugee holding centers under its supervision -- one each refugee camp will accommodate Laotian, Kampuchean and Vietnamese. The Nong Khai camp now holds between 6,000 to 8,000 Laotian refugees. These refugees will be transferred to a holding center in Pak Chom District, Loei Province, after the Nong Khai camp is closed.

FARMERS TO BUY FERTILIZER FROM USSR, ROMANIA

BK250725 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] The farmers welfare fund committee has agreed to lend 400 million baht to the marketing organization for farmers for buying 80,000 tons of fertilizers from Russia and Romania. Out of the total loan amount about 260 million baht will go in the exchange of 50,000 tons of Russian fertilizers for 100,000 tons of Thai maize and the rest will be used in the exchange of 30,000 tons of Romanian fertilizers for 60,000 tons of Thai maize. Thailand will ship out the maize to Romania next month, and the remaining 170,000 tons of maize Thailand has previously agreed to send to that country will be replaced by other commodities such as rice, groundnuts and pork. The undersecretary of state for agriculture says that the exchanges of these commodities are good to the opening of a new market for Thai products since Romania has never bought anything from Thailand before.

SIAM RAT DISCUSSES MILITARY'S ROLE IN POLITICS

BK040832 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 3 Mar 82 p 3

[Editorial: "The Country's Situation"]

[Text] According to the statement by the House Commission for Military Affairs -- which has reflected the commission's concern over the frequent meetings of military personnel, particularly senior officers at the commander levels -- it is feared among political circles that the situation might be detrimental to the democratic system.

We have noticed that the matter has been extensively discussed among politicians, who fear that such developments could become an obstacle to the general elections, which will be held in over a year.

However, we believe that it is unlikely that the military would resort to any action for any purpose during this period, because Thailand will officially celebrate the Rattanakosin bicentennial this April. The grand celebration should dispel fear of any military incident. All Thai citizens, including military, police, politicians, and business people have been informed and understand that the celebration is a state affair in which everyone must joyfully participate.

We believe that the frequent meetings of senior military officers have been arranged for the discussion of the problems now facing the country, such as the unstable situation along the border areas, that are the direct responsibility of the military to find solutions for.

Moreover, it is now obvious that the military has opened up a big suppression drive against the communist insurgents and conducted operations against their strongholds in many areas, which have resulted in heavy casualties on both sides. The Thai people are satisfied with the outcome of this new offensive.

Therefore, we wish to appeal to the people to have confidence in the country's political situation and dispel any fear of any untoward incident for the sake of the celebration of the Rattanakosin bicentennial we have been waiting for.

BRIEFS

IMPORT SURCHARGE -- In a major move to promote exports, the government yesterday announced a 0.5 percent import surcharge on all imports except for infant milk and petroleum products in order to set up a special fund to promote exports. The surcharge was announced by Commerce Minister Sqd Ldr Punmi Punnasi and became effective yesterday. The government is expected to collect about 1,000 million baht from this surcharge for use in setting up a special fund to promote the country's ambitious export programmes this year. The fund will be administered by the Export Development Committee under the chairmanship of Minister Punmi, the source said. The Ministry of Commerce has set an export target of some 182,000 million baht this year, an increase of about 19 percent from last year's target of 153,000 million baht. HANOI REPORTS 'FAILURE' OF KHMER COALITION TALKS

BK031510 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] According to foreign sources, the genocidal Khieu Samphan, a representative of the Khmer Rouge bandit remnants, left Beijing on 1 March, dashing the hopes for a so-called tripartite summit meeting in Beijing on the coalition government farce, an attempt to rally the reactionary bandits against the Kampuchean people.

The Chinese authorities had intended to stage this farce right in Beijing so that they might use direct pressure as the host to force the three lackey groups to sit down to settle their disputes and thus conceal the face of the genocidal Khmer Rouge. Only Khieu Samphan and Sihanouk, however, went to Beijing for the meeting. Despite the fact that Beijing had told them to do their best to invite Son Sann, the latter, who is living in exile in Western Europe, still refused to come and continued to affirm that he would not attend a tripartite meeting.

According to opinion in foreign countries, the fact that Khieu Samphan finally had to leave Beijing empty-handed marks the failure of China's initiative to form a tripartite alliance of the reactionaries to oppose the Kampuchean people's revival.

FURTHER HANOI COMMENT ON SHANGHAI COMMUNIQUE

OW031659 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Commentary by Dao Nguyen: "Did Both of Them Forget?"]

[Text] On the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the signing of the joint Shanghai communique, which took place on 28 February 1972, when former U.S. President Nixon personally came to Shanghai to sign the devilish Uncle Sam-modern Great Han expansionist alliance, Zhongnanhai and While House leaders have exchanged congratulatory letters.

In his letter, Premier Zhao Ziyang, on behalf of the followers of the Great Han expansionism in Zhongnanhai, said the joint Shanghai communique is a historic document whose existence has helped both sides to preserve peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

The letter of President Reagan, sent from the White House, plays the same tune. It says: The joint Shanghai communique is a landmark for the promotion of peace in the Asia and Pacific region and in other parts of the world.

In their letters, they also described, in very concrete terms, how, over the past 10 years, the United States and China have closely cooperated in economic and political fields and expressed the hope that, in the future, both sides will become close friends in the interests of the Chinese and American peoples.

Their letters sound very nice indeed. However, if we review the actual PRC-U.S. relations over the past 10 years, we find that something is missing in their letters. Let us quote here just some events that they omitted and that the whole world is well aware of: Following the signing of the joint Shanghai communique, China gave the green light for the U.S. imperialists to freely invade Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries and China later replaced the defeated Americans in directly annihilating the Kampuchean people, invading Vietnam and creating disturbances in Laos.

Even now, after both of them have suffered defeats in Indochina, China and the United States are stubbornly seeking ways to oppose the Indochinese peoples and the create trouble in Southeast Asia so as to fish in troubled waters. This has led progressive world public opinion to point an accusing finger at them and denounce them as the main culprits that have caused and are causing instability in the region and jeopardizing world peace.

Did both Mr Zhao Ziyang and Mr Reagan forget that? Even if they deliberately omitted the evil deeds in their congratulatory letters marking the establishment of the piratical Uncle Sam-modern Great Han expansionist supercorporation, the righteous public in the two countries and the world progressives struggling for peace make it their duty to add them to their flowery letters to make them complete.

NATIONAL UNESCO COMMITTEE MEETS IN HANOI

U.S. SEEN USING ASEAN IN MOVES AGAINST INDOCHINA

BK031148 Hanoi International Service in Thai 1130 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Unattributed commentary: "The United States Is Increasing Its Presence Among the ASEAN Countries"]

[Text] The Reagan administration, in implementing the policy of the U.S. return to Southeast Asia, has been closely colluding with the Beijing reactionaries to undermine the revolutions in Indochina, continuously disseminating propaganda about the so-called Soviet and Vietnamese expansionist threats to the Southeast Asian countries and simultaneously sending large quantities of weapons to the ASEAN countries to create tension in this region.

In 1979 and 1980, the United States sold weapons worth over $6 million to Thailand. In 1980, it increased its direct military aid to Thailand from $45 to $80 million, providing tanks, artillery pieces, armoured vehicles, transport planes and ammunition to strengthen the Thai Armed Forces to enable them to cope with the so-called external threats and invasion.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Defense Department is intensifying its efforts to reopen U.S. military bases including the B-52 airbase and naval bases as well as weaponry depots on Thai soil. According to Western news agencies, more U.S. aircraft have been lately sighted using a number of airports in Thailand, while the number of U.S. military advisers and experts in this country is reported to have increased.

The U.S. weapons and military aid have encouraged the ASEAN countries to increase their military expenses above those for economic development. Western military observers calculated the total amount of money spent by the ASEAN countries for the development of their armed forces and military trainings in 1980 at over $5,466 million, an increase of 46.5 percent compared with that in 1979. The flow of U.S. military aid the weapons to the ASEAN countries was primarily aimed at reactivating the U.S. military bases and opening new ones in these countries. Consequently, the ASEAN countries have been pushed to engage in the arms race, create instability in the region, and serve the U.S. strategy spearheaded at the Soviet Union, Vietnam and the revolutions in the three Indochinese nations.

The United States even wishes to enlist the ASEAN countries as its new colonies in order to eliminate the Chinese reactionary expansionists while hailing their role in serving the United States as its anti-revolutionary advanced column against Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. The United States hopes that the strengthening of ASEAN armed forces would enable them to control and annihilate the jungle bandits and Maoist armed insurgents, who are causing trouble in the region, as well as the faithful lackeys of the Beijing expansionists in Southeast Asia -- or at least, making them useless -- turn to serve the United States in fighting against national independent and democratic movements in this region, and create pressure and destroy the three Indochinese nations.

It should not be misunderstood that the United States will ensure security for the ASEAN countries because, in reality, the ASEAN countries have been used as a tool to start a proxy war of the United States.

VO NGUYEN GIAP SPEECH ON VOCATIONAL TRAINING

BK031210 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 11 Feb 82 p 2

[Summary of speech by Vo Nguyen Giap, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the SRV Council of Ministers, at the 6-7 January Hanoi conference on vocational training for general education students]

[Text] Vocational training provided at schools is a basic issue of socialist education. We must develop a profound and clear understanding of this issue.

Karl Marx pointed out a long time ago: "Education will combine productive labor with education and physical education for all children reaching a certain age; this is not only a method for increasing social production but also the only method for creating versatile men." (Footnote: Karl Marx: "Das Kapital", Su That Publishing House, Hanoi, 1960, Book I, vol XI, p 230) Later on, V.I. Lenin also stressed: "It is impossible to visualize an ideal future society in which the education of the young generation is not combined with productive labor; unless teaching and education go together with productive labor and vice versa, we cannot reach a level comparable to the development of technology today and modern scientific knowledge." (Footnote: V.I. Lenin: "Complete Works," vol XI, Progress Publishing House, Moscow, 1974, p 605). Uncle Ho also talked about this issue on many occasions.

The report on experiences in vocational training which you have just heard clearly shows the positive impact of productive labor organized by general education schools on the shaping of the students' personalities. It not only helps the students to acquire more scientific and technical knowledge and feel more attached to society, but also encourages them to study technology, learn the meaning of productive labor and so forth. The fundamental issue is that along with the indoctrination of Marxism-Leninism, we must help the students develop a correct philosophy of life based on patriotism, love for socialism and the spirit of socialist collective mastery. At elementary and secondary general education shcools, we must organize vocational training satisfactorily and combine education with productive labor at different levels, thereby turning these schools into local centers for introducing science and technology into agricultural production. Here, we can clearly see the lively relationship between education and productive labor as well as between schools and society; and the schools will play an important role in training local technical cadres and developing local agricultural technology.

Before the August revolution, students went to schools and took exams to become mandarins. Today the goal of education is to become new laboring people -- socialist laboring people who are equipped with cultural and technical knowledge, possess ideals, love the fatherland and socialism, and fully grasp the law of nature, the law of society, economic law and so forth in order to transform society and build it into a new society. This goal requires that we provide students with vocational training. We have yet to realize fully the importance of this issue; progress in this regard has been slow in recent years. Therefore, hundreds of thousands of students finishing elementary and secondary general education every year are not prepared for engaging in productive labor with ease. Even worse, many students see only one single path of advancement: Elementary general education, secondary general education and then higher education. When unable to make it, they feel that the education system does not meet the demands of society and the young generation, failing to realize that after finishing general education, the majority of students have to engage in productive labor.

In fraternal socialist countries, students finishing general education are distributed to meet the requirements of the national economy in accordance with their capabilities. Generally, a greater part of them go into productive labor or take up vocational training; and only a small part enter secondary vocational and higher education schools. (Footnote: The percentages of students who enter secondary general education after finishing elementary general education are as follows: 11.4 percent in the GDR; 13.9 percent in Czechoslovakia; 18 percent in Poland; 19 percent in Hungary; 27 percent in Bulgaria; and 30 percent in Vietnam. The great majority of the remaining students enter trade schools and secondary vocational schools). This situation is inevitable.

To promote vocational education in general schools correctly, we must teach various cultural subjects and basic sciences quite well, carry out general technical and labor training, and satisfactorily organize productive labor in various trades for students. At the same time, we must educate students in politics and revolutionary ethics even more satisfactorily so as to inculate in them a love for study, professional activities, socialist ideals, and so forth. We must enforce vocational education with the means available in localities and should not ask for facilities which the national economy cannot yet afford. We must actively foster vocational education in the way described by Lenin as early as in 1920: "Immediately and to a possible extent" and "absolutely and immediately as required by the current extremely serious economic situation of the republic." (Footnote: V.I. Lenin: "On Youth," Progress Publishing House, Moscow, 1966, p 271)

Concerning those students who have left school, the party organizations, administrations and production establishments in the localities concerned must continue to give them vocational training and guide them into joining various trades and professions.

The schools must assist the localities in carrying out this task well. Vocational education is decided partly by students' aptitude, but mainly by the demands of society, especially the demands of localities, for workers in various sectors and trades, in specific periods of time, and so forth. In the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, vocational education always receives sufficient attention. Students in the last year of the basic general schools can already decide on their future professions. Local production establishments often take the initiative in helping the schools carry out vocational training by telling them how many workers they would need in the coming years, the professional standards these workers should have, and in which sectors and trades they would be needed.... Students regularly visit production establishments to observe, to work, to put their technical knowledge into practice, and so forth. Many students can go to work in these production establishments immediately upon their graduation.

In our country, I think that, under the leadership of the central authorities, each locality should take the initiative in arranging for general school students to join various professions and trades immediately after their graduation.

Vocational education can influence a man's whole life. For this reason, all teachers, men and women alike, and all responsible comrades at various party and administrative echelons and in various production establishments should pay the utmost attention to this matter. On the basis of the party's revolutionary and economic lines and the situation of the localities in all fields, we must apply appropriate measures to promote vocational education and to use vocational school graduates. In the immediate future, we must concentrate our efforts on developing agriculture. In our country, agriculture, forestry and fishery will continue to employ large numbers of laborers for a long time to come.

Only in this way can we meet the demand for comprehensive agricultural development and provide food for society, raw materials for the industrial sector and the production of export goods. We must satisfactorily implement the policy of rationally deploying our work forces according to the soil conditions, especially in the Central Highlands, the western mountain region in the north, the Mekong River Delta, and so forth. In the hilly and mountainous areas, we must coordinate agriculture with forestry. This is the key measure for restoring the fertility of hundreds of thousands of hectares of degraded land. Another direction which we can advance is toward the sea. Not every country in the world has a precious coastal area as ours does, but this area has not received the attention it deserves. An important field of production in which any locality can engage is handicraft and small industry. These two sectors turn out a very large volume of products highly essential for the daily life of the people in various localities and have great potential for export. The Vietnamese people are industrious and dexterous and have many sophisticated traditional trades the practice of which does not require much capital and depends on raw materials readily available in various localities. Therefore, we must vigorously engage in handicrafts and small industry.

Looking toward the more distant future, we should step up industrialization, the central task for the whole transitional period. For this reason, depending on the increasing demands of each industrial sector, it is necessary to guide students toward modern industry. Although this sector does not have a big demand for skilled workers in the immediate future, guiding students toward it is a very basic measure which also takes into account the need to prepare for expanding the contingent of skilled workers for key industries, such as energy, engineering, metallurgy, chemicals, mining industry, processing industry, and so forth. This is necessary to achieve national industrialization.

We must carry out these orientations without requiring special conditions and continually strive to create increasingly better conditions.

Most important of all is that the schools must have a correct understanding of the issue and a good organizational structure; and at the same time, the party committee echelons, the administration and production establishments are obliged to tackle the issue actively in accordance with their capabilities. Efforts must be made in the following spirit: The state, the people and the collectives must work together; and success is ensured with positive endeavors. We have gained encouraging initial experiences concerning this issue. The experiences of progressive models indicate that any school or locality can do this if activities are organized in accordance with the students' abilities, the school's capabilities and the local conditions.

While concentrating on agriculture, we must make the people, especially students and their parents, understand clearly that in order to carry out agricultural work satisfactorily, we need ever-improving cultural, scientific and technical knowledge. It is necessary to introduce scientific and technical innovations into agriculture intensively and promptly, and generate enthusiasm among the students regarding agricultural work and developing a desire to devote their knowledge and energy to agriculture and contributing to advancing our country's tropical agriculture with its great potentials to a modern level regarding both technology and management. At the same time, attention must be given to producing material wealth for society. This work, if satisfactorily organized and undertaken by millions of students and tens of thousands of teachers who have a certain cultural, scientific and technical level, will bring about incalculable benefits to the effect of improving first of all the quality of education, enhancing the love for labor and attachment to one's trade, creating additional material facilities and equipment for schools, enriching the wealth of society, and turning schools into cultural and technical centers at the grassroots level. We now have excellent work-and-study secondary general education schools. This is a direction for good development. By developing this type of school, Cuba has become noted for the production and export of oranges, lemons, pomelos and so forth.

In the cities, we must rely on handicraft and small industry establishments to provide vocational training for graduates from general education schools. Skilled and outstanding workers may be selected as their instructors. This is a basic task that can and must be done immediately by all localities while long-term programs are being formulated. We must see to it that our millions of students graduating from schools every year are professionally oriented and well prepared with regard to ideology and working skills; and that they are equipped with the necessary cultural and scientific knowledge to work enthusiastically after finishing general education. This important work requires that all the responsible comrades of the education sector as well as the leading comrades of all echelons and sectors uphold their sense of responsibility for the young generation and the future of the nation, and develop a great determination and a creative spirit. I hope that following this conference, the education and other sectors and all echelons in the various localities will enforce positive and practical measures to apply the Council of Minister's resolution on vocational training effectively so as to meet satisfactorily the very basic and pressing requirements of our work to train the young generation into new and comprehensively developed laboring people in support of the cause of national construction and defense.

DIRECTIVE ON EMULATION MOVEMENT ISSUED

[Text] The chairman of the Council of Ministers has just issued a directive on the organization of the socialist patriotism emulation movement to successfully fulfill the 1982 state plan so as to pave the way for the fulfillment of the 5-year 1981-85 state plan.

The directive reads: In 1981, the first year of the third state 5-year plan -- the 1981-85 plan -- the socialist patriotism emulation movement of our entire people and armed forces continued to develop well. The organization of the emulation drive to score achievements to greet the fifth party congress has helped further promote the movement in many production installations. Although the progress we have made is not yet comprehensive and uniform, it has led to good results and is stimulating the emulation movement to implement the 1982 state plan. It will also stimulate the emulation drive to carry out the resolution of the forthcoming fifth party congress. Thoroughly grasping and implementing the fifth party congress resolution, the resolution of the fourth-term party Central Committee's 11th plenum and the party Central Committee Secretariat's directives, all sectors and echelons should in 1982 better organize and lead the socialist patriotism emulation movement and aim it at the following tasks and objectives:

Motivate the entire people and armed forces to strenuously uphold the spirit of collective mastery and the spirit of self-reliance in their emulation to overcome all difficulties; effectively utilize the available land, work forces, capital agricultural developments; accelerate the production of consumer and export goods, establish a new order on the distribution-circulation front and, on this basis, stabilize and further improve the people's living conditions; continue to build material-technical bases for socialism; ensure the meeting of needs for national defense and security and the safeguarding of the fatherland and the better maintaining of public order and security. In order to implement the above general tasks and objectives, we should direct the emulation movement to satisfactorily implement the following major issues:

1. Promote self-reliance in stepping up production and construction; do our best to meet the needs in grain and food and make increasingly greater contributions to the state; do not rely on higher levels and foreign countries; devise measures to secure import substitutes; further seek to meet needs on items of which the central level is in short supply; use to the full the available work force, land and material-technical bases; implement the mottos "the state and the people work together" and "the central level and the localities work together" in promoting economic construction and public health, cultural and educational services.

2. Economize in the use of energy, material supplies, raw materials and expenditures so their use will be about 10 percent below the plans and budgets set by the state. Each sector, echelon and production installation must strive to set specific plans on reduced material consumption and practice thrift in accordance with the spirit of the Council of Ministers' resolution on strict thrift practice and put an end to all waste, lavishness and formal practices.

3. Satisfactorily perform the distribution-circulation tasks; strictly manage goods, funds, income and market prices; secure concentrated commodity funds for purchase of agricultural products and secure funds from sales of goods at standardized and nonstandardized prices to cadres, workers and civil servants; accelerate export and import; improve, expand and strictly control the activities of the socialist trade system.

4. Satisfactorily perform the tasks concerning national defense, public security and internationalist obligations; build a powerful people's army which stands combat-ready for national defense and for the discharge of internationalist obligations; build an upright, stable and powerful people's public security force; promote the mass movement to safeguard the fatherland's security; firmly maintain political security and public order and security; counter the enemy's sabotage activities; combat negative manifestations in economic activities and social life.

The following are specific requirements for assessing and controlling the contributions and emulation achievement:

1. Increase labor productivity, keep the output and quality of products up and the prices down; prevent and eliminate the situation in which loss, waste and damage are involved.

2. Attain final results; conduct business in such a way as to amass profits and ensure accumulation for the state while improving the collectives' well-being and increasing the laborers' incomes; reduce native manifestations sharply.

3. Deliver grain and food and other products under obligation to the state satisfactorily and in accordance with the quality specified; satisfactorily implement the regulations providing for financial management and the control of currencies and prices.

4. Develop, consolidate and improve socialist production relations; reorganize and streamline the administrative apparatus; switch all qualified service agencies to the system of conducting business with profit-and-loss accounting.

5. Apply advanced technology broadly, develop technical innovations, organize production and manpower and use the labor forces and equipment of factories to full capacity.

The People's Armed Forces must step up the "determined to win over the aggressors for national defense" emulation movement, implement the five objectives of the campaign to "develop the fine nature and improve the fighting strength" of the People's Army and pay attention to enhancing the cadres' responsibility and improving the soldiers' material and moral life.

The People's Security Forces must emulate in carrying out satisfactorily the four basic tasks that have been laid down by the sector, ensuring that they can defeat the enemy under all circumstances.

While directing the emulation movement, it is necessary for all sectors, echelons and mass organizations to go by the general objectives and requirements noted above in order to determine the specific objectives for the emulation movement in their own sectors or circles.

The key measures necessary for the organization of the 1982 emulation movement are:

1. The chiefs of all sectors and echelons should promptly discuss with mass organizations plans to unify the organization of the emulation movement for 1982 and for the first quarter; satisfactorily conclude the review of the implementation of the 1981 emulation agreements; conduct a general review of the achievements and report them to the party congress; organize the signing of 1982 emulation agreements from the grassroots-level units upward; organize the signing of emulation agreements between our workers and cadres and all specialists of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries who assist us at worksites and enterprises.

2. Pay attention to forming, improving and increasing good management models from among units, directors, managers, foremen, and cadres.

3. Pay attention to reviewing the experience gained in exerting leadership and organizing emulation movements, especially in reviewing and increasing advanced models;

Organize and follow up the implementation of emulation agreements; carry our procedures and policies on commending and awarding outstanding emulators; help coordinate activities between the administration and mass organizations and coordinate the activities of emulation committees and those of other committees of the party at all echelons.

4. Promote the formulation of projects for organizing emulation councils at all echelons to be headed by unit chiefs and improve the organizations specializing in commendations and awards for all sectors and echelons.

The party Central Committee emulation department should coordinate with the Ministry of Labor in establishing professional criteria for cadres specializing in commendations and awards. Promote the formulation of a new state system concerning the emulation titles and forms of awards. In the immediate future, all sectors, localities and establishments should carefully select the number of participants to be awarded the emulation titles for 1981, with attention given to the norm for productive labor, the norm for the practice of thrift, the norm for the fulfillment of the grain obligation and the norm for the organization of a good life. Material awards for emulation title holders in various establishments can be diversified according to the size of their bonus funds and should not be restricted to the old scale.

5. Expand information and propaganda activites on emulation. The press, radio and television stations and wired radio networks should devote a larger part of their reporting and widely disseminate in a persuasive manner the news on emulation in general and the introduction of outstanding individuals and collectives in the emulation movement. Criticize correctly and promptly all manifestations of formalism in emulation activities and eliminate all acts of dishonesty and exaggeration in assessing emulation achievements.

6. Along with discharging the above tasks, we should particularly promote the working out of projects and conditions for the convening, at the appropriate time, of the fifth nationwide congress of heroes and outstanding emulators.

To implement directive No 91-CT/TU of the party Central Committee and this directive satisfactorily, the chairman of the Council of Ministers requests the chiefs of all sectors and echelons -- especially the comrade ministers, directors general, and chairmen of the people's committees of all provinces and of municipalities and special zones directly subordinate to the central government -- to consider that organizing and directing the emulation movement is an important part of the socialist state's economic work. The administration at all levels must coordinate with various mass organizations in carrying out this task, instead of letting them do it by themselves. In the immediate future it is necessary to work out plans to disseminate this directive immediately to the grassroots level. The party Central Committee emulation department should direct and supervise the implementation of this directive.

PEOPLE'S COURT HOLDS CONFERENCE IN HANOI

BK031118 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 14 Feb 82 pp 1, 4

[Text] From 8 to 11 February the people's court sector held a conference in Hanoi to review its work in 1981 and to set forth its orientation and tasks for 1982. Comrade Pham Hung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, attended and addressed the conference.

Last year the people's court sector made extensive efforts and achieved new progress in holding trials, handing down sentences, developing and consolidating its organization, and studying legislation and contributing to its development. New progress and achievements were also scored in the trying of criminal cases. This has ensured that punishment is meted out to the right criminal and in accordance with the law, thus contributing satisfactorily to the maintenance of political and economic security and social order and safety. Last year various people's courts in Hanoi municipality, Ho Chi Minh City and Tien Giang, Hau Giang, Dong Hap, Quang Nam-Danang and Thuan Hai Provinces promptly tried a number of cases involving the storage and circulation of books and publications on reactionary and decadent culture. This speedy trials have positively helped localities to wipe out reactionary publications thereby opposing the enemy's psychological warfare activities.

Along with the success in adjudicating criminal cases, good results were achieved in settling litigations concerning marriage and family matters and other civil cases, thus actively contributing to resolving complaints among the people promptly. These courts paid much attention to the aspects of education and reconciliation; took the initiative in consulting the opinions of the masses and sought coordination from mass organizations, especially the Women's Union; and devoted much time and effort to explaining the law and policies to the persons concerned. Thanks to this, last year the sector reconciled and reunited 946 couples filing for divorce; and reconciled 1,690 cases of civil litigation.

Thanks to the increasing effective coordination between the people's court sector with the people's organ of control and the public security force in opposing crimes, many important cases relating to political security and social order and safety have been satisfactorily settled. Tasks concerning building and consolidating the people's court sector have been changed and developed. Following the adoption of the new law on the organization of the people's court by the National Assembly, judges of all courts ranging from the People's Supreme Court to people's courts at district and village levels have been reappointed in accordance with the new law. The number of young judges appointed systematically accounts for 40 percent. The sector has expelled and transfered a number of disqualified or incapable judges, thus helping courts of various levels to perfect their system of organization gradually in accordance with their functions.

In 1982 the people's court sector must strive to promote understanding of the new situation and tasks among its cadres and personnel satisfactorily, overcome its shortcomings and weaknesses, and strengthen tasks concerning adjudication of criminal and civil cases in order to contribute satisfactorily to maintaining political and economic security and social order and safety.

The sector must continue to implement the law on organization of the people's court, perfect and consolidate organs of the People's Supreme Court, and coordinate with the Ministry of Justice the building and consolidating of the local people's court system in order to accelerate the implementation of the new adjudicative power. It must also improve and develop the effectiveness of the court system and organization and help court cadres and personnel to enhance their responsibility, capability and efficiency in carrying out their work. It must increase coordination with various control, interior, investigative and justice sectors in developing the joint strength of the dictatorship of the proletarian system in preventing and opposing crimes.

To ensure satisfactory achievements in these requirements, the sector is strengthening and improving tasks concerning the inspection and supervision of adjudication, including tasks concerning drafting reports, presenting statistics, collecting information and accelerating the settlement of complaints lodged by the people at various courts.

The sector is also positively contributing to formulating the draft statute on standard operating procedures for judges and the people's jurors, the criminal code and code of criminal procedures.

Addressing the conferees, Pham Hung, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers commended the people's court sector for its new and outstanding achievements scored in all spheres of its activities. In 1981, the people's courts of various levels promptly and scrupulously tried many important cases which in effect contributed effectively to the maintenance of political security and social order and safety, and the struggle to oppose negative phenomena and the prevention of crimes in the political, economic and social life. Criminals who commited severe crimes were severely sentenced and dully punished before the public. This has positively served as a warning to other criminals and bad elements.

Comrade Pham Hung urged comrades and personnel of the court sector to make more efforts in overcoming shortcomings and weaknesses in order to contribute to stopping negative phenomena and satisfying the people's wishes.

Pham Hung said: In the light of the resolutions of the eleventh VCP Central Committee plenum, and on the basis of firmly grasping the dictatorship of the proletariat, developing the worker's right to collective mastery, studying and understanding the party and state's economic, social, defense and security tasks, the people's court sector must strive to forge a unity of viewpoints and actions among its organs and build a genuine and firm network. It must closely coordinate with various organizations of the people's organ of control, the people's public security force and other related sectors in applying the adjudicative method correctly. In criminal cases, efforts must be made to ensure that the trial is conducted against the right offender, punishment is meted out on criminals correctly and promptly and in accordance with the law, and that effective measures are taken to oppose crimes against the revolution and other criminal crimes. In civil cases, trials must be conducted promptly and in accordance with rational policy and law in order to protect the socialist legal system, lives, properties and legitimate interests of the people, thereby contributing positively to building socialism triumphantly and defending the socialist fatherland firmly.

At this conference, the people's court of Long An Province received a rotating emulative banner awarded by the Council of Ministers for its achievements in 1981.

BK040614 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] On 2 March the chairman of the Council of Ministers sent a message praising the people and cadres of Son La Province for having by 25 January 1982 satisfactorily fulfilled the grain obligation quota for 1981, thus leading all the northern mountainous provinces.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers heartily commended the people and cadres of Son La Province for having upholding the revolutionary tradition, striving to overcome difficulties, stepping up production and satisfactorily fulfilling the 1981 grain obligation to the state, thus meeting local demand and making an active contribution to the cause of building and defending the socialist fatherland. The chairman expressed the hope that the people and cadres of Son La Province will develop the achievements already scored and further step up the production of both rice and subsidiary food crops.

At the same time they should encourage the people of all nationalities in the province to practice thrift in consumption and set aside more grain to sell to the state in order to fulfill or overfulfill the grain procurement quota assigned by the central government to the province and make an active contribution to meeting the general grain demand of the north in the spirit of Political Bureau Resolution No 120 dated 21 October 1981.

On this occasion, the chairman of the Council of Ministers called on the cadres and people of all nationalities in other mountainous provinces to uphold the revolutionary tradition, intensively step up the production of both rice and subsidiary food crops, practice thrift in consumption and enthusiastically make their best efforts to fulfill their grain obligation to the state with the aim of meeting the demand for grain of all strata of the local people so that they will not have to depend on grain brought in from afar by the central government.

MOKHTAR AGREES WITH THAI PROPOSAL ON KAMPUCHEA

BK031311 Hong Kong AFP in English 0517 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Jakarta, 3 Mar (AFP) -- The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) should heed a proposal by Thailand's National Security Council that ASEAN adopt a "hands-off" policy on the Kampuchean problem, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja has said.

"ASEAN should consider and seriously heed such a proposal because it came from Thailand, which is in the forefront bordering with Kampuchea," he said last night.

The secretary general of the Thai National Security Council, Prasong Sunsiri, was reported to have made the proposal, saying that if no progress had been achieved in the settlement of the Kampuchean problem, ASEAN had better leave it out temporarily.

Meanwhile, in an interview published today by the daily PIKIRAN RAKYAT, Mr Mokhtar said China would continue to support anti-Vietnamese forces in Cambodia so that Beijing would always be reckoned with in seeking a solution of the problem. "It is not impossible that the Soviet Union will carry out a 'gun boat' diplomacy due to China's close relations with the United States," he was quoted as saying.

SUBROTO SAYS OPEN PRICES WILL BE OBSERVED

BK031355 Jakarta ANTARA in English 1305 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Jakarta, 3 Mar (ANTARA) -- Indonesia continues to abide by the decisions concerning prices taken by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) at its ordinary meeting in Abu Dhabi in December 1981 although some of the organization's member countries recently lowered their prices. This was stated by Mines and Energy Minister Subroto to newsmen here Wednesday [3 March] morning in reply to newsmen's questions about Indonesia's position amidst reports that certain other OPEC member countries had begun selling oil at prices a few dollars lower than the U.S.$34 per barrel they had agreed on at Abu Dhabi.

About reported afforts by some OPEC member countries to convene an extraordinary meeting before the scheduled OPEC ordinary meeting in Quito in May, Subroto said the desire to hold such a special session had obviously arisen because there were some urgent problems requiring a quick solution. But such an extraordinary meeting must have a fair chance of resulting in a consensus and therefore prior consultations were currently in progress. Failure to reach a consensus at the proposed emergency meeting would only have a harmful effect on OPEC, Subroto said.

The main problem OPEC was now worried about, he said, was the current world recession.

OPEC, however, had during the past 20 years faced various troubles while remaining solidly united. OPEC member countries were well aware that it was unity that made their organization a formidable force.

Subroto, a former OPEC president, emphasized OPEC is not a cartel and pointed out its member countries were free to lower or raise their oil prices as they deemed fit. The price level decided at OPEC meetings were based on "gentlemen's agreements," he said.

PREMIER TO ATTEND ISLAMIC PEACE COMMITTEE MEETING

BK021530 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Excerpt] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir is to attend the eight-nation peace committee meeting in Jidda to renew efforts to end the Iran-Iraq conflict. He is scheduled to arrive in Jidda on Friday [5 March] on the last leg of his visit to the Gulf states. This is the first time that Malaysia would be represented at the peace committee meeting by the prime minister. At the first and second meetings in February and April last year, Malaysia was represented by its foreign minister.

A Wisma Putra [Foreign Ministry] spokesman said the Jidda meeting would take stock of the latest situation and possibly come out with a suitable undertaking to end the 19-month conflict.

Our correspondent (Zahari Sa'ad) said considering that other initiatives by the United Nations and the Nonaligned Movement had not made much of a breakthrough, it appeared that efforts by the Islamic peace committee now remained the most appropriate forum for the settlement of the dispute. At its two previous meetings, the committee had made several concrete proposals. Iran and Iraq had submitted their responses and made suggestions to the committee's proposals.

MAHATHIR ENDS UAE VISIT, MAKES STATEMENT ON TIN

BK031255 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed says Malaysia's decision to find alternative means of marketing tin is to free producers from the manipulation of the present market forces. To continue with the present marketing system would be tantamount to leaving the fate of producers in the hands of those who have their own interests and for making profits. That is why Malaysia has proposed the formation of a tin producers association and to find other forms of marketing the product. The prime minister was speaking to newsmen in Abu Dhabi today.

He said steps would be taken to sell tin directly to consumers, but this would not be done to countries which purchase the metal for stockpile purposes with the aim of depressing the markets. The prime minister said even if half of the world's tin was marketed in an orderly manner, it would benefit both producers and consumers. Malaysia and Thailand, he pointed out, were now producing half of the world output. He also said it was not the requirement that all producer nations should become members of the proposed tin producers association. The prime minister went on to touch on Malaysia's decision to reduce tin production by 25 percent of the 10,000 tons from next year. He said the aim was to reduce the nation's dependence on tin as a source of revenue. Earnings could come when the gas fields came on stream. There was also a possibility that more revenue would come from such metals as copper, gold, silver, lead and zinc. Huge deposits of these metals had been found in Pahang and Trengganu.

Our correspondent, (Zahari Sa'ad), says Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir is scheduled to leave Abu Dhabi for Oman this afternoon. He has already visited Bahrain. From Oman, the prime minister goes on to Jidda.

A joint statement issued in Abu Dhabi at the end of the prime minister's visit to the United Arab Emirates [UAE] said both the countries had agreed to activate the work of the Malaysia-UAE joint commission. The committee would meet at the earliest possible date.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir hoped that the Abu Dhabi fund would continue to participate in financing a number of projects under the fourth Malaysia plan. Malaysia had also proposed to establish an Islamic university. The prime minster said the president of UAE had expressed support for the setting up of the higher institution of learning.

MINISTER CRITICIZES U.S. SALE OF STOCKPILED TIN

BK031225 Hong Kong AFP in English 1113 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, 3 Mar (AFP) -- Malaysia today again criticised the United States for causing "disruption of an already weak tin market" by continued sales of stockpiled tin. The minister for primary industries, Datuk Paul Leong, said that tin prices had in the last few days tumbled to the floor level of the International Tin Agreement (ITA) buffer stock floor level price range. Malaysia, as the leading tin producer, had been badly hit by this low price trend, and a large number of gravel pump mines in the country "would suffer heavy losses," he said.

Datuk Paul Leong told a press conference that repeated assurances by the United States that GSA tin disposals would be carried out so as not to disrupt the market "have proved to be hollow." With a surplus of tin amounting to well over 20,000 tonnes already on the world market, the GSA had sold over 8,000 tonnes, of which 5,355 tonnes were disposed of in 1 and 1/2 months till the end of January this year. Another 22,000 tonnes were earmarked for sale under the current disposal scheme, he said.

Malaysia, together with Indonesia and Thailand, the other two ASEAN tin producers, have protested to the United States several times against the stockpile disposal, jointly after their ministerial level meetings and through diplomatic channels. The three countries, which account for 65 percent of world tin production, are meeting here again in early May to consider proposals for formation of an assocation of tin producing nations and for joint marketing of the commodity aimed at protecting producers' intersts.

Datuk Paul Leong said that a special session of the International Tin Council would be held in London next month to consider measures to check the decline in prices. The council was expected to call for the contributions from member countries for buffer stock buying operations. He said that buffer stock buying alone would not be sufficient to remedy the situation. The council was therefore expected also to consider export control measures "to ensure remunerative prices for the producers," he said.

The minister said Malaysia was now monitoring the situation and watching the response of major consumer nations towards joining the sixth international agreement, finalised after protracted negotiations in Geneva. He doubted whether the agreement would come into force from July 1, as scheduled, because of a noticeable "lack of political will" on the part of the major consumers.

The meeting of the ASEAN tin producing countries in May would consider "steps to safeguard our legitimate interests" in light of the existing situation. Datuk Paul Leong reiterated that it was not the intention of the tin producing nations to resort to a "cartel" type of operation. "On the contrary, we will continue to fully meet all the supply requirements of tin consumers. What we seek are fair and remunerative tin prices reflecting costs of production and the depletable nature of tin as an economic resource," he said.

Datuk Paul Leong, who is leaving for India tomorrow mainly to negotiate the long-term sale of refined palm oil, said that he would urge India to ratify the Sixth ITA and the international rubber agreement.

TRADE, LABOR RELATIONS WITH LIBYA TO BE EXPANDED

HK270101 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] Libya is expanding its trade and labor relations with the Philippines. During a call at Malacanang, Libyan Ambassador Mustafa Dreiza told President Marcos that Libya intends to get more workers from the Philippines and to buy more Philippine products. He said 4 construction projects in Libya will require the services of 1,800 Filipino workers, to swell the number of 20,000 Filipinos already in Libya. Later, Ambassador Dreiza told newsmen that Libyan officials were very pleased over the growing trade ties with the Philippines.

REGIONAL LABOR CENTER TO BE LOCATED IN JIDDA

HK220225 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Text] The Philippines is expecting millions of jobs for Filipino skilled workers in the Middle Eastern countries in the next 5 years. It will also earn billions of pesos for the government in the form of export and tax revenues. Already 200,000 Filipino overseas workers are employed in Arab countries as service and construction laborers. The government also earns annually 3.2 billion pesos in the form of workers' remittances. A total of 500 million pesos was earned in exports to the Middle East countries. Now Philippine companies have been awarded contracts worth more than 6 billion pesos. These job contracts will provide more jobs for Filipino laborers and will increase for the next 5 years.

Meanwhile the Philippines is setting up a regional labor center in Saudi Arabia. The regional labor center, based in Jidda, will support the needs of more than 200,000 Filipino overseas workers in the Middle East region. It will also cover other Arab countries, including Iran, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman, Jordan and North Yemen. President Marcos has already released funds for the operation of the regional labor center to assure workers of the government's interest in their welfare. The center will be headed by Employment Services Director (Jonathan de la Cruz) and seven other labor officials. The center is a step forward in the development of more job opportunities for Filipino skilled workers.

COMMUNIST LEADER CLARIFIES STAND ON KIDNAPPINGS

OW021930 Hong Kong AFP in English 1540 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Excerpts] Manila, 2 Mar (AFP) -- Imprisoned Chairman of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) Jose Maria Sison, has spelled out his party's policies on kidnapping and denied that they could have had anything to do with the recent kidnapping of sportsman Tomas Manotoc.

In a letter to his lawyer Juan David, Mr Sison said the CPP and its military arm, the New People's Army (NPA), "does not in principle kidnap anyone for any kind of ransom and in fact has never done so" in its 13-year existence. Mr Sison, who was arrested in 1977, said the NPA "arrests only the enemies of the people and other public wrongdoers in accordance with revolutionary law and justice." He added that it was a "firm policy" of the NPA not to make arrests in the Manila region "before reaching the stage of [word indistinct] strategic offensive in the war, a stage which is still relatively far away."

The NPA classifies its status in guerrilla war as still being in the "strategic defensive." He said he believed Mr Manotoc was kidnapped last December 29 by men only "pretending to be members of the NPA."

Mr Sison said he believed Mr Manotoc was "kidnapped and released by the agents of a powerful entity who had been harrassed by a family problem of no mean proportion and who has had the bad habit of trying to make the CPP and NPA his scapegoats whenever he is in a terrible fix." He noted that the area where Mr Manotoc was reportedly rescued by military operatives was not an NPA area but is one of the training grounds of the Armed Forces of the Philippines in nearby Rizal Province.

ABE DENIES U.S. CHARGES ON TRADE QUOTAS, TARIFFS

[Text] Tokyo, March 5 (KYODO) -- Shintaro Abe, Japanese International Trade and Industry Minister, Friday denied a U.S. assertion that Japan imposed de facto import quotas on naptha and soda ash, besides the existing 27 import quotas. Commenting on the insistence by Deputy U.S. Trade Representative David MacDonald before a Senate subcommittee Thursday, Abe told newsmen that the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) did not take such measures at all.

Referring to another U.S. assertion that Japan will still maintain high tariffs even after executing tariff cuts agreed at the Tokyo round meeting of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the Japanese minister said it was groundless. The United States has many high tariffs, for example, on textiles and cab-chassis, he said. Abe indicated that the U.S. market itself is not fully open, saying some people have called compensation duties and the antidumping act nontariff barriers.

NUCLEAR-POWER AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH AUSTRALIA

OW050245 Tokyo KYODO in English 0238 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 5 (KYODO) -- Japan and Australia signed Friday in Canberra a new bilateral nuclear power agreement under which conditions for Japan's reprocessing of Australian uranium in third countries has been eased, the government said.

The pact, which followed negotiations for revision of the old 1972 agreement conducted since August 1978 and which was initialed in Canberra in January, was signed between Japanese Ambassador Mizuo Kuroda and Australian Foreign Minister Tony Street.

Under the new agreement, Japan will be able to transfer to third countries and reprocess Australian uranium only by submitting to the Australian Government a list of plants where the work will be done. This also will apply to Australian uranium brought into Japan from third countries. In addition, the agreement bans nuclear explosions for nonmilitary purposes.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi welcomed the signing of the Japan-Australia nuclear power agreement and said it will help Japan to carry out its program for peaceful utilization of atomic energy on a long-range and stabilized foundation.

In a statement Friday, he said the new agreement conforms to Japan's policy of preventing proliferation of nuclear weapons and establishing a nuclear fuel cycle.

The foreign minister noted that Japan and Australia are maintaining close ties in the atomic energy sector with Japan importing natural uranium from Australia. He said he was confident that such ties will be further cemented with the conclusion of the new pact.

PROTEST LODGED ON 4 MAR SR-71 'INFILTRATION'

SK041315 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1200 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors again committed a grave military provocation by infiltrating a spy airplane into the skies above territories in the east and west parts of our country.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors, leading the situation to the brink of war by staging a large-scale war exercise racket after establishing a brutal wartime structure throughout South Korea, infiltrated the high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance plane into the sky above the military boundary east of Kosong, Kangwon Province, of our country at 1114 on 4 March. Following this, at 1134 they infiltrated the plane into the sky above the Kangnyong peninsula southwest of South Hwanghae Province, thus committing espionage activities against the northern half of the republic. At around 1300 today, the U.S. aggressors again committed a vicious military provocation by infiltrating the SR-71 espionage plane deep into the sky above the military boundary offshore from Tongchon, Kangwon Province of our country.

At a time when the U.S. aggressors are staging fanatic war exercise rackets against the northern half of the republic in defiance of our people's repeated protests and denunciations, they are intensifying espionage activities against the northern half of the republic. There have been approximately 15 cases of spyplane infiltrations into the skies above our territories by the U.S. imperialist aggressors since 13 February when the rascals began the unprecedentedly large-scale "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors are attempting to conceal their aggressive acts with the absurd sophistry that their perpetration of espionage activities by repeatedly infiltrating spyplanes into the sky above our territories took place in international airspace.

All facts show that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are most shameless aggressors who are violating and destroying the Korean armistice agreement. The U.S. imperialist aggressors should bear in mind that the days when they could enforce their will by means of force are gone forever and should immediately stop all hostile acts against our country.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES WEINBERGER'S TRIP TO KOREA

SK050620 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2250 GMT 4 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 5 March commentary: "Where Is the United States Leading the Situation?"]

[Text] With a war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" being staged in South Korea, the U.S. imperialists, bringing a vast number of armed forces of aggression into South Korea, are now deploying them in areas close to the military demarcation line and are continuing to conduct espionage flights by continuously infiltrating the high-speed, high-altitude, SR-71 reconnaissance plane into our airspace. Because of this, a serious situation similar to the eve of war is being created in our country.

According to foreign news reports, at a time when the situation is escalating to a high degree of strain, U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger is reported to be sneaking into South Korea at the end of March under the pretext of attending a joint military consultative meeting with the South Korean puppets. And, the U.S. Defense Department notified the U.S. Congress of an emergency plan for the speedy supply to the South Korean puppet army of $2 billion worth of logistics materials, a vast quantity of ammunition, weapons parts and support equipment, in case a war breaks out on the Korean Peninsula. It is reported that this plan, if there are no objections from the Congress, will be put into effect by the end of March.

Is it a coincidence all of this occurring at once? No, it is a well-worked out plan, escalating step by step.

The war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" is a test war and preliminary war which is being staged with the purpose of attacking us and on the assumption of a nuclear war. As has been revealed in their own remarks, this large-scale war racket is scheduled to reach its culmination at the end of March, when attack operations and landing operations are staged on the ground, in the air and at sea.

It is significant that the boss of planners and executors of the U.S. imperialist policy of aggressive war is going to fly into the theatre of operations amidst the flying bullets to have war confabs at a time the war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" is going over to an offensive stage, having completed strategic deployment, and the emergency program for a contingency on the Korean Peninsula is coming into force.

This projected ill-boding trip of Weinberger reminds us of the trip to South Korea by the U.S. Secretary of State Dulles on the eve of the Korean war. The U.S. imperialists, who were waiting for an opportunity to invade to swallow our republic in its infancy, dispatched Dulles, minister of war, to South Korea to check the status of preparations for a war and they finally ignited the flames in Korea by giving him a go-ahead sign. This is well known to the world. The present situation bears a close resemblance to that 32 years ago.

To try to achieve its ambition for an invasion of the whole of Korea by utilizing the U.S. military occupation of South Korea as leverage is the heinous aggressive strategy of the United States. It is by no means an accident that the U.S. imperialists are unabashedly prattling that the Korean Peninsula is vitally important, a matter of life and death to U.S. interests.

While maintaining South Korea as its colony and military base, continuing to resupply, replace and increase the armed and modern military equipment without surcease and while strengthening the puppet armed forces, the mercenary army on the spot, the U.S. imperialists are frenzied in shaping an offensive operation system on the basis of large-scale armed forces.

Recently, the United States secretly staged a large-scale exercise with a task force of the carriers of the U.S. 7th Fleet on the East Sea of Korea and is now staging a military exercise called "Team Spirit 1982," employing not only U.S. troops stationed in South Korea and the puppet army -- its shock brigade -- but also a vast number of armed forces and military equipment brought from its overseas aggressive bases, including Hawaii and Okinawa as well as the continental United States, exactly as in a real war.

For U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger, stepping onto the soil of South Korea is related to such a vicious plot to accelerate the preparations for a new war in our country. Weinberger is coming to South Korea for an on-the-spot check of the preparations for a war of northward invasion and to direct it himself.

Weinberger's itinerary includes a visit to Japan after South Korea. When we take into consideration the fact that the U.S. imperialists, under the name of a study for a contingency in the Far East conducted with the reactionary Japanese ruling class, are hatching a plot to utilize Japan as a base for launching, supplies and operations in case they provoke a new war in Korea and for sending the Japanese Self-Defense Forces into South Korea, the purpose of his visit to Japan is evident. It is indisputable that he is to visit Japan to shape a strategic operational system around the Korean Peninsula as a part of the preparations for a new war.

All the facts show that the U.S. imperialists' policy of strength against the Korean people has never changed and that the policy is reaching a dangerous stage, showing more vicious appearance with each passing day. The U.S. imperialists, who railed in their attempt to wipe out our young republic in its incipient stage in the 1950's, are dreaming to achieve their plan at all cost even in the 1980's.

Owing to the U.S. imperialists' military adventurous policy, the reunification of Korea has not yet been achieved. At the same time, Korea is a dangerous place where the embers of war have never been extinguished.

Expressing deep concern over the acute situation on the Korean Peninsula, the world is supporting our peace-loving stand and efforts directed for peaceful reunification. It is natural that the world is denouncing the maneuvers aimed at beefing up the armed forces of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique and their provocative war exercise.

By actively participating in the U.S. imperialists' colonial policy and war maneuvers and serving them like their tools, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is once again clearly exposing its dirty nature as a flunkeyist, war maniac and splittist. The war rackets the puppets are staging together with the U.S. imperialists show that its balderdash on peaceful reunification is nothing but hypocrisy and deception.

Our people are keenly watching the dangerous game of walking the tightrope of war by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. The United States must look straight at reality and abstain from running riot. It should immediately leave South Korea, taking all the armed forces of aggression and weapons of mass destruction, putting an end to war rackets.

If the United States, turning deaf ear to our just demand, continues to stick to reckless war rackets, it will never be able to escape strong rejection and denunciation from our people and peoples of the world, and will have to take all the responsibility for the consequences arising therefrom.

VRPR TIES KIM CHONG-IL TO NORTH-SOUTH DIALOGUE

SK050241 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Article from "Ray of Guidance"]

[Text] Madame Yun of this radio station will review the energetic activities of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who has been always interested in the fatherland's reunification and has devoted himself to achieving reunification.

[Begin recording] With an indomitable will, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has carried out energetic activities to found a reunified fatherland, achieve the endless prosperity of the country and provide the people with lasting happiness, thus vigorously encouraging our people to struggle to achieve the fatherland's reunification. Saying that the most important task we should perform is to achieve the fatherland's reunification, the dear comrade leader has always placed priority on the reunification question and has put forth all his energy to solving this question.

The dear comrade leader devoted himself to the sacred cause for the fatherland's reunification on his birthday, which all fellow countrymen should warmly celebrate. Now, I am going to tell an anecdote about an incident on 16 February 1975. When all fellow countrymen were celebrating the national holiday, he visited some cadres and told them to reunify the fatherland by any means by themselves. He then explained the method of achieving the fatherland's reunification.

I have another moving story. It was winter in 1974. Always concerned over the question of the fatherland's reunification, the dear comrade leader visited cadres and explained in detail the pending task of expediting reunification. [passage indistinct]

Taking the lead in the great reunification cause, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has wisely encouraged the people to pioneer the grim future path of the fatherland's reunification. He has vigorously led all the people to the sacred road of the revolution for reunification. Profoundly grasping more than anyone else the justness of the proposal for the fatherland's reunification set forth by the great leader and firmly believing that protecting and implementing this proposal is a way toward reunification, he has organized and mobilized all the people in the struggle to implement this proposal.

Regarding correctly explaining the chuche-type policy for reunification as a key to achieving the fatherland's reunification, the dear comrade leader has always been greatly interested in the work of making the people correctly understand the content and justness of the policy for the fatherland's reunification set forth by the great leader. He has closely combined the work of extensively expounding and propagandizing the content and justness of the chuche-type policy for reunification with the work of disclosing the unjust and fraudulent nature of the sham reunification proposal of the splittists. Thus, he has helped people to assume an independent stand of rejecting reliance on foreign forces in order to reunify the fatherland. [passage indistinct]

Whenever he met cadres, the dear comrade leader told them to handle their counterparts at dialogue with patience and a generous heart. He said that the North-South dialogue should become one for reunification. Regarding guests [sonnim] at the North-South dialogue as matchlessly valuable treasures, he has retained his confidence in them and has shown kindness to them.

It was in January 1973 that he offered a high-class car as a gift to a member of the delegation to the North-South dialogue and told him to use this car for traveling to Panmunjom to participate in the dialogue. A week later, he visited him and offered him a ride in his car. In the car, he expressed appreciation for his efforts at the dialogue and said: If this road were one toward the fatherland's reunification, I would want to travel 100 ri and 1,000 ri more.

While conducting his on-the-spot guidance, walking in his room and riding in cars, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has always thought of the fatherland's reunification and has devoted himself to the cause of achieving reunification. [end recording]

Although there are many difficulties and obstacles in the future path of the struggle to achieve the fatherland's reunification, our reunification cause will surely be achieved as long as there is a bright torch -- the proposal for reunification -- lit by the great leader and as long as there is the outstanding leadership of the dear comrade leader in implementing this proposal. We should be more resolute in the struggle to achieve the democratization of society to expedite the reunification cause.

NODONG SINMUN STRESSES LEADERSHIP OF PARTY

SK041609 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1512 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 4 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN March 3 dedicated one whole page to a political essay titled "We Will Go Through Fire and Water at the Call of the Party!"

The political essay says at its beginning: "We will go through fire and water at the call of the party!" This call epitomizes the unbreakable one-in-body-and-spirit relations between our party, leader and people and the indomitable spirit of our people to live with the party's will, even if they live a moment, and to steadfastly uphold and defend the party in any storm.

The essay says in its first part: A brilliant era of history has a great spirit and will running through it. The spirit and will become the breath and pulse of the era to produce great strength and bear a great fruit. Now, in our country, the noble spirit and warm passion of the people who are advancing vigorously under the leadership of our party, holding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in high esteem, are flowing with a rush like a big river and leaping in flames of an active volcano.

The strength which is powerfully impelling our times today, the inexhaustible strength of our Korea, is the unshaken will of people which always beats in one with the heart of the great party and its breath. At a word of command calling them by the party to a struggle, the entire party members and the entire people rise up all at once like a moving mountain and act as one man, and charge ahead intrepidly through fire and water. This sublime mettle is the proud grand traits of our era and our society.

The political essay says in its second part: "We will go through fire and water at the call of the party!" This is a slogan symbolizing the great strength of unity of the ever-victorious Workers Party of Korea and a slogan reflecting the revolutionary disposition of our party members and people boundlessly loyal to the party and the leader.

Our people have been ever-victorious, faithfully following their leader and their party and advancing, closely united in one body around the party and the leader all the time, in the whole course of the Korean Revolution. As the victory in the anti-Japanese war is unthinkable apart from the slogan "Let us defend the headquarters of revolution with our own lives!" and the victory in the fatherland liberation war is unthinkable apart from the slogan "Let us lay down our lives for the party and the leader!" so we cannot imagine the victory in the socialist revolution and socialist construction after the war apart from the slogan "We will go through fire and water at the call of the party!"

"We will go through fire and water at the call of the party!" It is indeed, a single heart knowing no one else but the party and the leader under whatever difficult circumstances and an ever-victorious bugle-call signalling a daring charge up the hill towards the highest peak of victory under the leadership of the party, whatever obstacle may block the road.

In the 1970's when the whole world underwent serious political upheaval and economic fluctuation -- in those years of world-wide disasters and fluctuation, the great victory in unfolding a period of a grand heyday unprecedented in the fifty century-long history of this country in all fields, political, economic and cultural and a happy new life of the people that came into full bloom in this land were achieved while the bugle loudly sounded the advance and this spirit pulsated. The moral trait of our people readily plunging into fire and water when the party calls them -- this is, indeed, the ever-victorious strength which has powerfully promoted the Korean revolution as our undying slogan and banner.

In the third part, the political essay says: It is really worthy of being proud of that the undying slogan which emerged from the rigorous storms of the Korean revolution to fly as a great banner of struggle, a banner of advance, is now sounding loudly on the road of today's grand advance for modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea. Our people have keenly realised that they can advance along the road of victory for ever as in the past, so in the future too, only under the leadership of our party. This undisputed trust in the party has deepened a hundred-fold, a thousand-fold, with the imperishable exploits performed by our party in the course of modelling the whole society on the chuche idea.

No force on earth can block the way of us advancing, holding aloft the slogan "We will go through fire and water at the call of the party!"

Our people will carry the revolutionary cause of chuche through to accomplishment, attending the great leader in high esteem, following the guidance of the glorious party, with a tight hold on this banner and this slogan single-heartedly.

NORTH-SOUTH DIALOGUE SOUGHT THROUGH UN

SK050215 Seoul YONHAP in English 0143 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] New York, March 4 (YONHAP) -- Kim Kyong-won, Korean ambassador to the United Nations, said Thursday that Korea will continue to seek dialogue with North Korea through the U.N. secretary general or other third parties. In his speech at a luncheon meeting hosted by the Asia Society, Amb. Kim said that the U.N. secretary general has generously offered his good offices, but that North Korea has been negative so far.

On Korea's membership in the U.N., he said that Korea would like to be a member state of the U.N., and would not object to North Korean membership. He added that the main objective of Korean diplomacy in the world forum is the reduction of tension in the Korean Peninsula. He also denounced the North Korean-instigated plot to assassinate President Chon.

UNC PROTESTS NORTH'S MISCONDUCT AT PANMUNJOM

[Text] The U.N. Command (UNC) Thursday charged that North Korean security guards at the truce village of Panmunjom recently committed a "series of provocative, undisciplined and unprofessional acts," a command spokesman said. The spokesman said U.S. Army Capt. Walter C. Cummings Jr., chief UNC security officer, made the allegation at a security officers' meeting with North Korean officials at Panmunjom located about 54 km north of Seoul.

Recent misconduct by North Korean guards, the spokesman said, included crossing the military demarcation line, shouting profanities and racial insults at UNC guards and guests, and throwing stones at a UNC guardpost.

On Feb. 25, the spokesman said, communists crossed the border and set a fire in leaves in the southern sector of the village, which is controlled by the UNC. The North Korean guards, realizing the danger of spreading of the fire they started, notified the UNC security force, which extinguished it, the spokesman said.

Security officers of the two sides meet irregularly to discuss security-related problems in the truce village.

U.S. SPECULATION ON SUCCESSION IN NORTH NOTED

SK050327 Seoul HANGUK ILBO in Korean 4 Mar 82 p 2

[Correspondent Cho Sun-hwan's report from Washington]

[Text] Since the sixth party congress last October, North Korea's Kim Il-song has accelerated preparations to retire from the first line of power to the second line by nominating his son, Kim Chong-il, as deputy to the Supreme People's Assembly on the latter's 40th birthday on 16 February, an official of the U.S. administration well-versed in North Korean affairs disclosed on 3 March.

This official said: It is a tradition of the Oriental people to turn power over to their sons at age 60. But Kim Il-song did not do so 10 years ago when he was 60 years old. Instead, he is now hastening preparations for transferring his power at the age of 70. The official predicted that Kim Chong-il will be promoted to the post of vice president while Kim Il-song is alive, but Kim Il-song will keep the presidency until he dies.

The official said: Kim Il-song will deepen the position of Kim Chong-il as successor and let him devote himself to the domestic affairs. Kim Il-song will devote himself only to foreign relations, such as with Communist China, the Soviet Union and nonaligned countries.

The official said that although it has refused South Korea's flexible proposal for dialogue, North Korea will have to respond to the proposal for dialogue affirmatively someday in the future, when it believes that the South Korean domestic situation has stabilized.

The official said that even if Kim Il-song dies and Kim Chong-il takes power completely there will be no big change in the relations between North and South Korea as far as unification is concerned. However, in the long run, Kim Chong-il will be more reconciliatory and compromising than Kim Il-song, the official said.

OFFICIALS VIEW DEFENSE, TRADE ISSUES AT ASSEMBLY

[Excerpt] The government plans to promote cooperative relations with Korea's allies and nonaligned nations in all fields, including military cooperation. Testifying before the National Assembly plenary session, Vice Defense Minister Pak Chan-kung said that the government would also strengthen the Korea-U.S. defense system.

He also revealed that North Korea was estimated to possess about 260 light propeller-driven AN2 aircraft for guerrilla infiltration, which have the capability of sending about 2,500 troops simultaneously to the South. "Their missions are believed to be a surprise attack on major facilities in time of war through low-altitude air infiltration at night," he said.

Answering questions by lawmakers in a plenary session, he said, however, "We have already taken due measures to detect immediately low-altitude flights of AN2 planes." He said that the armed forces of the nation were completely prepared to crush any North Korean armed provocation, and were grasping any military movement of the enemy.

Foreign Minister No Sin-yong said that the government would seek increased cooperation with Japan in the field of technology in order to correct the current lopsided trade balance in favor of Japan. Pointing out that the fundamental cause of the Korean deficit in its trade with Japan was the difference in their industrial structures, he said that the government would also urge the Japanese Government to abolish customs barriers against Korean goods.

Minister No said that the government would make positive efforts to induce communist nations to participate in the '88 Seoul Olympics. "For this end, the government is now working out various plans to provide better conditions for the participation of nations from the communist bloc," he said.

KUWAIT CUTS PRICE ON FUTURE OIL SUPPLIES

[Text] Seoul, March 5 (YONHAP) -- Korea and Kuwait recently agreed to renew their crude oil supply contract this month, reducing the amount of oil to be brought into Korea from the current 100,000 barrels to 50,000 barrels per day beginning in April. The bilateral contract expires on March 31 this year.

Kuwait also agreed to lower the price of crude oil from current 33 U.S. dollars to 32 dollars per barrel, an Energy-Resources Ministry official said Friday. At present, Kuwaiti oil accounts for 18.3 percent of the country's daily imports of 546,000 barrels. The one-dollar oil import price cut is expected to cause domestic oil price to go down by nine cents per barrel, which the official said is still not enough to offset a 2.81-percent rise in the Korean won-U.S. dollar exchange rate so far this year.

The government is negotiating with 10 oil-producing countries from which the country imports 516,000 barrels of crude oil daily to reduce both the volume and the prices when contracts with them expire at the end of this year. Due to slackened business conditions and an oil conservation drive, the country's five oil refineries process only 65 percent of the daily imports of 546,000 barrels.

The negotiations, however, promise to become protracted because the oil-producing countries do not want any changes in the amount and the prices, the official said.

AFP: KHMER ROUGE ON DEFENSIVE; SRV HAS EDGE

BK250950 Hong Kong AFP in English 0820 GMT 25 Feb 82

[By Xavier Baron]

[Text] Bangkok, 25 Feb (AFP) -- Vietnamese forces in Cambodia have seized the initiative in the war against guerrillas of the ousted Khmer Rouge government since the beginning of the dry season last November. This is the assessment of Western military and diplomatic observers here, who pointed out that the Khmer Rouge had not only failed to mount the big offensive against the Vietnamese announced last year, but that they were now on the defensive.

While they expect Khmer Rouge guerrillas to be able to withstand the Vietnamese offensive of the current dry season ending in May, Western observers feel the guerrillas are not as militarily strong as they tried to make out last year.

Six months ago Khmer Rouge Foreign Minister Ieng Sary and its military high command said the guerrillas had almost reached a strategic standoff with the Vietnamese -- that they were capable of matching the combat capabilities of the estimated 200,000 Vietnamese soldiers deployed in Cambodia.

Since December, however, the Khmer Rouge have suffered a series of setbacks which hit them hard, but not decisively. The biggest were in the north where the Khmer Rouge took a heavy pounding in December. Later the guerrillas also lost a strategic position in southern Cambodia's Koh Kong District along the Gulf of Thailand, an area where fighting still goes on.

Since early January, the Khmer Rouge have been driven towards the Thai border from their mountain stronghold in the Phnom Malay region in the extreme west of the country by about 5,000 Vietnamese troops supported by armour and artillery.

The Khmer Rouge used to occupy a zone of about 1,000 sq. kilometres (400 sq. miles) in the Phnom Malay region. Now they are said to hold only about 100 sq. km. (40 sq. miles).

Stressing the importance of the region for the Khmer Rouge, observers note that they have a major military base in the region where the hilly terrain and forests provide excellent cover for guerrilla operations. The Phnom Malay mountain range is also the place where Khmer Rouge leaders have received journalists for the past 3 years. Diplomatic observers here have said that the loss of the zone would have a "major psychological impact" on the Khmer Rouge insurgency.

According to diplomatic sources, the Khmer Rouge military chief Pol Pot was recently hospitalized in Bangkok.

Khmer Rouge Premier Khieu Samphan, meanwhile, said in Beijing on Tuesday that Pol Pot had health problems that forced him to "rest" from time to time, although he was currently back at his command post in the northern Cambodian province of Preah Vihear. Because his movements are kept secret, this cannot be verified.

A deliberate tactical withdrawal decided by the Vietnamese military high command in 1981, apparently led Khmer Rouge leaders to say they had succeeded in "countering the Vietnamese decisively."

For the Vietnamese-backed regime in Phnom Penh, 1981 was essentially a political year marked by regional and general elections, which officially were held throughout the country.

Branded as "farcical" by Vietnam's adversaries, the staging of the elections by the Phnom Penh government required a major deployment of Vietnamese forces between March and June last year. Vietnamese forces were moved away from the outer rural districts to urban and densely populated areas of Cambodia to ensure the elections went smoothly.

This tactic generally worked well for the Vietnamese, except along national highway No 6 north of Lake Tonle Sap where they were continually harassed by guerrilla attacks.

Since the beginning of the year, the Vietnamese aim has been clear, according to diplomatic observers: The main enemy is the Khmer Rouge, and most of their forces have to be targeted against them. This would explain why the Vietnamese expeditionary corps has not yet launched major attacks against the two other anti-Vietnamese groups operating in Cambodia -- the non-communist forces of former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and of former Premier Son Sann, which are also within artillery range.

Western diplomatic circles here said the Vietnamese army reinforced its combat strength in Cambodia in the second half of last year. However, no precise figures are available on this. The Vietnamese troop strength is estimated at 150,000 to 200,000 men. For the Khmer Rouge, it is put at 30,000 to 35,000 guerrillas, a figure that cannot be checked.

Likewise, it is also difficult to assess Khmer Rouge losses. Vietnamese losses are said to be less serious than those of the Khmer Rouge because the latter, faced with a hostile population, have a hard time obtaining reinforcements. To improve the situation, the Khmer Rouge could mount guerrilla attacks behind enemy lines against Vietnamese supply columns so as to ease pressure along the borders. And according to diplomatic sources, the Khmer Rouge are apparently doing just that.

PRASONG URGES AVOIDING CHANGE IN KAMPUCHEA POLICY

[Text] Secretary General of the National Security Council Prasong Sunsiri warned yesterday that Thailand must refrain from a policy of "changing horses in midstream" on the Kampuchea issue.

Squadron leader Prasong stressed that the Thai Government must adhere firmly to the resolutions of the UN General Assembly in resolving the Kampuchean problem. "We can't afford to map out new moves which deviate from the UN resolutions," the NSC secretary general said.

Prasong was speaking yesterday on "analysis of world situation" at the meeting of the National Security Psychology Association of Thailand.

"I would like to stress that we cannot change horses in midstream. We would do better to direct our attention at putting our house in order," Prasong said.

Informed observers said Prasong was indirectly criticizing suggestions from certain quarters in the Foreign Ministry that Thailand should continue to come up with "new approaches" to the Kampuchean issue.

"We must be very careful not to fall prey to the situation and get involved unnecessarily in other people's affairs," the NSC secretary general added.

The senior official noted that the situation in Indochina, especially in Kampuchea, would continue to "drag on" and Thailand, as a frontline state, would have to adopt a very cautious policy.

Prasong said that the Soviet Union had devoted tremendous resources, military and economic, in Vietnam, Laos and Phnom Penh occupied by Vietnam. "Although the Soviet aid is in the tune of about three million American dollars a day, Vietnam has not been able to clinch a decisive victory in Kampuchea and the Soviet Union has not been able to achieve its goal," he said.

The NSC secretary general said Moscow had once again directed its attention to Southeast Asia to eliminate Chinese influence in Indochina and to exert control over the South China Sea and Southeast Asia.

VOFA QUESTIONS 'VICTIM' STATUS OF SRV AN-26 CREW

BK041322 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Violators Are Victims"]

[Text] The case of the Vietnamese military aircraft, type Antonov-26, which violated Thai airspace and crash-landed at Prong Saeng village, Sa Kaeo District, over 50 kilometers from the Thai-Kampuchean border is well known. Given the free press which exists in Thailand, this incident has been widely covered both by the local and international, although the Vietnamese public possibly would have only heard its government's version, if at all. The crew members of the Antonov-26, and later the Vietnamese Government, have stated that the plane, which took off from Phnom Penh, was on a flight taking a route to the east to return to Saigon. It supposedly lost its way, flew west instead into Thailand because visibility was poor. Its equipment was not functioning and had to crash-land because it was running out of fuel.

Thai investigators, however, discovered from interrogation that the pilot and crew of the plane were experienced and had been trained in the Soviet Union. The plane's fuel tanks were half full. The electric compass and other guidance mechanisms as well as communication system on the plane were in good working order, and the plane had a good navigational map.

Since these facts contradicted the story given by the pilot and the crew, and similarily restated by a senior Vietnamese Foreign Ministry official to the Royal Thai Embassy in Hanoi, it was decided not to return the plane and crew members, keeping them in custody pending a detailed investigation. The military plane had violated Thai airspace, entering Thailand without permission, and had threatened Thai security at a time when many incidents violating Thai territory had occurred along the Kampuchean border.

Thailand has every right to detain the plane and its crew. It is rather comical therefore that in contacts with the Royal Thai Embassy in Hanoi on this matter, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry should in its note refer to the Antonov-26 crew as victims, such as the Vietnamese ambassador in Thailand has not been able to meet the victims, and the Vietnamese Government requests the Thai Government to arrange for the Vietnamese ambassador to see all the victims, both the injured and uninjured. All these appeared in the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY's press release dated 23 February.

Assuming that the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry or the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY has not made a mistake in translation, we would like to know what the pilot and the crew members of the Antonov-26 plane are victims of. If you are a victim you have to be a victim of something. The plane and the crew violated Thai airspace and crash-landed in Thailand over 50 kilometers from the Thai-Kampuchean border. The Vietnamese Foreign Ministry and the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY called the plane crew members victims. The wreck of the plane is still there over 50 kilometers from the border for anyone to see. Either the Vietnamese foreign minister's English is very bad or it is a very poor attempt at trying to twist everything around again. One cannot help but think it is the latter because in the very same published note it is stated that the Vietnamese ambassador in Bangkok informed the Thai Foreign Ministry of the incident when in fact it was the Foreign Ministry who called the Vietnamese ambassador in and told him about the violation of Thai airspace by the Vietnamese plane and its crash. Violators are the victims. That is a strange one.

SHAN ARMY PLANS REVENGE STRIKE ON HILLSIDE TRIBES

BK050702 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 5 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] Rebels of the Shan United Army (SUA) are rallying their forces inside Burma in what Thai authorities believe to be a preparation for assaults on four hilltribe groups which they accused of supporting the recent government offensive against their stronghold at Ban Hin Taek in Chiang Rai.

Informed sources in Bangkok quoted intelligence reports from Chiang Rai as saying that the Shan rebels also asked the Thai Government not to interfere because it was "an internal hilltribe affair." The sources said that the Shan rebels had accused four hilltribe groups of "serving the Americans" in the offensive against Ban Hin Taek in late January.

The four minority groups which are targets of their assault are Ai Chiangsu, Thaen Chu Yong, Ma Sang and Lo Wu Chu groups which the SUA rebels said had also failed to help them fight against the central government in Burma.

The Shan rebels are under the leadership of Khun Sa, a notorious drug kingpin, who had fled into Burma after the offensive launched by the government against his army.

The rebels claimed that the military operation was initiated by the Americans and they wanted to take revenge against the hilltribe groups which supported it.

The sources said the threat was contained in letters delivered recently to various government agencies in Mae Sai district of Chiang Rai Province.

The intelligence reports also said that about 3,000 men of SUA are heading for Ban Mae Mo, Tambon Pasang of Mae Chan district in Chiang Rai. They are reportedly rallying at their headquarters about four kms from the Thai border.

Meanwhile, reports from Chiang Mai said that around 200 armed SUA rebels had been conducting "suspicious" military movements in Mae Ai district next to Fang district of the northern city recently. Authorities on the border have been instructed to keep a close watch on their activities, they said.

Last week, officials of the U.S. narcotic control unit visited Ban Hin Taek -- the scene of heavy fighting which ended with the capture of Khun Sa's stronghold -- to talk with senior local authorities. The sources said that the U.S. officials offered financial assistance to develop the village -- which was renamed Ban Hoet Thai -- and the nearby areas in Mae Chan district.

MILITIAMEN RESIST PRC ATTACK IN SRV WATERS

OW041457 Hanoi VNA in English 1444 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 4 -- AT 12 a.m. on March 3, 1982, the Chinese authorities sent 40 vessels into Vietnamese territorial waters. These vessels intruded 4 to 10 nautical miles into Vietnamese waters off the river mouths of Ron, Gianh and Nhat Le in Binh Tri Thien Province, central Vietnam. They attacked and damaged a Vietnamese fishing boat. Militiamen on board Vietnamese fishing vessels firmly resisted the Chinese intruding ships, setting ablaze three of them and capturing another near Con Co Island in Binh Tri Thien.

SRV Protest Note

BK051030 Hanoi International Service in English 1004 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] On 2 and 3 March the Chinese authorities sent some 40 armed vessels into Vietnamese territorial waters. These vessels intruded from 4-10 nautical miles into Vietnamese waters from (Dong Don) to Con Co Islands in Binh Tri Thien Province to carry out espionage and provocations and obstruct the normal life of the Vietnamese fishermen.

In a note sent to the Chinese Embassy in Hanoi on Friday, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry vehemently condemned these serious actions, which violated the sovereignty and territorial waters and threatened the security of Vietnam. The note said: The Vietnamese people are determined to excercise their legitimate right of self-defense to defend the sovereignty and territorial integrity. The Chinese side must bear full responsibility for all consequences of their hostile actions against Vietnam.

AFP: DEFECTOR SEES NO CHANCE FOR CHANGE IN SRV

NC031127 Paris AFP in English 1045 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Geneva, 3 Mar (AFP) -- Chinese and Western efforts have no chance of changing the situation in Vietnam, according to former senior Veitnamese communist official Nguyen Tuong Lai in a Swiss newspaper interview published today. At the same time, he said, the Soviet Union doled out just enough aid "to keep Hanoi on the level of a vassal and to prevent Vietnam from becoming too powerful."

The newspaper, LA SUISSE, said Nguyen Tuong Lai, after working clandestinely for the Vietcong during the Vietnam war and then running a re-education camp, was now the highest placed Vietnamese to have fled the country. Vietnam's economy, he said in the interview, had been weakened since "those who are its productive strength" were sent to war. But the problem for the Vietnamese refugee was not getting used to deprivation, because the people dreamed of regaining not their comfort but their liberty. A resistance network existed, he said, but could perhaps take 30 years to become effective.

According to LA SUISSE, as a native of the former South Vietnam he had held several important posts in the underground network in the south before Vietnamese reunification, and in 1968 took over intelligence and secret police activities. After the Vietnamese war ended in 1975, he was eventually demoted due to his South Vietnamese roots and "leniency towards capitalist of the former regime." In the interview he said his case was typical since South Vietnamese cadres, even after years of communist struggle, were completely mistrusted and discriminated against on all levels. But few of them managed to flee the country, he added.

CONFERENCE OF MARINE PRODUCTS SECTOR HELD

BK041104 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 11 Feb 82 pp 1, 4

[Text] The marine products sector recently held a conference in Hanoi to review the implementation of the 1981 State Plan, draw valuable experiences obtained from organizational and guidance activities, and discuss ways and steps to be taken to implement the 1982 State Plan satisfactorily.

Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers; and Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers visited and addressed the conference.

The conference heard Comrade Nguyen Tien Trinh, minister of marine products, and representatives of many localities and production units report on their activities, and unanimously noted that in 1981, cadres and workers in the entire sector and fishermen in many areas throughout the country overcame many difficulties in materials, fuel, weather and seasonal schedules. They seethingly emulated in learning and creatively applying the many valuable experiences obtained by the Vung Tau-Con Dao state-run fishing enterprise in overfulfilling the state plan in all respects. They succeeded in ending the decline in production which occurred for the past 4 or 5 consecutive years, thus creating favorable conditions for the fishery sector to achieve gradual and steady growth.

The marine products sector recorded 599,840 tons in gross production volume. This exceeded the annual target by 2.7 percent and showed an increase of 19 percent over 1980. Of this amount, salt water fish constituted 420,000 tons, and fresh water fish accounted for 180,000 tons. The amount of products purchased and delivered to the state amounted to 187,000 tons, thus exceeding the planned target by 4.25 percent and showed an increase of 26 percent over 1980.

Regarding exports, the sector overfulfilled the state plan by slightly more than 40 percent, showed an increase of 70 percent over 1980 and nearly attained the level of 1976 -- the year in which the sector's export reached its highest level.

In 1980 the entire sector had only seven localities and five state-run units which had either fulfilled or overfulfilled the norms for catching salt water fish -- two localities which had completely fulfilled the plan for breeding and cultivating marine life, and four localities and units which had attained the norms for the purchase of marine products. Compared with this, in 1981 there were 11 localities and 13 state-run units at the central and local levels fulfilling or overfulfilling the planned norms for catching salt water fish, 7 localities completely fulfilling the plan for breeding and cultivating marine life, 13 localities and units attaining or exceeding the planned norms for the purchase of marine products, and 20 out of 24 frozen food enterprises overfulfilling the planned targets for processing export goods and for foreign currency value.

In 1981 the Vung Tau-Con Dao state-run fishing enterprise satisfactorily practiced the system of "giving general contracts for end-products to each trawler unit and distributing income on an 'each according to his work' and 'per trip' basis."

They scored outstanding achievements in exploiting more than 21,000 tons of marine products, which exceeded the planned norms by 40 percent and represented an increase of 50 percent over 1980. The individual production output figure of fishermen reached the 32-ton mark, an increase of 6 tons over 1980. Proceeds delivered to the state amounted to slightly more than 4.8 million dong, an increase of 52 percent over 1980.

Thuan Hai Province -- a key fishery unit of the sector which had consistently shown poor production results for years -- surged forward vigorously in 1981. By conducting integrated fishing activities and shifting from one fishing ground to another according to seasonal schedules, the province succeeded in catching 63,000 tons of fish. This exceeded the planned target by 8 percent and showed an increase of 47 percent over 1980. By organizing combined fishing activities and by eliminating the through-subsidy administrative management system in a flexible and bold manner, three fishing provinces in central Vietnam far exceeded the planned norms: Phu Khanh Province recorded 34,000 tons against the planned target of 17,000 tons; Nghia Binh Province recorded 24,000 tons against the planned target of 16,000 tons; and Quang Nam-Danang recorded 30,000 tons against the planned target of 16,000 tons.

The movement to emulate the Vung Tau-Con Dao state-run fishing enterprise increasingly developed in diverse forms. The movement to build Uncle Ho's fish ponds -- which has been taking on ever larger dimensions and is now showing increasingly better qualities -- served as a driving force for the growth of the fish-raising industry. Many districts in mountainous and midland provinces such as Muong Lay (in Lai Chau), Son Duong (in Ha Tuyen) Qand Trang Dinh (in Lang Son) and Lai Chau City achieved a rapid growth in their fish-raising industry, thus contributing to ensuring the locally available source of fish supply. In Thanh Son District (of Vinh Phu) and A Luoi District (of Binh Tri Thien), between 75-80 percent of the total families engaged in fish raising. Nghia Binh Province succeeded in securing the spawning of Tom Bac shrimps through artificial insemination after 4 months of breeding, and ensuring that Tom Bac shrimps meet export standards. A number of localities and units evolved a form of joint enterprise between the state and cooperatives and between cooperatives and cooperative members' families as part of their efforts to make full use of all water ponds and lakes to raise and protect fish. Many units achieved high economic results in combining the raising of fish, pigs and ducks with the planting of rice.

The conference spent a great deal of time exchanging views, investigating the causes of shortcomings and drawing a number of major experiences as follows:

-- The entire sector has made initial changes in organizational work and in guidance for implementation. It has boldly shifted from the through-subsidy administrative management system to the profit-and-loss economic accounting system which has brought realistic results. Particularly, it has expanded many contractual and reward forms. In a spirit of self-reliance, all sectors, provinces, cooperatives and enterprises have been trying to meet their own needs.

-- Despite the shortage of fuel, materials, funds and foreign currency, the sector has skillfully concentrated on guiding the making of capital investments in key profitable projects, fishing grounds and highly productive methods.

-- Initial progress has been made in satisfactorily exploiting the relations between materials and capital and between agreed-upon prices and directed prices and in creatively exploiting all purchase methods to gather products into the state's hands at a time when prices have not been stabilized.

The direction and tasks of the marine products sector for 1982 will consist of: promoting a spirit of self-reliance; developing production in all respects; stepping up the exploitation, raising and cultivation of marine life; satisfactorily organizing the purchase and processing of marine products in order to contribute actively to ensuring the supply of food for society, especially for cadres, workers and the armed forces, and for export; continuing to shift vigorously to the profit-and-loss business accounting system; renovating economic management; applying widely all forms of contractual work and rewards; regarding export as a spearhead with which to struggle step-by-step to balance itself economically and to make more contributions to and accumulate more wealth for the state; continuing to establish and perfect various policies and systems, especially economic incentive policies, in order to encourage production and trade; economizing on the use of materials, fuel and capital; rationally using existing manpower and materials in order to build the material bases of the sector; continuing to transform the southern fishery sector; and consolidating and perfecting socialist production relations in order to comprehensively fulfill all the 1982 norms for catching, raising, cultivating, processing, turning in and exporting marine life.

Various localities and production units in the entire sector have signed agreements to emulate each other and to pledge to help each other to fulfill the 1982 State Plan outstandingly.

Addressing the conference, Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, praised the marine products sector for its initial but very encouraging achievements as well as for its overfulfillment of the 1981 State Plan -- exceeding the 1980 targets for catching salt water fish, raising fresh-water fish, purchasing, processing, turning in to the state, and exporting marine products. The vice chairman said: last year's achievements attest to the efforts of fishermen and of cadres and office and manual workers in the sector and demonstrate a determination to end the decline in production of the fishery sector and to create a new trend for the fishery sector to develop more positively and steadily. Despite greater difficulties encountered in 1981 than in 1980 and the preceding years because of the shortage of state-supplied materials, gasoline and oil, the marine products sector managed to record even greater achievements than in 1980. One of the most important and prevailing factors for this success was that the marine products sector had made initial efforts to shift from the through-subsidy administrative system to the profit-and-loss business accounting system. Many localities were reported to have achieved good results in applying various contractual and award forms. Many localities and units managed to support themselves with the materials they needed for production without relying on the state. We must study such lessons of experience and new factors so that we can effectively organize and guide the implementation of the state plans for 1982 and the years ahead.

After pointing out some of the shortcomings and deficiencies of the marine products sector and authorities at various echelons and of related sectors -- such as the fact that the reorganization of fishery among the people is slow and unsteady; the leadership over the task of shifting from the non-accounting administrative management to the system of socialist business accountability has not been strong enough; the task of scientific and technical research has not been linked closely with production realities; the organization of the sector machinery is still heavy and ineffective; and so on -- Vice Chairman Vo Chi Cong raised the two most important duties of the marine products sector for 1982: to contribute increasingly better to supplying food to the people and to concentrate the source of marine products in supporting exports.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong continued: The sector must struggle to overfulfill the 1982 State Plan norm by 10 to 15 percent in catching both salt- and fresh-water fish and in processing and exporting marine products so that by 1985 the targets achieved in 1976 (800,000 tons of marine products) will be attained again. We must review and learn from our past experiences by finding out why our production results were higher in 1981 than in 1980 when we received more materials, gasoline and oil from the state than in 1981.

Was the success mainly due to the fact that in 1981 the marine products sector had effectively and creatively applied the directives and resolutions of the party and state to the real production situation, initially shifting from the non-accounting administrative method to the system of business accountability? On this basis, we should continue to study and apply the directives and resolutions of the state and party more effectively. At the same time, we should expand and improve upon the various forms and contracts and bonuses in production and business units of the sector. We should combine manual labor closely with mechanized work and many other jobs on a trawler.

We should continue to vigorously accelerate the socialist transformation of fishery in the south, and actively consolidate the fishing cooperatives in the north. The transformation and reorganization of fishery in the south must be in line with the concrete situation and each specific job. We must mainly organize production cooperation groups or small cooperatives, absorbing fishermen into production solidarity teams. We must combine fishery with agriculture and forestry, and production closely with processing, collection and purchasing activities. We must link the implementation of contracts with the organization of production cooperation groups, duly paying attention to the economy of fishermen's families. We must concentrate on consolidating and developing the raising of marine products, and study and formulate policies to encourage cooperatives and peasants to use fully all of the water surface in raising fish, making fish raising a mass movement to meet the demand for food locally, especially in the mountainous regions.

We must accelerate exports vigorously, considering it one of the two most important tasks of the sector. Besides shrimp and cuttlefish -- the two main products at present -- we should pay attention to exploiting other special products including fresh-water products and those commodities which can be exported in large amounts. We must expand our exports to many markets, primarily to obtain foreign exchange in order to buy the necessary equipment for the sector.

The conferees were elated at receiving Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, who addressed the conference. On behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers, he warmly commended the marine products sector for overfulfilling the 1981 State Plan comprehensively. He expressed his pleasure over the achievements scored by the marine products sectors in a time of difficulties, both those common to other sectors and those specifically relating to this sector. He particularly commended the Vung Tau-Con Dau fishing company (Vung Tau-Con Dap special zone) and its director, Huynh Van Ve, for the outstanding achievements recorded in 1981 and the previous years and for the valuable experiences given to the marine products and other sectors. He specified: With these initial achievements, the marine products sector can and should surge forward to overfulfill the 1982 State Plan definitely much better than the 1981 plan.

The whole sector must successfully and outstandingly implement the tasks of catching and raising marine products in order to increase rapidly the source of food supply to the people, especially in various cities and industrial complexes, including the capital of Hanoi. At present, excluding the state-owned Vung Tau-Con Dao fishing company which has achieved an annual production volume of 32 tons of marine products per capita, the output of marine products exploitation and raising is generally still low, very low in some localities. We must quickly increase the productivity of exploiting and raising marine products in order to achieve a large production volume.

The chairman analyzed the significance of exports in general and the export of marine products in particular, and the organic relations between export and imports and the development of the marine products sector.

He specified: As we have a large and abundant source of marine products, our export potential is great. At present, our volume of export marine products is still scattered and too small compared with demand and our potential. All cadres, workers and people must be made to realize the importance of exports. At the same time, we should institute an incentive policy designed to concentrate optimally the source of marine products for export. The collection and purchase of export marine products must be organized, guided and centralized in a unified manner. All malpractices in exports must be ended.

Chairman Pham Van Dong continued: To fulfill these two tasks well, intensive efforts should be made by the whole sector to consolidate and develop the forces of cooperatives and state-run installations which are the two organizations most important to the tasks of exploiting, raising, collecting, purchasing and exporting marine products in the immediate as well as the distant future. At the same time, there must be satisfactory policies and measures to encourage all people capable of exploiting marine products to engage in raising such products. With respect to fresh water fish raising, we should make it a widespread movement throughout the country. The scientific and technical tasks should be developed consistently to apply technical innovations to production including the tasks of exploiting, processing, conserving and exporting marine products. The training of cadres, especially scientific, technical and managerial cadres should be conducted well. Particularly, the marine products sector should recapitulate the experiences in its 1981 success to evolve proper conclusions which will be broadly disseminated for application.

The sectors' forces should be positively and comprehensively prepared so that in the coming years they will be able to conduct for offshore operations.

Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong devoted some time to hearing the chiefs of marine products services from Phu Khanh, Nghe Tinh, Nghia Binh, Minh Hai and Thuan Hai Provinces, and of the marine products export company report on their 1981 performances in exploiting, collecting, purchasing and exporting marine products, and on the 1982 tasks, targets and measures to implement the 1982 State Plan successfully.

On behalf of the conferees and the marine products sector, Marine Products Minister Nguyen Tien Trinh pledged to develop the successes of 1981, uphold the revolutionary offensive spirit and spirit of self-reliance, and resolutely fulfill and overfulfill the 1982 State Plan, scoring achievements to greet the Fifth VCP Congress and respond to the concern of the party Central Committee, the Council of Ministers and its chairman, Pham Van Dong.

NHAN DAN URGES REARRANGEMENT IN PRODUCTION

[NHAN DAN 3 March editorial: "Rearrange Production and Construction Installations"]

[Text] In advancing from small to large-scale production, we have to overcome gradually imbalances in the economy of our country.

We must organize production and construction in line with the specific material conditions in our country in order to secure stability gradually and increase economic results. By considering the results of our survey and correctly assessing our realistic potentials in terms of energy, materials and capital and even in terms of our managerial and operational control abilities, we should rearrange production and construction installations in accordance with rational priorities in order to exploit to the fullest extent possible the production capacities of our national economy. We should implement effective measures to step up production vigorously, increase labor productivity and meet the demands of the people's livelihood while accumulating assets for expanding production.

Production installations will be relocated and rearranged. Key installations will be assured of the priority issue of sufficient energy and materials. Those installations which cannot receive such assurances by the state, will be authorized to run their production and business operations independently in accordance with appropriate formulas or else change their production guidelines and product projects.

Those installations which are totally deprived of production conditions, must stop their operation. Thier cadres and workers will be shifted to other jobs. With regard to products, they are also divided into three categories: Products of high development priority; products to be developed at normal rate; and products of which the production must be reduced or stopped.

The general purpose of this rearrangement is to implement the new system of business and accounting a management broadly, bringing about a higher gross social product and national income, greater economic results, reduced production costs, fully exploited potentials and ever increasing social labor productivity.

With regard to industrial and agricultural production installations, the main guideline is to concentrate the material conditions -- in terms of energy, supplies, raw materials and transport -- on accelerating the production of commodities which support the people's livelihood, export and national defense. These are installations which produce grain and food products, and export industrial crops, such staple consumer commodities as cloth, paper medicines, bicycles and spare parts, and products of such heavy industries as electricity, coal, petroleum, chemical, ferilizer, engineering and so forth.

The capital construction installations will be rearranged in line with the investment capability, ensuring the fulfillment of expanded reproduction requirements in accordance with the economic development guidelines and objectives prescribed in the Third 5-Year Plan and for subsequent years.

Effective measures should be applied to overcome the scattering of investment and delays in construction work, and to concentrate on major projects. No further investment will be made in the construction of new projects when the production installations of the same kind have not fully used their capacity.

The rearrangement of production and construction installations is linked closely to the reorganization of a part of the social labor and to the rational distribution of national income. The number of people not directly engaged in production must be reduced. The state machinery must be compact and effective. All sources of social labor should be tapped and used effectively. The distribution of national income is determined on the basis of a rational relationship between accumulation and consumption, through encouraging production and thrifty practice, ensuring the workers' livelihood, and restraining the income of people dealing in illicit business.

Production installations of the entire national economy must be rearranged. This is an immediate major task of all sectors and authorities at all echelons. Under the unified and centralized leadership of the party and state, all sectors and authorities at all echelons are dutybound to uphold their sense of responsibility and coordinate their action in the common interests of the country and the people's livelihood in order to organize this important task in an adequate and detailed manner.

AUSTRALIA

FRASER DEFENDS CARRIER-PURCHASE DECISION

BK280915 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 28 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Mr Fraser has defended the government's decision to buy the British aircraft carrier HMS Invincible, saying the ship would be an exceptionally potent deterrent to any potential aggressor. Mr Fraser said the Invincible would contribute significantly to the needs of a balanced defense force and Australia's security.

The prime minister said that in view of present international tension, the government intended that Australia should be fully equipped to contribute to the strengthening of the Western alliance. Australia, in alliance with New Zealand and the United States, had a crucial role in the Pacific and Indian Oceans where advanced antisubmarine warfare capability was essential.

Mr Fraser described the aircraft carrier as a modern and sophisticated ship which would enhance Australia's ability to deter aggression for decades ahead.

OPPOSITION LEADER: DEVALUE DOLLAR TO OFFSET DEBT

BK040946 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] The federal opposition leader, Mr Hayden, says Australia is about to be submerged in an unpayable national debt because of overseas borrowing to prop up the dollar. Campaigning for a by-election in Sydney, Mr Hayden again called for devaluation of the Australian dollar as the only way of improving the country's balance of payments problem.

He said Australia's reserves of foreign currency was dangerously low and only a high-level of taxation was paying off the national debt. Mr Hayden said Australia's present overseas debt was about a $5,000 million or about U.S. $5,400 million. He said this figure would rise by about 10 percent in a few months. Mr Hayden said Australia had only about $800 million in foreign currency, which meant that the national debt amounted to about $1,200 for each Australian household.

PAPUA NEW GUINEA

PREMIER DEFENDS PROSECUTION OF U.S. BOAT CREW

BK041319 Hong Kong AFP in English 0254 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Port Moresby, 4 Mar (AFP) -- Papua New Guinea Prime Minister Sir Julius Chan said today that his country's prosecution of the crew of an American fishing boat, The Danica, for fishing within the country's 200-mile limit, was "completely in accordance with international practice. He also noted the debate in the Australian Senate of February 23, during which opposition senators [words indistinct] Australia supported Papua New Guinea's action and if Australia would take similar action in similar circumstances.

Senator Fred Chafe, said Sir Julius, replied that Australia had the same claim to territorial waters as Papua New Guinea, and imposed much the same restrictions. Sir Julius pointed out that the debate indicated that Australia was one country that supports Papua New Guinea's stand on the matter.

Meanwhile, The Dania is still impounded as a result of the decision by a magistrate court on Saturday with as yet no sign of any change in her status. [passage indistinct]

MINISTER WARNS AGAINST UNDERMINING ELECTIONS

BK241051 Jakarta OANA in English 1001 GMT 24 Feb 82

["Pool item"]

[Text] Jakarta, 24 Feb (OANA/ANTARA) -- The pancasila democratic system is the right system for Indonesia because it is capable of uniting the Indonesian people and guarantees a balanced development leading towards public welfare of the people, Home Affairs Minister Amir Makhmud stressed Monday [22 February] afternoon.

The success of the Indonesian people in implementing development under a stable and orderly situation was possible because of the development of a strong political structure, the pancasila political democratic structure, the minister added when formally inaugurating a housing complex at Nisalak, Cipedes Subdistrict, Tasikmalaya.

He repeatedly stressed that the Indonesian people were strongly opposed to communism, the social democratic system and the Islamic system a la Kartosuwiryo or the capitalist system because these systems would only divide the nation, would not ensure a balance development process and only cause misery to the people.

The Indonesian people do not want their stability disrupted, development obstructed and neither do they want division among themselves but firm unity, the minister said. He said the desires of the Indonesian people would only be ensured by pancasila democracy.

After entering into details about the systems denounced by the Indonesian people, the minister then warned that there were dangerous political indications not published in newspapers including attempts at undermining the coming general elections in May and then after failure in these attempts to continue with designs to obstruct the results of the congress and even attempts to torpedo the coming 5-year plans (pelita) of the country.

Based on these indications the minister called on the people and particularly the younger generation to be on constant alert against eventual attempts at undermining the state from various quarters. He said the younger generation should not fall asleep and dream happily that the country would remain stable as attempts at undermining definitely would be coming from various quarters.

He repeatedly urged for efforts at the strengthening and promotion of the pancasila democracy system in the interest of the country's future wellbeing. "It will be empty talk if we speak of legacy if what we are leaving behind would be merely political time bombs whose indications would plunge towards social democracy, communism or a la Kartosuwiryo Islam, capitalism or feudalist compartments of the country. We must continue strengthening pancasila democracy," Minister Amir Makhmud declared.

SOURCES SAY PORTCALL POLICY FOR U.S. TO CONTINUE

OW060503 Tokyo KYODO in English 0452 GMT 6 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 6 (KYODO) -- Japan's policy of refusing port calls of U.S. warships carrying nuclear weapons will never be altered, Foreign Ministry sources here said Saturday. The sources were commenting on testimony by Adm. James Watkins, commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, at congressional public hearings Friday. Watkins made it clear the U.S. Navy intends to deploy the new Tomahawk cruise missile [in the] Pacific.

The sources said the Foreign Ministry has not been notified by the U.S. Government concerning the Tomahawk deployment program. They said the government would act in accordance with its three nonnuclear principles and refuse entry into Japanese ports of any U.S. warships carrying the Tomahawk.

However, observers believe the plan to deploy the missiles in the Pacific is certain to increase suspicion about the possible entry of U.S. warships carrying nuclear weapons into Japan. It could also cause controversy in the Diet in connection with the argument for review of the three nonnuclear principles of not possessing, manufacturing and introducing nuclear arms, the observers said.

SAKURAUCHI TO SEEK U.S. AGREEMENT ON LAW OF SEA

OW070829 Tokyo KYODO in English 0733 GMT 7 Mar 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, March 7 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will try to coordinate the views of the United States and Japan on reaching agreement at the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea, officials said Sunday.

Sakurauchi, scheduled to visit the U.S. late this month, will seek U.S. understanding and cooperation toward reaching a comprehensive agreement on the sea law during his meeting with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, they said.

The Japanese and U.S. Governments have so far held working-level meetings on the U.N. sea law conference, but the Sakurauchi-Haig meeting will be the first occasion to adjust views at a political level. Coming at a time when the U.S. sea law conference will start its 11th session in New York from March 9 for eight weeks, the bilateral talks will have much impact on the outcome of the international conference.

CONCESSIONS SAID POSSIBLE IN U.S. AVIATION TALKS

OW051253 Tokyo KYODO in English 1229 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 5 (KYODO) -- Both Japan and the United States are eager to iron out their civil air transport differences at their ninth round of aviation talks in San Francisco March 10-19, informed sources said Friday. Quoting a high placed Transport Ministry official, the sources said both sides were afraid that should their talks on the revision of their civil aviation agreement break down, Tokyo and Washington might take retaliatory sanctions that could seriously harm bilateral relations as a whole.

They said the U.S. had left no doubt that the aviation issue was inseparable from its current demand of greater access to the Japanese market. This demand has become a focal point of intensified economic friction between the two nations and stems from Japan's massive trade surplus with the U.S.

Tokyo's desire to break the prolonged deadlock on the aviation issue is reflected in the high level of its delegation to the San Francisco talks, the sources said. The delegation will be led by Japanese Ambassador in Washington Yoshio Okawara and Vice Transport Minister Shiro Nakamura.

For its part, the U.S. let it be known that should the coming talks break down, it would conduct no more talks for the time being, they said.

The talks, they said, will deal primarily with landing points, the right to fly beyond specified landing points and adjustment of seating capacity, the three problems on which Japan and the U.S. remained wide apart at the previous round of talks in Tokyo in January this year.

At the present series of talks, started in September 1980, Japan has persistently pressed for correction of what it labels as "inequalities" especially concerning air routes and beyond rights for Japan Air Lines (JAL), the flag carrier. The U.S., however, has stood pat on its assertion that the present agreement has no such inequalities. At the same time, it has demanded permission for United Air Lines (UA) to inaugurate regular flights into this country, as well as drastic liberalization of the air fare system and the capacity adjustment formula.

The sources noted that the air talks, which have lasted for one and a half years, have already brought the respective positions of Tokyo and Washington into sharp focus. Besides, they said, a rupture of the talks could revive the now-frozen sanctions mutually imposed by Tokyo and Washington because of their divergence of views over the problem of UA's service to Japan.

The U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) had earlier decided to take sanctions against JAL in reprisal for Tokyo's failure to allow regular UA flights to Japan. This was followed by similar measures by Tokyo against American Airlines.

The Japanese Government, the informants said, are particularly concerned that the mutual sanctions, if carried out, could heighten tensions between the two countries all the more seriously because of the current intensified friction in bilateral trade relations. The sources, therefore, did not rule out the possibility of major Japanese concessions regarding the liberalizaiton of the air fare system and the capacity adjustment formula provided the U.S. was ready to give some ground regarding landing points and beyond rights.

On Friday, meanwhile, the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's ad hoc committee on aviation policy decided to ask the government for maximum possible efforts to establish an equitable relationship in the bilateral air transport at the coming talks in San Francisco. The committee agreed that Japan should seek to rectifiy "inequalities" on the principle of equal opportunities as well as fair and orderly competition, party sources said.

SUZUKI SEEKS EUROPEAN ACCEPTANCE OF TARIFF CUTS

OW051313 Tokyo KYODO in English 1250 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 5 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Friday instructed the leader of the ruling Liberal-Democratic party's economic mission to Western Europe to try and win greater understanding of Tokyo's recent decision to carry out drastic tariff cuts, determined at the Tokyo round of multilateral trade talks, ahead of schedule.

The decision, aimed at mitigating trade friction with other countries, is not duly appreciated, he told Masumi Esaki, chairman of the LDP's Special Committee on International Economic Relations. Esaki's group will depart for Western Europe next Wednesday on a mission to placate European Community (EC) leaders who are vociferously complaining about the huge trade deficit with this country.

Tokyo recently decided to implement all of the tariff cuts scheduled for three years -- fiscal 1982 to 1984 -- as from April this year, the start of fiscal 1982.

PROTEST LODGED ON 5 MAR SR-71 'INFILTRATION'

SK051614 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1550 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 5 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors who are rendering the situation strained while escalating their war preparations against the northern half of the republic committed a vicious act of military provocation by infiltrating again the high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane "SR-71" into the air above the Kangnyong Peninsula, southewestern part of South Hwanghae Province of our country, at around 15 hours 54 minutes on March 5. Earlier, at around 15 hours 34 minutes, they committed a grave military provocation by sending the spy plane into the air within the military boundary east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country.

The aerial espionage of the U.S. imperialist aggressors against the northern half of the republic is becoming more frequent at a time when the war exercises "Team Spirit 1982" in which they are massively hurling aggression forces in succession into South Korea are entering a more frantic stage. On March 4 and 5 alone, the U.S. imperialist aggressors sent their spy planes into the air of our country on five occasions.

It is entirely thanks to our peace-loving policy and patient efforts that peace is preserved in Korea now, despite the new war provocation manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialist aggressors being escalated in Korea. The entire Korean people and the world peace-loving people are keenly watching the U.S. imperialist warmaniacs leading the situation in Korea to the brink of war.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors should act with discretion, deeply mindful what judgment history passed on those who ran riot, indulged in war and aggression in the past. If they obstinately continue along the road of war, sticking to the policy of aggression against our people, in spite of our repeated warnings, they will only face a stern judgement by history.

LETTER SENT TO MAC PROTESTING SR-71 FLIGHTS

[Text] Kaesong, March 6 (KCNA) -- Major General of the Korean People's Army Han Chu-kyong, senior member of the Korean People's Army-the Chinese People's Volunteers side to the Military Armistice Commission, on March 6 sent a letter of protest to Rear Admiral of the U.S. Navy James G. Storms, senior member of the U.N. forces side to the MAC in connection with the continued aerial espionage committed by U.S. imperialism. The letter says:

I send this letter to you in connection with the grave aerial espionage committed by your side every day. Your side infiltrated the high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance pland "SR-71" deep into the air above the Kangnyong Peninsula on the western coast of our country at around 15 hours 54 minutes on March 5, 1982, to commit espionage against our side. Earlier, at around 15 hours 34 minutes, your side committed a grave military provocation by sending the high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane "SR-71" into the air above the coastal sea east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country.

Your espionage acts by the spy plane "SR-71" have numbered 17 since February 13 when your side started the military exercises codenamed "Team Spirit 1982." Such intrusion into the air space and aerial espionage on your part are a blatant encroachment upon the sovereignty of our country and a grave violation of article 15 of the armistice agreement.

Nevertheless, you openly blare that you will continue with the aerial espionage against our side, describing it as a "lawful duty" and so on. This is a brigandish outburst vividly revealing the true colour of your side as an aggressor and interventionist.

It is a dangerous military provocation which may lead the situation to an irrevocable pass that your side commits the aerial espionage against our side more frequently while bringing the situation of our country to the utmost pitch of strain by staging the war exercises "Team Spirit 1982" against the northern half of the republic with the mobilization of huge aggression forces.

You must act with discretion, pondering over the possible consequences of your hare-brained aerial espionage. Lodging a stern protest against your side committing espionage with continued infiltration of the high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane "SR-71" into the airspace of our country, I strongly demand that you promptly take a practical step for stopping it.

DEFENSE MINISTRY REWARDS SOUTH KOREAN SOLDIER

[Text] Pyongyang, March 5 (KCNA) -- Working people in Pyongyang held a meeting at the Moranbong Theatre on March 4 to warmly welcome Han Tong-ku, a soldier of the South Korean puppet army who came over to the northern half of the DPRK. At the meeting the Order of the National Flag Third Class and a monetary prize of the Ministry of People's Armed Forces were awarded to Han Tong-ku.

Wang Kyong-hak, vice-chairman of the Pyongyang Municipal People's Committee, made a welcome speech at the meeting. He warmly welcomed Han Tong-ku, highly praising his coming over to the North as a righteous act for the country and the nation.

In his reply speech Han Tong-ku sincerely extended deepest thanks to the respected fatherly leader President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Mr. Kim Chong-il for having given him the joy and happiness of rebirth. I was a hundred times just in coming over to the DPRK under the guidance of the respected leader President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Mr. Kim Chong-il, he said, and went on: While visiting some time ago historic Mangyongdae where the great leader President Kim Il-song was born, I realized the noble intentions of the great leader who has been devoting his life solely to the freedom and happiness of the people. The great leader devotes his all to the people and the people hold him in high esteem. Herein lies the inexhaustible strength of the northern half of the DPRK, I think.

I also clearly realized that the northern half of the DPRK is a society where all people are evenly well off and the greatest importance is attached to the people. The people in the North are leading a happy life with no worries under the most superior socialist system. This is entirely because the great leader Presidemt Kim Il-song and the dear leader Mr. Kim Chong-il splendidly administer state affairs. CPRF CONDEMNS SOUTH'S SENTENCING OF STUDENTS

[Text] Pyongyang, March 6 (KCNA) -- The Secretariat of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland on March 5 issued Information No. 217 denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan groups fascist repression of progressive youths and students of South Korea which is becoming ever harsher these days. The information says:

The Chon Tu-hwan group passed prison terms ranging from two to seven years on 16 persons including Yi Sang-nok recently at the puppet Pusan District Court on charges of having "read seditious books" and "waged a socialist awakening movement" and in the middle of last month passed a jail term of 3 years upon Pak Yong-chang, a student of Yonsei University, at the puppet Seoul District Criminal Court on the charge of having written a "pro-communist" novel and pasted up an anti-fascist wall paper on the campus.

Noting that the Chon Tu-hwan group's suppression is aimed at checking the awakening of the South Korean youth and students through free circle activities and progressive publications and reducing them to slaves submissive to the fascist repressive rule by detaching them from the road of democracy and reunification, it declared: With no desperate manoeuvres can it alter its shameful doom.

(Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean at 0300 on 6 March carries a rebroadcast of the item entitled "VRPR Ties Kim Chong-il to North-South Dialogue," published in the 5 March Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT on page D 3. This permits the following additions: On page D 3, in the last line of the fourth paragraph, substitute the following for [passage indistinct]: "Anxiously about the health of the dear comrade leader who was concerned with the reunification question, the cadres asked him to sleep for a few hours. Declining their request and looking up at the night sky, the dear comrade leader said: I grieve for the divided fatherland. I cannot sleep at all whenever I think of the reunification of the fatherland. Staying up all night, he contemplated national reunification."

On page D 4, in the last line of the first paragraph, substitute for [passage indistinct]: "Taking advantage of all possibilities and opportunities, the dear comrade leader is positively pioneering the road to reunification. His positive attitude has been shown in the course of North-South dialogue at the beginning of the 1970's. SPORTS EXCHANGES WITH PRC TO BE PROMOTED

[Text] Seoul, March 8 (YONHAP) -- South Korea will open its doors to Mainland China and will promote sports exchanges between the two nations even though they have no diplomatic ties, Foreign Minister No Sin-Yong said Monday. No's remarks came during testimony concerning Foreign Ministry policy before the National Assembly.

No also said his ministry will promote a South Korean presence at nonpolitical international events held in East European communist bloc countries and seek practical expansion of relations with those countries through indirect two-way trade. No said that such a policy was designed so that Seoul could successfully host the 1988 Summer Olympics as well as improve relations with those countries.

No also told the Foreign Affairs Committee of the National Assembly that the government will invite 13 heads of state, two prime ministers and 20 foreign ministers from Latin America and Africa to visit Korea this year as part of the new "invitational diplomacy" policy.

No unveiled a government plan to contribute 250,000 U.S. dollars to Afghan refugees in Pakistan. He also said he hopes to hold a Korean-Pakistan foreign ministers' meeting some time this year in order to improve relations with Islamabad. The government will attempt to establish diplomatic ties with four countries in Central and South America as well as six countries in Africa, No added.

PREMIER NOTES CONCERN OVER OLYMPICS' EXPENSE

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun said yesterday the government will conduct the 1988 Seoul Olympics "within our means and in a substantial manner" to make the games a productive and deficit-free event. Testifying before the National Assembly, Yu also said the government plans to induce North Korea to take part in the upcoming world sports festival by proposing sports exchanges between South and North Korea.

The premier said many people are concerned that the Seoul Olympics may result in a national deficit but he remains confident that the nation can host the event without going into the red, by using existing sports facilities.

Looking forward to a deficit-free Olympics, he said the construction of necessary facilities has already started, and that villages for athletes and newsmen will be sold to citizens when the event is over and that the TV contract for world coverage should be generous. The nation will take advantage of the 1988 Seoul Olympics to launch positive people-to-people diplomacy and introduce its traditional culture to the world, he said.

OFFICIALS DISCUSS ECONOMY AT NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

SK060333 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 6 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpt] Deputy Prime Minister-Minister of Economic Planning Kim Chun-song said yesterday the government will raise the level of import liberalization to that of advanced countries before 1986. To this end, the government will drastically revamp the tariff mechanism, he said.

In reply to lawmakers' economic questions in the plenary National Assembly session, Kim said the government will release 1,679.4 billion won earmarked for public works early, 61.3 percent of it, in the first quarter of this year to invigorate business. Pertinent ministries are working on a change in the farmland tax, and a reform is under way in the method of formulating the national budget to eliminate sources of waste, ineffective subsidies and inefficient projects, he said.

Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun said the government will reduce the projected scale of foreign loans by 1986 by inducing more savings and curbing imports. The government, however, will not change the projects of the Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Development Plan to cut down on the size of foreign loans, he said.

Yu said the foreign capital has played a great role in developing the nation's economy. The premier said the foreign capital accounted for 43.7 percent of all the investments made 1962-1972 but that the figure dwindled to 23.6 percent for 1979-1981. Then he projected the ratio with fall to 13.3 percent by 1986, when the fifth development plan ends.

Seven lawmakers took the floor to interpellate the government on the fourth day of the five-day quiz session.

Touching on business fluctuations, he said the nation's business is not picking up as much as expected and that the government will make a "realistic" approach to rejuvenating the nation's economy in every industrial field. The economic pump-priming package announced Jan. 14 falls short of revitalizing the nation's business conspicuously at the moment but the business will show remarkable signs of recovery after this month, he said. He said he believes the economy will be animated in the latter part of this year as a result of increased domestic consumption and investments. The government will never take any kind of shock measures in an attempt to revitalize the economy, he said.

The premier said the nation should advance the creation of a welfare society by ensuring a steady economic growth and an equitable distribution on the basis of rationalism and free competition in every field. "Abuse of power" will be strictly rejected in the economic sphere, and the government will ease its control and intervention to enable the people to take the economic initiatives, he said. A study has been made since 1977 of a plan to remove the administrative capital, but no progress has been made in the study, and the government does not have a finalized plan for it, he said.

Speaking of the national development project, he said the government will intensively develop 15 major cities including Taegu, Taejon and Kwangju to discourage the concentration in Seoul and Pusan of people and industries. The government will intervene directly in the development of Mts. Taebaek, Chiri and Kaya, and clusters of islands off Yosu in Southern Sea.

CHOSON ILBO SEES IMPROVED TIES WITH U.S.

SK061055 Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 6 Mar 82 p 2

[Article by Kim Tae-chung, editor of political desk of CHOSON ILBO: "Rediscovery of America"]

[Excerpts] Correspondents of Korean newspapers in Washington in the mid-1970's were very busy. They dealt with such issues as the fall of Vietnam, a U.S. troop withdrawal from Korea, bribery scandals and human rights.

As I left Washington in the spring of 1979, I said to myself: Will spring ever come to Washington? Feeling as though I had lived only during autumn and winter in Washington, I never sensed the four seasons. As one who failed to grasp the essence of Korea's obsession with the United States and the fixed ideas of the United States toward Korea, which were slowly changing, I felt like I was in a vacuum.

When I visited Washington 3 years later, I felt the warmth of springtime despite the snow-covered streets and the frozen Potomac. The "political spring" which I had hoped for seemed to have come to Washington. Officials at the U.S. State Department explained: The United States has not abandoned its emphasis on human rights. The atmosphere in which the United States set forth its human rights policy has changed. This is still one of the major U.S. policies. However, the Reagan administration feels it is not desirable to stress this policy to excess. These officials said Korean-U.S. relations are more stable than ever. They inquired enthusiastically about the "situation in Seoul."

The Korean Embassy was quiet. As I climbed the stairs, I encountered strange faces. I felt as though the sound of all the typewriters and telephones had abruptly been silenced. The Korean ambassador to the United States, Yu Pyong-hyon, stressed: It is of significance to our diplomacy that Korea has joined the OAS as an observer. I could not but laugh over his remarks; you see, former Ambassador Ham Pyong-chun could never even have discussed OAS affairs.

Today the views of Korea held by the Americans I met on airplanes, in bars and at parties have changed. Such a phenomenon may be construed as indifference, because U.S. newspapers do not deal with the Korean question. "Is it true Korea has changed a lot?" "How popular is your new president?" and "Is Korea's economy developing as rapidly as before?" -- such were the inquiries I encountered.

I told them that when he met Ambassador Walker prior to his departure for Korea, President Reagan told him: "The first thing you have to do when you arrive is to convince the Korean people the United States will not abandon its defense of Korea at any cost." They responded: "Yes, that is the Reagan style." We could hardly have expected such responses 4 or 5 years earlier. At that time, they might have condemned U.S. policy.

Some remarks, though somewhat exaggerated, reflect Korean-U.S. relations today. A Korean resident in Washington discussed the "quiet Korean-U.S. relations" by saying the "American people are apt to be indifferent or forgetful of issues which are not talked about and debated. The fact that Korean-U.S. relations are quiet and the American people's views toward Korea have changed is desirable. However, I think this is not necessarily good when we look into the future. I do not mean that Korea should be discussed in a bad light by the American people as before. However, I think differences of opinion on trade and other matters should be raised and resolved through negotiations."

Reagan considers the Soviet Union the main target in restoring U.S. power and prestige and preventing the spread of Marxism-Leninism. The United States thinks it should not have poor relations with countries supporting the same line so that its strength can be concentrated against its opponents. This is a pragmatic approach. Reagan's reaffirmation of the defense commitment in Korea is part of this diplomacy.

Nonetheless, it is too easy to try to understand the pragmatic U.S. diplomacy simply by applying the theory that "the enemy's enemy is our friend" and to affirm that "there is no problem in relations with the United States."

GENETIC ENGINEERING INDUSTRY TO BE PROMOTED

[Text] The government plans to help produce all necessary materials such as nucleic acid and enzymes for the creation of genes by the end of next year in a bid to promote development of genetic engineering industries.

Science-Technology Minister Yi Chung-o said yesterday that the government would propel research on DNA to have it take root in the nation. "As an initial program to encourage the DNA industries under a major national policy, the government will select about 10 DNA researchers and send them abroad to learn advanced technology," he testified before the National Assembly.

Answering a question by Rep Ko Ki-nam of the Democratic Justice Party in a plenary session, Minister Yi also replied that "by 1985, the government will cultivate 50 experts in DNA."

"For the effective promotion of the program, the government plans to inaugurate an advisory council on DNA to be composed of Korean scientists abroad," he said.

Rep. Ko made inquiries about the status of the nation's study of DNA, urging the government to concentrate on developing scientific technology in the days ahead.

Our role is therefore to help develop the masses' understanding of the national culture.

Afterwards, Comrade Pen Navouth took the floor to stress that, based on the idea of common struggle between the information, press and culture minister and the Education Ministry, it is a most important task for all concerned to promote the concept of a new man in the new Kampuchean society, which is the future of the nation.

BOU THANG ADDRESSES PROPAGANDA MEETING

BK070446 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] With the aim of successfully implementing the resolution of the third plenary session of the party Central Committee on ideological work and future tasks of the army, the propaganda and education service of the General Political Department has invited propaganda cadres from all provincial military committees, divisions, military schools and military services under the Defense Ministry to a 3-day meeting in order to review the results of the ideological work in the past year and set plans for the 1982 propaganda work.

During the meeting, the participants listended to reports reviewing the results of ideological work in the past year and assessing the strong and weak points concerning the ideological consciousness of cadres in all aspects of work -- combat, study, mass persuasion work, production and particularly in the campaigns to oppose the enemy's psychological warfare. KPRAF cadres and combatants have displayed their progress in many fields. They have been able to distinguish friends from foes. They have struggled resolutely to defend the people and help them, thus winning greater affection and trust from the people.

The participants also listened to reports by model units, such as the 3d Division of Svay Rieng Province and the signal school, concerning their achievements in mass persuasion work, thus enabling the army to succeed in carrying out the mass persuasion task.

The participants also thoroughly discussed the plans for the army's 1982 propaganda and education work in order to enable the armed forces to understand the revolutionary tasks and those of the army; grasp the enemy's maneuvers and tricks; uphold the spirit of genuine patriotism; enhance solidarity and combat cooperation with Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries; behave well as a people's army; improve revolutionary ethics; fight valiantly; and record good achievements in all aspects of work.

The meeting was honored by the visit of Comrade Bout Thang, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense. The comrade appraised the propaganda cadres in the entire army who, despite their youthfulness but due to their efforts to overcome all obstacles, scored outstanding feats in propaganda and education work over the past 3 years.

The comrade also stressed that propaganda work is a significant tool for building new men and a new style of life imbued with genuine patriotism and noble proletarian internationalism and for popularizing the socialist ideals and the line of the Kampuchean revolution. The comrade exhorted all propaganda cadres to study harder in order to score greater feats and successfully implement the resolutions of the fourth party congress and of the third plenary session of the party Central Committee on ideological work and the 1982 tasks of the army.

The comrade stressed: Propaganda and education work must always be on the advance and everyone must be urged to join. Propaganda and education work must be prepared to frustrate on a timely basis the enemy's deceitful propaganda and maneuvers, to expose the complications, defeats and weak points of the enemy, and to enhance rancor against the genocidal Pol Pot clique and other reactionaries. Our army must heighten vigilance and by determined to fight and crush the enemy, defend our revolutionary gains and protect the peaceful and happy life of our people.

BTA SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT INTERVIEWS CHAN VEN

AU051559 Sofia BTA in English 0820 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] Sofia, 5 Mar (BTA) -- "The unceasing provocations of the reactionaries, the maneuvres of imperialism and of the Chinese expansionists are threatening Kampuchea permanently," said Mr Chan Ven, secretary general of the State Council of Kampuchea, before the BTA special correspondent, Mr Svetoslav Terziev. In an interview published in the latest issue of the BTA ROUND THE WORLD weekly, Mr Chan Ven, who is also deputy-chairman of the National Council of the Kampuchean National United Front for National Salvation, underlined that the routing of the forces of Pol Pot and his clique was a blow struck to the Chinese expansionism.

The Soviet Union, Vietnam, Bulgaria and the other fraternal countries, he further said, saved Kampuchea from ruin and, we are confident, will never let her perish. Our contacts with them are of strategic importance.

Mr Chan Ven dwelt on the successes achieved by Kampuchea after the toppling of the Beijing-backed regime of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan. The threat of famine has been overcome. Industry has been revived. The role of artisan crafts has increased. The people's needs in some staple goods have been met and the market is operating normally. Health care has extended its networks from the towns to the remote parts of the country. Orphanages for the children of the victims of Pol Pot regime have been opened in all provinces. There are already 1,500,000 students in Kampuchea and another 400,000 attend literacy courses.

The Marxist-Leninist line of the party, the stability of the people's rule and the help of the fraternal countries are the major preconditions for these successes, said Mr Chan Ven. "In spite of the economic blockade, which the capitalist and some neighboring Asian countries are trying to organize around Vietnam, in the last three years it helped us wholeheartedly -- aiding us materially and giving us the blood of its soldiers, who helped to liberate Kampuchea," said he.

Mr Chan Ven noted that, under the pressure of the United States and the other Western countries, the international organizations have begun to reduce their aid recently. The economic aid has been bound to political conditions.

Mr Chan Ven also pointed out the chief tasks Kampuchea is facing. He said that, first of all, the national economy should be strengthened and unity of the people should be consolidated in the struggle against reaction. The structure of the united front should be developed on the lower levels and its scope should be expanded, putting at least one representative in every village.

The economic restoration should be furthered in order to provide national means for the Kampuchean people. Two main tasks have been set to national agriculture, where the main efforts will be focused -- to ensure the people with food and to produce goods for export.

Lumbering, rubber production and fishing will play an important role in the exports. Plans have been developed for the advancement of the light industry, artisan drafts and banking. "This year we shall depend still on the international help, but in the next four or five years we plan to mark such economic progress which will enable us to provide ourselves the vitally important products and goods for our people," said Mr Chan Ven. He pointed out that a transition to an agrarian reform will be carried out with the help of mutual assistance groups in rural areas.

Women's Association Meeting

[Text] At 0700 on 7 March the Central Committee of the Kampuchean Women's Association held a solemn meeting at the Chattomuk Conference Hall to mark the 72d anniversary of the International Women's Day, 8 March. Among those present were Comrade Chea Sim, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the front's National Council; Comrade Pen Navouth, minister of education; Comrade Heng Teav, member of the front's National Council; member of the Council of State and vice chairman of the Kampuchean Federation of Trade Unions; and Comrade Mrs Mean Saman, member of the front's National Council and chairman of the Kampuchean Women's Association Central Committee. Also present were the chairmen, vice chairmen and members of central ministry, office, factory and enterprise women's associations and many foreign guests.

Opening the meeting, Comrade Mrs Chhuk Chhim, vice chairman of the Kampuchean Women's Association Central Committee, hailed the 72D anniversary of the International Women's Day, 8 March, which Kampuchean women have the opportunity to observe. Afterward, Comrade Mrs Mean Saman made a detailed speech on the significance of the 8 March International Women's Day and talked about the rights and freedom enjoyed by the new Kampuchean women under the glorious five-tiered-temple banner led by the KPRP to work like their male counterparts and to receive pay equal to the men, which is completely different from the former regimes in which the women were exploited and held in contempt. The omrade went on to say that in all revolutionary movements, particularly in the times of the struggle against U.S. imperialism, our women resolutely fought to overcome all difficulties in service of the revolution until winning brilliant victories. At present, like the men, women have the important role and duty to defend and build the country. She stressed that the Kampuchean revolution achieved its great successes in the past few years thanks to the active participation of our women, who dared to sacrifice everything for the nation and people.

Afterward, Comrade Chea Sim highly appreciated the precious heroism of the Kampuchean women in promoting national defense and construction efforts toward achieving brilliant successes. He spoke of the important role and obligations of the women, who not only have to take part in the revolutionary movement, but must also be good mothers in teaching their sons and daughters to follow the correct and good line, to be humble and respectful of their elders and to deserve being socialist children. At the same time, women must also be good wives to their husbands and absolutely prevent them from committing evil actions that may harm themselves and the nation; in particular, they must know how to persuade their husbands, relatives and children to courageously volunteer to serve in the national army. He recommended to all Kampuchean women that the heighten their revolutionary vigilance against enemy maneuvers and raise their sense of patriotism and international solidarity, particularly with Vietnam and Laos, which constitutes the factor favoring the efforts to defend the country and build it into a prosperous state advancing firmly toward genuine socialism.

In conclusion, Comrade Mrs Phlek Piroun, secretary general of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean Red Cross, on behalf of Kampuchean women throughout the country, took the floor to pledge to successfully implement all resolutions of the fourth KPRP Congress and of the third front national congress, as well as the statutes of the Kampuchean Women's Association Central Committee. The meeting proceeded in a joyous and cordial atmosphere of solidarity.

AFP: SON SANN TRYING TO OBTAIN VISA TO BEIJING

NC062214 Paris AFP in English 2157 GMT 6 Mar 82

[Excerpt] Paris, 6 Mar (AFP) -- After a week's wait in Paris, a four-member delegation of the Khmer National Liberation Front (KNLF), led by former Cambodian Prime Minister Son Sann, today had still not obtained requested visas to visit the People's Republic of China.

A delegation member noted that Khmer Rouge Prime Minister Khieu Samphan and former Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk had, during their recent meeting in Beijing, expressed the hope that Son Sann could come to Beijing "as soon as possible." While having agreed to meet separately in Beijing with Prince Sihanouk and Mr Samphan, the KNLF chief has refused to participate in a summit meeting with the two other anti-Vietnamese movements -- Khmer Rouge and Sihanouk.

Son Sann has said he supports the so-called "soft coalition" advocated by ASEAN (Association of South East Asian Nations) members, accepted by Prince Sihanouk and the KNLF, but rejected by the Khmer Rouge.

NATION REVIEW Comments

BK071015 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 7 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot returned from a two-day visit to Vientiane yesterday to announce that both countries had agreed in principle to open up more border checkpoints to further facilitate people-to-people contacts.

Sitthi told reporters upon his return that his delegation had held talks with a team headed by his Laotian counterpart Sisavat Keobounphan. "We agreed during the talks that the Mekong River shouldn't be an obstacle in cementing our relationship," he added.

The minister said that both sides also were in agreement that problems on the Thai-Lao border should be settled at the local level with meetings of provincial committees. "If problems could be resolved at the local level, they would not spread and misunderstanding could be nipped in the bud," the minister added.

A Thai trade mission will be in the Laotian capital today. "We discussed several other issues with the Laotian officials. But we agreed not to issue a joint statement," he said.

The interior minister said that he also met Laotian Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan, who relayed his good wishes to Premier Prem Tinsulanon. "I also invited the Laotian minister to visit Thailand. He accepted it in principle," Sitthi said.

Vientiane has always been pressing Thailand to open up more checkpoints along the border. Details have been discussed at great length at various levels. Laotian Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Phoun Sipaseut, who visited Bangkok in November, last year, also raised the same issue.

Thai-Lao relations have been improving recently following a period of soured ties following a border shooting incident two years ago.

KAMPUCHEAN FIGHTING NEAR THAI BORDER CONTINUES

BK060756 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 6 Mar 82

[Text] According to a report from Aranyaprathet in Prachin Buri Province, fighting inside Kampuchea near the Thai border in Aranyaprathet and Watthana Nakhon Districts continued this morning. Six rounds landed in Thai territory. A Buddhist monk of the Saen Suk monastery in Tambon Thakham, Aranyaprathet District, was wounded.

Heavy fighting has raged inside Kampuchea near Thailand's Aranyaprathet and Watthana Nakhon Districts over the past few days, during which more than a hundred rounds have landed in Thailand. Of this number, 24 rounds hit Khao Saraphi in Aranyaprathet District and Ban Kho Hat in Watthana Nakhon District. Two private dwellings were damaged and a 15 year-old boy was wounded.

On 5 March, the deputy commander of the 9th Army Division, Col Charun Phusanong, and a party of army officers visited the areas hit by the stray rounds. The group came under attack by heavy weapons believed to be fired by the Vietnamese forces. The deputy commander of the 9th Division directed the villagers to take shelter and stayed with them until the firing died down. The deputy commander of the 9th Division later inspected the craters caused by the incoming rounds. Each hole is about 2 meters across and 1 meter deep. The group collected shrapnel samples for tests. The group also advised the people to build proper shelters for protection. The border villagers demonstrated their willingness to cooperate with the military's advice.

VIETNAMESE SAID READY TO MOVE AGAINST PHNUM MALAI

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- Three Vietnamese troop divisions have been moved into Kampuchea's south western border in a move believed to signal a campaign to crush Khmer Rouge guerrillas entrenched in the Phnum Malai and Khao Din mountains, field military sources said yesterday.

An army officer, meanwhile, said he expected Vietnamese troops to launch a decisive attack on the guerrillas' major stronghold in Phnum Malai before April.

He said the move was likely following the seizure last Friday of a Khmer Rouge base on Khao Din as it would enable the Vietnamese to split the guerrilla forces in two -- leaving one group in Phnum Malai and the other further south opposite Ban Laem in Pong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province.

After being forced from Khao Din, the guerrillas and their dependents, totalling about 10,000 people, moved north to join their comrades entrenched in Phnum Malai where the decisive Vietnamese offensive is expected to be launched, the officer said.

He disclosed that Russian-made BTR-50 armoured cars were seen at the Khao Din guerrilla base and that Vietnamese sappers were reported to be hastily building an airbase in Phum Kham, about 12 kilometres opposite Ban Thap Prik, about 50 kilometres south of Aranyaprathet.

The officer forecast the possibility of the Vietnamese using air strikes in the battle for Phnum Malai as the airfield would be capable of handling Antonov-26 transport planes which could be used for such attacks.

Military sources said that in its bid to crush Khmer Rouge forces in the Phnum Malai ranges, Hanoi last month moved its 57th, 59th and 920th Divisions from Battambang and Sisophon to reinforce the 5th Territorial Defense Regiment.

As a precaution against a further escalation in the fighting, Thai troops have already evacuated civilians from five villages to sites far from the border opposite the highland.

Fighting raged inside Kampuchea south of Aranyaprathet yesterday, but no details were available.

Mit Thiep, a Khmer Rouge leader, claimed that his men had killed 100 Vietnamese troops and seized a large amount of arms in clashes since last Thursday. We added that the Khmer Rouge had formed special combat units in an effort to launch counter-attacks against the Vietnamese.

Meanwhile a source close to the Moulinaka faction loyal to Prince Norodom Sihanouk said China last week supplied light weapons to about 3,000 Moulinaka guerrillas based along the Thai-Kampuchean border.

The Chinese arms were officially received by Gen Teap Ben, second in command to Gen In Tam, a representative of the prince in Thailand.

In Tam, who last Friday returned to Bangkok from Beijing, reportedly said Chinese leaders have always regarded the Khmer Rouge as their brothers and would continue to provide them with financial and material support to aid their effort to drive out the Vietnamese.

In Tam reportedly said that the prince was still hopeful that former Prime Minister Son Sann of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front would join the coalition government which has already been agreed upon by the prince and Democratic Kampuchea's President Khieu Samphan.

The prince was reported to have said that a coalition without the KPNLF would lead to a misunderstanding that there was disunity among the resistance forces. He was also anxious to comply with the ASEAN proposal for a coalition involving the three main resistance factions.

Prince Sihanouk will leave Beijing for Pyongyang tomorrow to attned birthday celebrations for President Kim Il-song.

VCP FOUNDING CONGRESS, OTHER CONGRESSES REVIEWED

OW070811 Hanoi VNA in English 0721 GMT 7 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 7 -- The Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of Vietnam will be held late this month. Following is an outline of the work of the founding conference in 1930 and the four previous congresses of the party.

The founding conference, held from February 3-7, 1930, in Kowloon, Hing Kong, under the chairmanship of Nguyen Ai Quoc (the future Pesident Ho Chi Minh) who represented the Comintern, is regarded as the founding congress of the party. The conference decided to unify the various communist organizations in the country into a single party of Vietnamese communists under the name of Vietnam Communist Party. The party Central Committee held a conference in October of the same year and adopted a political thesis drafted by Tran Phu. The conference elected Tran Phu general secretary of the party and changed the name of the party to Indochinese Communist Party.

The first congress of the party was held in Macao, China, from March 27-31, 1935, with the participation of 15 delegates representing 600 party members in the country and from overseas party organizations. This congress laid down the urgent tasks for consolidating and developing the party, broadening the mass base, and stepping up the struggle against the imperialists' plan to provoke a new world war.

The second party congress was held from February 14-19, 1951, in Tuyen Quang Province (now Ha Tuyen Province) in the Viet Bac resistance base at a time when the fight against the French colonialist aggressors was entering the decisive stage. It was attended by 158 delegates and 53 stand-by delegates representing 766,349 party members. It decided on several major policies including the policy of land-rent reduction and land reform in the free zones, aimed at promoting the resistance war to final victory.

The congress decided to split the Indochinese Communist Party into three Marxist-Leninist parties of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea to better suit the needs of the revolution and desire of the people of each country. The congress also decided to bring the party into the open and renamed it Vietnam Workers Party. Its new Central Committee consisted of 29 full members. Ho Chi Minh was elected president of the party, and Truong Chinh, its general secretary.

The third party congress was held in Hanoi from September 5-12, 1960, six years after the liberation of the north from French occupation, when the three-year plan for economic and cultural restoration and development (1958-60) had ended and the north embarked on the socialist revolution and the whole country was engaged in the struggle for national unification. The congress was attended by 600 full and stand-by delegates representing more than 500,000 party members. The congress adopted the First Five-Year Plan (1961-65) for economic and cultural development along socialist lines. It elected a new Central Committee which consisted of 47 full members and 31 alternate members. Ho Chi Minh was elected president and Le Duan, first secretary, of its Central Committee.

The fourth national congress took place from December 14-20, 1976, after the country was reunified and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam came into being. The congress was attended by 1,000 delegates representing 1,550,000 party members throughout the country. The congress decided to rename the party Communist Party of Vietnam. The congress worked out the general line and the immediate task of the socialist revolution in Vietnam. Its Central Committee is made up of 101 full members and 32 alternate members.

A mass meeting was organized in Leon town on February 23 during which Martha Cranshaw, member of the Central Committee of the Sandinist National Liberation Front and member of the State Council of Nicaragua, stressed: "With its correct revolutionary line, its intelligent revolutionary strategy and its clever and creative revolutionary tactics, the Communist Party of Vietnam has led the Vietnamese people to defeat all aggressive enemies and taken the national construction cause steadily forward." A photo exhibition on Vietnam opened in the town on the same day.

At a talk on Vietnam held on Feb. 24 in Jinotega Province, Commander Alonso Porras, member of the Sandinist National Liberation Front Central Committee, said: "The Vietnamese and Nicaraguan peoples are poor but heroic peoples who dared to stand up and drive away the aggressors and their henchmen to defend and build their homelands. The motto 'nothing is more precious than independence and freedom' has brought the two peoples closer together. Situated in the two hemispheres, Vietnam and Nicaragua take turns in protecting each other's sleep and defending each other." The talk was followed by the screening of the film "Unforgettable Days and Nights" dealing with the Hanoi people and armed forces' counter-attack against U.S. B-52 bombers in late 1972.

The above organizations and the Vietnamese Embassy in Nicaragua have published documents on the C.P.V.'s history and its four previous congresses. More film shows, exhibitions and talks on Vietnam will be held in Managua and other parts of Nicaragua this month.

NHAN DAN SALUTES GUATEMALAN PEOPLE'S STRUGGLE

OW060741 Hanoi VNA in English 0709 GMT 6 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 6 -- "The election farce to be staged tomorrow in Guatemala will not change the political situation in that country which is growing increasingly worse for the United States and its client junta," says NHAN DAN in a commentary today. The paper condemns the Lucas Garcia junta, a brutal client regime of the United States, for acting on U.S. orders in bloodily suppressing the Communist Party and other democratic forces in Guatemala.

"Over the past four years," the paper recalls, "tens of thousands of Guatemalans, including communists, trade unions leaders, intellectuals, writers, journalists and clergymen have been persecuted."

It notes that the Guatemalan Party of Labour, a party of the working class and people of Guatemala, plays an important role in the Guatemalan people's glorious struggle.

Encouraged by the victories of the Nicaraguan and Grenadan revolution and the mounting struggle of the people of El Salvador and other countries in the Caribbean and Central America, the patriotic and democratic forces in Guatemala are closing their ranks and increasing their coordinated actions, NHAN DAN says.

The recent emergence of the Revolutionary National Solidarity Coalition and the National Solidarity Front in Guatemala has contributed to intensifying the struggle for freedom and liberation of the country, the paper points out.

It adds: "The Guatemalan people are facing many difficult and complex trials in their patriotic struggle. Imperialism and international reaction are trying to regain their lost positions and to consolidate their shaky footholds in the face of the revolutionary storms of the Caribbean and Central American peoples".

HOANG MINH THAO SPEAKS AT ALL-ARMY CONGRESS

[Report on Lt Gen Hoang Minh Thao's statement at recent all-army congress of party organizations on "The Question of National Construction and Defense"]

[Text] Rules and conditions have a close relationship. This is the relationship between things. Ascertaining the conditions of things is very important if rules are to be observed in devising various policies. This is because conditions are the elements that make up things and are the internal and external factors of things. In order to acquire a highly practical concept, we must strive to ascertain the conditions of things. Only by ascertaining the conditions of things can we realize what should be done quickly and what could be slackened and can we avoid rigidity, inflexibility and dogmatism. President Ho Chi Minh once spoke about conditions as follows:

"When a wrong move is made, two chariots may become useless. When opportunities arise, victories may be achieved even with only one soldier available." These words show the essence of the art of ascertaining conditions and rules.

Nguyen Trai also mastered this art as he said: "To defeat a stronger enemy, one must attack suddenly. To attack a larger enemy force, one must employ ambush tactics. We must strive to keep abreast of the situation of friend and foe and must, when necessary, harden or soften our position."

In view of the new direction and tasks, we are of the following opinions:

In agriculture, in addition to grain crops, it is necessary to develop those short-term industrial crops -- which can be cultivated easily, are popular, need little capital investment, have a simple production process and the economic results of which can be achieved quickly -- such as legumes of all sorts, garlic, and hard pepper. It is necessary to pay attention to cultivating soybeans as they are a kind of highly nutritional food and a valuable export. Efforts must be made in such a way that by 1985 we will be able to cultivate from 350,000 to 400,000 hectares of soybeans: get 300,000 tons of soybeans from these 350,000 hectares; and export 160,000 tons of soybeans -- which equals half of the export value of 1.2 million tons of coal.

In industry, we must concentrate on developing energy -- electricity and coal. Exploiting coal alone is not sufficient. We must increase the production output of electricity, especially hydropower and must build small and medium-size hydroelectric projects in various localities.

With coal, in particular, we must increase coal production locally as this will help increase the gross production volume of coal and save transportation cost. Building small and medium-size hydroelectric projects and producing coal locally are very important, considering present requirements for combat preparedness.

It is estimated that many small 5-10 kw hydroelectric generators sited along various rivers and streams in India can altogether produce 16 megawatts. At present in our country, hydroelectric output accounts for more than 20 percent of the total power generation capacity.

We must pay greatest attention to developing the communications and transportation sector as it is the arteries of the economy and society. We must do our utmost to develop our riverine transportation capabilities covering rudimentary means of transportation and those transportation means fueled by gas or coal.

Grain, electricity, coal and communications and transportation are now the most urgent problems to be tackled in order to stimulate our country's economic growth.

In economic and social management, I propose that tighter and more effective managerial steps be taken immediately if the power of our dictatorial proletarian state is to be demonstrated. Our state is governed by law which comes from the working people and which is designed to serve the working class and the laboring people.

We must clearly specify marketable goods and must confiscate all state-monopoly goods found on the free market. Heavier taxes must be levied on highly lucrative businesses and those goods which can bring high profits. We must be determined to oppose speculative hoarding and free exploitation.

In the study of military science, the development of military science is the evolution of the process of combining military technology and art. This is also an evolutional law. As long as military hardware develops, the rules governing the conduct of a war will continue to develop. This matter was clearly discussed by Engels: Preoccupied with the power of weaponry, military experts of the capitalist countries attach great importance to weaponry. We do not highly value the use of weapons, but we think man must have good weapons to use.

The United States dares not be aggressive because it is scared of Soviet military strength and technology. As a result, scientific research is very essential as it is a means to support operational work. Without scientific research we cannot solve problems basically and scientifically, and we cannot discover the nature and laws of various phenomena. We cannot solve these and other problems correctly if we do not conduct comprehensive and basic research. As a result, we must have research organizations and specialized scientific research cadres.

It is well known that training of military officers is a fundamental and long-term task. At present we have a very valuable contingent of military officers. To increase their scientific and technological knowledge is not an easy task. This, however, can be achieved through training and study. In the same token we can gain combat experiences only through fighting in wars.

It is very necessary to increase the scientific and technological knowledge of our military officers. At present we cannot afford to have a systematic training organization. However, if we can establish a suitable institution and apply consistent and modern training methods, we can then produce a contingent of officers with sufficient knowledge to command and to train satisfactorily.

On the basis of producing the contingent of military officers in this manner, we suggest that selection should be made to recruit young, strong and capable officers with outstanding character who have fought and commanded battalions and platoons in combat. These officers will attend a general education course for a short period and then further their study in army officers schools or in various armed branches such as artillery, antiaircraft and tank branches for several months.

After completing these courses, these officers will be trained as regimental and division commanding and staff officers at the army academy or as commanding and staff officers at the strategic and tactical levels at the higher-level military academy. By applying these procedures, though we do not have a real training system, we can produce military officers with relatively comprehensive background to command a modern and regular army corps comprising many armed branches.

In addition to training at schools, we must also organize correspondent and inservice study courses. To achieve this we must establish a network to handle correspondent and inservice study courses. This will help increase the number of military officers for the army.

Along with training the contingent of commanding and scientific and technological officers, we must also pay attention to training and fostering scientific and theoretical officers. We can help our military officers to enhance their background in military technique by fostering and increasing their military theoretical knowledge.

By drawing experiences from the war of liberation, we acquire and learn from these experiences and from modern, world military science, especially from the Soviet Union. When we can inherit and develop the national military technique tradition, we will surely be able to establish Vietnamese military art and science in a revolutionary, scientific and progressive mode.

The building of Vietnamese military art and science is not only for the present generation, but is also and most importantly, for future generations.

PROTEST LODGED WITH USSR OVER IZVESTIYA ARTICLE

OW091015 Tokyo KYODO in English 1011 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) -- The Foreign Ministry Tuesday protested to the Soviet Union over an "unfriendly" story by its official newspaper IZVESTIYA criticizing Japan's diplomacy toward Southeast Asian countries.

In its February 23 edition, the daily said Japan has exploited natural resources in Southeast Asia and forced countries in the area to buy industrial products in return. The story, filed by IZVESTIYA's correspondent in Manila, also said Japan has exported pollution-producing plants to Southeast Asia and that Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's trip to the region last year was designed to mask what Japanese big businesses are doing there.

The ministry rejected the article as a "malicious defamation" of Japan's foreign policy toward the area. The ministry's verbal protest was conveyed when Hiroshi Hashimoto, chief of the Regional Policy Division in the Asian Affairs Bureau, met with Valentin V. Alekseyev, counsellor of the Soviet Embassy. The Soviet diplomat said he will relay the protest to the Moscow government.

KOMOTO VIEWS SOLUTION OF TRADE FRICTION WITH U.S.

OW090357 Tokyo KYODO in English 0338 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) -- Toshio Komoto, the government's chief economic planner, said Tuesday trade friction with the United States can never be solved even if Japan carries out all what the U.S. demands for opening up its market.

Komoto, director general of the Economic Planning Agency, told reporters after the day's Cabinet meeting that such friction could rather be solved by expansion of Japan's domestic demand and recovery of the world economy. He also said the Japanese yen should not be depreciated further against the dollar because the depreciation is translated into higher prices of U.S. commodities imported into Japan.

Komoto said Cabinet ministers concerned with economic affairs will meet late this month to discuss what steps Japan could take to diffuse tension in trade with the U.S. and Western Europe.

A trade mission from the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) will return home late this month after visiting some European Community (EC) nations. The mission, led by former Minister of International Trade and Industry Masumi Esaki, last month went to the U.S. and held talks with U.S. leaders, including President Ronald Reagan, on trade between the two nations.

TRADE TALKS WITH U.S. OPEN IN TOKYO 9 MAR

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) -- The United States Tuesday renewed a demand that Japan open its market wider to foreign goods, as the two governments opened crucial talks to find a solution to their growing trade disputes. David Macdonald, the chief U.S. delegate, warned at the opening session that many American businessmen felt the Japanese market was not adequately open to free competition.

The two-day talks began amid growing dissatisfaction in the United States over Japan's surplus with its biggest trade partner, which last year soared to a record dollar 18 billion. Macdonald, President Reagan's deputy trade representative, urged that Japan, as one of the world's major economic powers, permit competitive foreign goods freer and equitable access to its market. To do so would benefit not only the United States but the rest of the world, including Japan, he said.

His Japanese counterpart, Hiromu Fukuda, complained that Japan's efforts to open its market was not correctly put to the Americans in general. He maintained that Tokyo's decisions to advance tariff cuts and ease or lift 67 nontariff trade barriers had met some U.S. demands and helped remove misunderstanding among Americans.

Fukuda, director of the Economic Affairs Bureau of the Foreign Ministry, said Japan was aware of strong views in the United States that Tokyo should do something dramatic or needs to change some of Japan's traditional structures. However, he said that Japan saw it hard to find a practical solution to meet such U.S. demands.

Japanese delegation sources said that 12 specific subjects are on the agenda for the two-day conference. These included trade in farm and fishery products, access to the Japanese market for competitive U.S. goods and trade in services. They said the U.S. delegates to the talks were expected to reiterate demands that Japan liberalize its banking, securities and other service industries and remove import quotas on farm products such as beef, oranges and leather. The sources said Japan would tell the Americans it was ready to start talks on import of beef and oranges in October, six months earlier than scheduled.

Further Report on Talks

OW091037 Tokyo KYODO in English 1020 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) -- Japan and the United States agreed Tuesday to set up a government-level working group to try to find some compromise solution to one of their trade disputes involving U.S. farm products. The agreement came at two-day talks which began here Tuesday amid growing dissatisfaction in the United States over Japan's trade surplus which last year shot up to a record dollar 18 billion.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that the new group will hold its first meeting next month to examine 22 farm and fishery products, on which Japan maintains quantitative import restrictions. The spokesman said the agreement does not necessarily mean that Japan intends to free the import of those items.

Chief U.S. delegate David Macdonald told the Japanese delegates that the U.S. trade deficit could be cut by dollar 5 billion to dollar 10 billion, should competitive American goods be allowed freer access to the market here, the spokesman said. He said Macdonald named 12 such products, including nuclear energy equipment, computers, paper and pulp, soda ash, medical equipment, cosmetics, wooden products, tobacco, telecommunications facilities and heavy electrical equipment.

Macdonald was quoted as telling the Japanese delegation that the U.S. administration was not endorsing reciprocity bills now before Congress which could lead to protectionism. But he noted that the bills were backed by growing anti-Japanese sentiments arising from the bilateral trade imbalance and serious unemployment in the United States.

The Japanese delegation, led by Hiromu Fukada, director of Economic Affairs Bureau of the Foreign Ministry, told the Americans it is ready to start negotiations on import quotas for beef and citrus fruits in October, six months earlier than scheduled, according to the spokesman. The spokesman said that in the final-day session Wednesday the trade delegates will discuss the remaining agenda subjects, including customs practices, industrial standards, trade in services and high technology products, and trade ombudsman system.

DEFENSE AGENCY CHIEF ITO FAVORS IMPROVING F-4'S

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) -- Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito Tuesday virtually reversed a stand taken 14 years ago that F-4 Phantom fighters would not be equipped with a bombing ability in the future. Ito said that the nation's basic policy of not possessing arms regarded as aggressive and threatening to other countries remains unchanged. However, he said the arms Japan would have within the framework of this basic policy may change in accordance with the progress in military technology.

Ito disclosed the government's posture toward the controversial issue in a reply to Socialist questioner Shun Oide at a meeting of the House of Representatives Budget Committee. In earlier parliamentary battles, the opposition forces stopped the Defense Agency's budget appropriations for trial improvement in F-4 Phantom fighters which they criticized as running counter to the basic stand confirmed by then Defense Chief Kaneshichi Masuda in 1968.

Without answering whether his statement meant a reversal of Masuda's, Ito said that his agency planned to mount bombing and computer capabilities on a fighter on a trial basis by fiscal 1984 and future plans for the capability improvement on F-4's would be referred to the decision-making body for approval.

The agency plans to start a full-scale improvement on 100 out of the existing 132 F-4's in fiscal 1986. After such improvement, F-4 planes' capability as fighters will be almost the same as that of the F-15 fighter. This means that the F-4's life as a fighter would increase from the present 3,000 flying hours to 5,000 hours, or about 10 years longer from its current life. The capability improvement is expected to cost about yen 1 billion for each F-4, compared with the purchase of one new F-15 requiring about yen 10 billion.

Improved bombing functions of the fighter would never be misunderstood by other countries as aggressive menaces to them if progress in present-day military technology is taken into consideration, Ito asserted.

Ito's remarks, coupled with other government officials' recent argument that F-4's should relatively keep abreast of modern military technical levels, are likely to refuel opposition reactions. Meanwhile, the director general rejected Oide's request for disclosure of a Japan-U.S. memorandum on research and development of military technology and related documents exchanged between the two countries. He, however, bared the outline of the memo for the first time, saying that it provides for protection of defense patents.

A university professor has pointed out that the memo, prepared in June 1966, referred to Japan's share in the joint research and development costs. Ito did not touch on that aspect, however,

PRC ORDERS MORE STEEL PRODUCTS FROM JAPAN

OW070951 Tokyo KYODO in English 0946 GMT 7 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 7 (KYODO) -- China has ordered 46,000 tons of steel products from Japan for shipment in the first half of this year, a mill executive said Sunday.

The new order brings the total amount of general carbon steel products, including seamless steel pipe -- mainly oil well pipe, ordered by the China National Metals and Minerals Import-Export Corp, from the major Japanese mills for shipment in the first half of the year to 1,163,000 tons.

The Chinese corporation initially ordered about 600,000 tons from the Japanese mills last December for shipment in the first half of this year. Since then, additional orders have been placed frequently with the Japanese mills.

The latest order, which comprises 30,000 tons of galvanized steel sheet and 10,000 tons of hot rolled sheet, brings the total tonnage of steel products ordered by the Chinese corporation from Japan for April-June shipment to a level 170,000 tons higher than that for January-March shipment, according to the executive. With orders from U.S. clients for April-June shipment seen plunging, the additional Chinese orders are highly appreciated by the mills here, he said.

'TEAM SPIRIT' EXERCISE PROTESTED AT MAC MEETING

[Text] The 411th Military Armistice Commission meeting is being held at Panmunjom at the suggestion of our side. At the meeting, our side has strongly protested the U.S. imperialists' aggravation of the situation by violently violating the armistice agreement, introducing large quantities of aggressive military forces into Korea and waging large-scale war exercises against the northern half of the republic, and is calling the enemy side to account.

According to the remarks by our side's senior member, Maj Gen Han Chu-kyong, despite our warning and the strong protest of the world's peace-loving people, the U.S. imperialists have been waging a large-scale war exercise called "team spirit 1982" since 13 February.

Participating in these war exercises are the U.S. aggression forces, the South Korean puppet army, the U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force, armed forces from the U.S. mainland, Okinawa, Japan and military bases in the Pacific, totaling about 161,600 personnel. Moreover, the enemies are mobilizing in these war exercises planes which can carry nuclear bombs, ships which carry nuclear arms, and military personnel who handle nuclear weapons. Continuously rushing toward South Korea are numerous U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine forces, U.S. strategic and tactical aviation units' planes and naval ships belonging to the U.S. 7th Fleet.

Even the enemy side is clamoring that these war exercises are the largest in history -- unprecedented in the world -- in terms of personnel, equipment and the scope of the war exercises. Accordingly, a warlike atmosphere and ominous circumstances reminiscent of the eve of war are being created in South Korea. By mobilizing vast aggressive military forces, the enemies are going to wage large-scale landing and ground attack operations in the air, on land and at sea in a full-scale mock attack against the northern half of the republic.

The "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise is a military operation to review and complete in a comprehensive manner new aggressive war preparations in Korea and one which can directly develop into an aggressive act against the northern half of the republic. The "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises constitute a test war and a preliminary war with which the U.S. imperialists will implement their already worked-out short-term operational plans and nuclear war plans. All facts clearly show that the enemies are running wild to ignite a new aggressive war in Korea, while maintaining their illusion to hold onto the entire Korean Peninsula by force.

Saying that it is natural for all Korean people and the world's peace-loving people to strongly protest and denounce the enemies' reckless war exercise rackets, our side's senior member continued as follows: The reckless "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise waged by the enemies is an outrageous violation of the armistice agreement and a grave challenge against all Korean people and the world's peace-loving people who desire peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea.

The fact that the U.S. imperialists are staging such a large-scale military operation as "Team Spirit 1982" together with the South Korean military fascist elements, at a time when we are making every effort to ease tension in Korea and peacefully resolve the nation's reunification, shows more clearly the rascals' aggressive nature. Nevertheless, the enemies are trying to justify the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise by raving that it is aimed at restraining someone from starting a war and at defending South Korea.

The senior member of our side said: It is a brigandish theory on defense babbled by the aggressors who have forcibly occupied half of the other's country. It is ridiculous and nonsensical for them to rave about defense while staging aggressive training operations simulating an attack against the northern half of the republic, by mobilizing numerous aggressive troops and a large quantity of lethal weapons.

This is a hackneyed trick which the U.S. imperialists always employ to legalize their new war provocation maneuvers and mislead the world's public opinion.

The senior member of our side continued: In order to legalize this training, the U.S. imperialists made ridiculous remarks that they are inviting members of our side of the Military Armistice Commission and members of the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission to observe the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise. It is a nonsensical act, which could be perpetrated only by the most shameless provocateur, for the aggressors to invite those who are suffering from aggression to observe the aggressive training operation. This is an intolerable mockery against the Korean people and the world's peace-loving people. Moreover, this is a violent challenge to and ridicule of the Military Armistice Commission and the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission which supervise implementation of the armistice agreement. He stressed: The enemies can neither conceal nor justify the aggressive and dangerous nature of the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise with any excuse.

The senior member of our side sternly protested and denounced the enemies for leading the situation in our country to the brink of war [chonjaeng chopkyong] by staging the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise against the northern half of the republic. He strongly demanded that the enemy side immediately stop the adventurous war exercise rackets. The meeting is still in progress.

Further Report on MAC Meeting

[Text] The 411th Military Armistice Commission meeting continues at Panmunjom. At the meeting, our side's senior member, Maj Gen Han Chu-kyong, is revealing that the U.S. imperialists and South Korean military fascist elements are recklessly running wild to find an excuse for provoking a war by bringing our country's situation to the brink of war, while simultaneously waging the war exercise "Team Spirit 1982."

According to a news report, U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger is going to hold consultations about war in South Korea at the end of March. It is not by chance that a U.S. leader, who is planning and implementing a U.S. aggressive war, will make an appearance timed with the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercises for which they have completed strategic preparations and are on the verge of developing the preparations to the stage of attack. His visit is aimed at inspecting and personally commanding the northward war preparations.

The U.S. imperialists are strengthening the aggressive forces in South Korea on a large scale in accord with newly worked-out plans for increasing war capabilities. At the beginning of March, the U.S. imperialists newly introduced six A-10 close-support planes into South Korea. They are trying to additionally deploy 12 more by April and 6 more by March next year. Along with this, the U.S. imperialists are going to deploy OA-37 aircraft to South Korea. The U.S. imperialists have prepared a contingency plan to promptly deploy ammunition and other reserve war materials worth about $2 billion to South Korea in case of emergency. The U.S. imperialists have also decided to hand over 170 sets of improved Hawk guided-missiles and 723 sets of rockets to the South Korean warmongers.

While waging the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise, the U.S. imperialists are infiltrating high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance planes into the our country's airspace almost every day. The U.S. imperialists infiltrated a high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance plane into the airspace over the coastal sea east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country, at around 1114 on 4 March 1982. And at around 1134 they committed an act of espionage against the northern half of the republic by infiltrating deep into the airspace over the Kangnyong Peninsula, southwest of South Kwanghae Province.

At around 1300 that day, the U.S. imperialists committed vicious military provacative acts of again infiltrating a high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance plane deep into the air over the coastal sea off Tongchon, Kangwon Province of our side. Such aerial espionage acts by the U.S. imperialists have totaled as many as 18 since 13 February when the war exercise "Team Spirit 1982" began.

The South Korean warmongers are committing intentional armed provocative acts against us one after another while concentrating more heavy weapons and combat personnel along the Demilitarized Zone areas. The criminal acts committed by the enemy side in the DMZ total as many as 3,050-odd cases from 19 January to 5 March.

Saying that, due to the enemies' provocative maneuvers, the situation in our country is extremely tense and thus a very grave situation in which a war could break out at any time, any hour, is being created, our side's senior member stressed that all provocation maneuvers, including the enemies' ongoing war exercise "Team Spirit 1982," should be stopped immediately to prevent war and maintain peace in Korea. The meeting is still in session.

REINFORCEMENT OF TROOPS IN 'TEAM SPIRIT' NOTED

SK070620 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 6 Mar 82

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors are introducing many troops and much equipment for the criminal "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise in South Korea. According to a report, the U.S. navy transport ship (Zignos), which left Pearl Harbor on 21 February carrying helicopters, vehicles and electronic communications equipment, made a port call at Pusan on 4 March.

Babbling that such operations of the U.S. imperialist aggressors have evinced maneuverability like that in a real war, the puppet clique is clamoring that this very maneuverability is a grand spectacle for the provocative "Team Spirit 1982."

On 3 March, the 53d Battalion of the 3d U.S. Marine Division in Okinawa, Japan infiltrated the east coast on a C-141 transport plane. An advance contingent of this unit arrived in South Korea 1 March. These aggressors had a bad reputation during the Inchon landing in the past war. This is the second time they have come to Korea.

The war exercise "Team Spirit 1982," which will last about 70 days, has an extremely provocative nature. U.S. troops and equipment from the U.S. mainland and various overseas bases are being deployed.

NODONG SINMUN RAPS 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982' EXERCISE

SK082333 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1528 GMT 8 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 8 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialists scheme to realise by strength their aggressive designs on Korea by completing the preparations for a new war through the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, notes NODONG SINMUM today in a signed article. The article titled "'Team Spirit 1982' Is Criminal War Exercises" says:

The U.S. imperialists are mobilising large forces 161,000 strong including their aggression forces occupying South Korea, the South Korean puppet army and their ground, naval and air forces and marines from the U.S. mainland and military bases in Okinawa, Japan, and the Pacific region, plus the capital warships of the U.S. Seventh Fleet, "F-16" fighter bombers and various other up-to-date combat equipment and destructive weapons in the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercises.

Foreign press reports say that the "Team Spirit 1982" exercises are the "largest" military exercises previously unknown in any other region of the world in view of overall "landing and attacking operations" in the sky and on the ground and the sea included in the exercises and of the size of the forces and equipment mobilized in them.

The U.S. imperialists have annually staged the so-called "Team Spirit" exercises in South Korea since 1976. These war exercises are assuming ever more aggressive and provocative nature in the scale and contents, the composition of armed forces and the level of equipment. These exercises which started as combined exercises of army units of different services and arms have been gradually expanded into total war exercises including all operations and now developed into nuclear war exercises envisaging the use of nuclear and other mass destruction weapons.

As is widely known to the world, the U.S. imperialists scheme to realize their aggressive designs on Korea by strength by completing the preparations for a new war through these reckless war exercises. The aggressive and dangerous nature of the current exercises finds clear expression in that the target of their attack is the DPRK.

Besides the open war exercises, the U.S. imperialists are staging in strict secrecy large-scale military exercises around Korea to carry out their vicious plan for aggression and war.

All these facts show that the U.S. imperialists are running riot to lead the situation to the brink of war, going against the unanimous desire of the entire Korean people and the world's peaceloving people for peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification and the demand of the times.

All the peaceloving forces including the socialist countries and non-aligned countries indignantly denounce the "Team Spirit 1982" exercises of the U.S. imperialists, branding them as "criminal war exercises," "vicious provocation disturbing peace in the Far East" and "a fit of the chieftain of war." If the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets persist in the war gamble, refusing to give up the anachronistic delusion, they will face the bitterer denunciation and rejection of the world's people.

NODONG SINMUN DISCUSSES KWP'S ORGANIZATIONAL LIFE

[NODONG SINMUN 7 March special article [nonsol]: "The Militant Banner Which Has Opened a New Turn in Improving and Consolidating Party Work"]

[Text] The party is the headquarters of the revolution. For the party of the working class to accomplish its mission as the guiding force of the revolution, it should emphasize the question of improving and intensifying party work. The greatness and the wise leadership of the party of the working class are linked to this question.

Twenty-five years ago our party and people undertook an important task to realize socialist industrialization, arm all sectors of the people's economy with modern technology and decisively improve the people's material and cultural standard of living. To successfully guarantee large-scale socialist construction, the party had to make the masses display their revolutionary zeal and creativity by strengthening party work, rallying them to the revolution and construction. Since the most advanced and revolutionary economic guidance and management system was created in this period, the party could demonstrate the superiority and the might of the new system by improving and strengthening the party's economic guidance. Thanks to the outstanding and tested leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who created the Chongsanri method and the Chongsanri spirit and who energetically led the struggle to realize them, the urgent question of decisively improving party work in the development of the revolution was brilliantly resolved.

The great leader, who understood the reality of party work through on-the-spot guidance to party organizations in South Hwanghae Province at the beginning of 1962, convened the third plenum of the fourth party Central Committee on 8 March 1962 and adopted new measures to improve and intensify party work. By improving and intensifying party and ideological work at the plenum, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song made it clear how to improve the system and method of party work in accordance with changing circumstances and to embody the Chongsanri method and the Chongsanri spirit in implementing party work, again scientifically analyzing the essence and content of party work.

He set forth tasks arising from strengthening the struggle against revisionism and correctly pushing ahead with the class struggle in rural areas.

The classic work which provided comprehensive answers to the theoretical and practical questions raised in strengthening and developing our party into a revolutionary party of invincible might has displayed its vitality by consolidating the organizational and ideological foundations of the party and heightening the militant function and role of the party organizations. The work was of significance in decisively strengthening the party life of the party members and improving the guidance of party organizations by scientifically illuminating the basic direction in implementing party work.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Only when all party members act in conformity with the party's organizational principles can the party become an invincible party and successfully implement its revolutionary task. For this reason, the basic direction of party work is in guiding the party members so that they can lead their party life. One of the principled questions in the activities of the party of the working class is to correctly follow the basic direction of party work.

As taught by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, party work is to firmly consolidate the party ranks and make the party of the working class display its militant function as the revolutionary party of the working class. To increase the militant power of the party, individual party members should be sound. The party should make them act in accordance with the party's organizational principle. This can be resolved only through the enhancement of the party's organizational life. Therefore, the basic direction of party work is to make the party members act in accordance with the party's organizational principle. This means to correctly guide the party's organizational life.

In his work, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has comprehensively delineated questions raised in strengthening the guidance of the organizational life of party members. Increasing the function and role of the party cell is important in enhancing the organizational life of party members.

The party's organizational life refers to the party members' activities to implement the work of the party. This is the party members' political life and revolutionary activity. Just as man can maintain his life by eating, so can party members maintain their political life through the party organizational life and glorify their political life. The party organizational life of party members is advanced through the party organization. Every party member leads his party life through a party cell -- the party's basic organization. Some party members lead their lives through the party authority. Accordingly, the party cell and party authority should assume responsibility for guiding the party organizational life of party members by increasing their functions and roles.

To guide the party organizational life of party members, the role of the organizational department and propaganda and agitation should be enhanced. They are the departments which have to do with intraparty work. As a department which guides the activities of party organizations, the organizational department is the department which continuously readjusts and consolidates the party ranks and the leading department of party life which strengthens party life. The propaganda and agitation department is a department which organizes party members and workers and rallies them to the road to implement the revolutionary cause, thus indoctrinating them. Only when the organizational department and the propaganda and agitation department enhance their role and advance with unity can the guidance of the party organizational work of party members and overall party work be guaranteed.

Thanks to a creative ideology placing the basic direction of party work on making members lead a party organizational life and the party's wise leadership to embody it, an epochal turn has been brought about in organizational and ideological work. Overcoming all biased tendencies dealing with party work, all party organizations have established an orderly work system.

Based on successes attained in past work, our party has vigorously struggled to enhance the party organizational life of all party members and increase the militant role and function of the party organizations in accordance with the realistic demand of the revolution, developing to a higher stage. Thanks to this struggle, all party members now possess a lofty trait -- relying on party organizations for their work and life and regarding party organizations as the mother's bosom. This confirms the justness of the ideology to correctly guide the party organizational life of party members and its invincible vitality.

The significance of the work is in enabling various echelons of party committees to guide administrative and economic work in a political manner by scientifically delineating the intrinsic nature of the party guidance over economic work. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: The party should guide economic work, rather than carry it out. The party should ensure economic work meets the party's demand by guiding party organizations and members in the economic sector. Socialist economic construction is an important revolutionary task assumed by the party of the working class. Therefore, various echelons of party committees should take responsibility for economic work and intensify the party's guidance. The party's guidance over economic work intrinsically is political guidance. Viewing all questions arising in economic work as concerning the party policy, the party through its guidance over economic work, should implement the party's economic policy in a political way. This makes it possible to mobilize functionaries and workers, rather than carrying out economic policy as a proxy. Carrying out economic work in a political manner is a principled question arising from the demand of the nature of the party of the working class and the party work itself. The party is the vanguard of the working class, which is organized to implement the revolution and construction. The main characteristic of party work is to spur the revolutionary zeal and creativity of the masses in a political way. Accordingly, the guiding work of party functionaries should be organizational, tangible and dynamic, rather than administrative, dictatorial and authoritative. By mobilizing officials, members, committees and cells of the party, the party should guarantee implementation of economic tasks. Only when party organizations vigorously advance economic work and help functionaries in the economic sector can they carry out economic organizational work with the awareness of masters who assume responsibility for economic guidance work.

The heavier and the more vast the tasks facing the revolution, the more party organisations on all levels are triumphantly accelerating socialist construction by inspiring the masses, while further intensifying political guidance of economic projects. The fact that new miracles and innovations are being effected on all fronts of socialist construction and that monumental creations adding lustre to the era of the KWP are being erected is a proud achievement in the struggle to implement the revolutionary policy on guiding economic work with the party method noted in the classic work of the great leader.

Doing away with worn-out work methods, including subjectivity, is one of the fundamental problems a working-class party faces in guiding the masses. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in his work, pointed out that overcoming subjectivism is an important task for effecting a fundamental turn in party work. Subjectivism begins when functionaries do not see reality objectively, as it is. When functionaries confine themselves to their offices, not mingling with the masses, they will not know what reality is and, in the end, become bureaucratic, meaning that they handle affairs arbitrarily and subjectively.

Accordingly, to eliminate worn-out work methods and styles, such as bureaucratism, subjectivism and formalism, functionaries should frequently visit factories and farming villages and lend their ears to the opinions of party members and working people. With ideological education being vigorously carried out to implement the policies noted in the classic work of the great leader, today our functionaries come to work sites, where they extend positive assistance to their subordinates and, by vigorously conducting political work, inspire the masses in the struggle to implement party policies.

With the revolutionary work principle -- meaning that all functionaries, in accordance with revolutionary measures taken by the party center, are at work sites for a certain period of time before coming back to the office and once back, and get themseves rearmed before going down again -- being thoroughly established, innovations are being effected in party work. We are faced with the honorable but heavy task to advance the complete victory of socialism and the cause of national reunification, vigorously accelerating the all-out march toward the militant tasks set forth by therespected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his report to the sixth party congress and in his new year message.

At a time when the revolution is faced with vast tasks, the responsibilities of our functionaries are weighty and the party's expectations of them are high. Functionaries should frequently organize consultative meetings to streighten out the problems concerned -- as in the proverb which says, "Ask the way even though you know it" -- and often take part in cell meetings to hear the opinions of party members. At the same time, they should thoroughly establish the manner of executing affairs, however small they may be, only after having enough discussions with functionaries concerned.

By doing so, functionaries, who are leading personnel of the revolution, should fully demonstrate the invincibility and vitality of our party's traditional work methods.

NORTH KOREAN CHARGES COUNTERED AT MAC MEETING

SK091048 Seoul YONHAP in English 1040 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Panmunjom, March 9 (YONHAP) -- The U.S.-led United Nations Command (UNC) Tuesday rejected a North Korean demand that the ongoing U.S.-South Korean joint military exercise "Team Spirit 1982" be stopped.

The rejection was made by U.S. Rear Admiral James Storms III, the UNC senior member to the Military Armistice Commission (MAC) at Tuesday's 411th MAC session in this truce village. Storms countered his North Korean counterpart Maj. Gen. Han Chu-Kyong's claim that "Team Spirit" was a "provocative exercise," and said it would continue.

Storms charged that the North Korean side continued to train and equip its military forces behind a shield of secrecy, and asked, "How do you explain the three tunnels which your side dug under the military demaracation line or the more than a dozen others you are currently constructing from your side under the Demilitarized Zone into South Korea?"

Han reiterated his call for a halt to the exercise, and said the UNC's invitation for North Korean and Communist Chinese members of the MAC to observe the exercise was an "intolerable insult." Tuesday's MAC meeting, requested by the North Korean side, began at 11 a.m. and lasted for about two hours.

SOUPHANOUVONG'S LUANG PRABANG CONFERENCE SPEECH

BK060700 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Address by Comrade Souphanouvong, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and president of state, the SPC and the LFNC, delivered at Luang Prabang provincial party committee conference on 27 February -- read by announcer]

[Text] Respected presidium of the conference, beloved Comrade Khampheng Boupha, beloved members of the Luang Prabang provincial party committee, beloved comrades representatives, beloved distinguished guests:

Today, I am very happy to represent the party Central Committee and the Political Bureau in attending and addressing this historic conference of the Luang Prabang provincial party committee. First of all, I would like to convey warmest tributes and congratulations from the party Central Committee, the Political Bureau and the comrade general secretary to this conference, all 1,796 comrades representatives of the party members in the province, all party cadres and members, and the people of all tribes in Luang Prabang Province, which has maintained a fine tradition of militant solidarity and heroism and has the ancient and beautiful city of Luang Prabang as its provincial capital. I am extremely elated to meet you, comrades, who are outstanding representatives of the party committees at various levels. I can see that these representatives are composed of senior party cadres and members who have participated in the protracted and arduous but noble national liberation struggles against the two imperialists, and young and energetic members who have grown up amidst the struggle to defend and build our socialist country in the new period of the Lao revolution.

Throughout the period of preparing for and convening the party (?conference) in this province, the Political Bureau and the party Central Committee always paid close attention to your activities. Today, this conference is closing. We, the party Central Committee, note with satisfaction that the conference has scored certain significant achievements. For instance, it has thoroughly reviewed and evaluated all past movements of the party committee, has outlined the direction of the immediate tasks for the party committee in leading the people of the province in defending and building the economy and culture, and has unanimously selected a new provincial party committee and appointed the provincial party committee delegation to attend the forthcoming third congress of the party from the ranks of outstanding party cadres and members in this province. These successes constitute a primary factor guaranteeing the growth and strength of the party committee and the entire people of all tribes in this province. On behalf of the party Central Committee and the Political Bureau, I would like to hail your sense of responsibility and perseverance as well as the achievements of your conference with all my heart.

Beloved comrades, under the talented and clear-sighted leadership of the party Central Committee, the Luang Prabang provincial party committee which was formerly a party unit of the Indochinese Communist Party, evolving with the struggles of the people of all tribes in the province and constantly consolidating and building its organization, has incessantly grown larger and stronger. The growth of the Luang Prabang provincial party committee is closely linked to the history of heroic struggles of the people of all tribes in this province, and made an ardent contribution to the concluding period of the national-democratic revolution, which began right after the signing of the 1973 Vientiane agreement, the formation of the national political coalition council in Luang Prabang city and the formation of the national provisional coalition government in Vientiane city. During that period, the two cities were neutral zones of the two sides.

Relying on close militant alliance with the Vietnamese and Kampuchean revolutions, with wholehearted support and assistance from the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, and under the correct, clear-sighted and creative leadership of our party, the entire army and people of all tribes in the two zones took that rare opportunity to rise up to score complete victory for the Lao revolution in May 1975. They subsequently marched forward with determined, rapid and firm steps to compel the king to abdicate and to dissolve the two supreme provisional coalition institutions at the National Congress of the People's Representatives on 2 December 1975, during which the monarchy was abolished and the LPDR established, thus opening a new era in the long history of the Lao nation -- an era in which the Lao people have become the genuine masters of their own country and destiny and have marched along the bright path of socialism. In actuality, the Luang Prabang provincial party committee led party cadres and members and the people of all tribes to seize administrative power at the provincial and municipal level from the old regime on 18 August 1975 and to set up subsequently new revolutionary administrations at various levels throughout the province, thus making a noble contribution to the establishment of the LPDR. Over the past 6 years, it has managed to defend securely these revolutionary administrations for the province.

As is known, as a result of imperialist aggression and intervention, like other provinces in our country, Luang Prabang Province was divided into two zones -- the old and new liberated zones. The old liberated zone, which was the stronghold of the revolution, was severely damaged by the U.S. imperialist war of aggression and extensively devastated by all types of bombs, ammunition, poisonous chemicals and other modern weapons. As a result, our economic foundations in that zone were heavily destroyed. And even though peace has now returned to our country, the Lao people of all tribes still continue to shed blood and to encounter numerous obstacles and difficulties in rehabilitating and improving their living conditions. As for the new liberated zone which was formerly controlled by the reactionary administration and the neocolonialist regime of the U.S. imperialists, it had been extensively plagued with decadent culture of the old regime before it was liberated. In the preliberation days in the new liberated zone, our people of all strata, especially young people, were led astray by an extravagant way of life. Most young people were indifferent to engaging in production. The prevalent decadent culture also attracted hard-working laboring people in the countryside in this province to abandon their farmlands and settle down in this city as traders, thus increasing the number of capitalists and businessmen in the urban areas. At the same time, the bureaucrats and tribal chieftains also increased efforts to claim ownership of more parcels of land in this province, thus driving laboring people to flee their farmland to live in the city.

Despite prevailing favorable climatic conditions for crop cultivation in the province, under the old regime the people of various tribes always suffered a rice shortage for at least 6 months per year. They were compelled to import rice for consumption. As for rich natural resources in the province, such as benzoin and cardamon fruits, the capitalists and bureaucrats forced the people to sell to them at minimal prices. Moreover, the enemies also attempted to lure and persuade our technicians, skilled workers and professors and students with qualified scientific backgrounds to work in foreign countries. All this shows that the enemies have tried in every way to sabotage our new regime. In addition to making military threats and instigating unrest and rebellion, they have also stepped up psywar propaganda campaigns to create rifts among the people of various tribes, to separate the people from the leadership of the country and to separate our revolution from those in other fraternal countries, such as Vietnam and the Soviet Union. The primary target of their efforts tends to be the destruction of our economic infrastructure.

Even though the aftermath of the U.S. imperialists' war of aggression is immense and heavy; even though the schemes of the imperialists and international reactionaries, particularly the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists remain extremely notorious and dangerous, thus blocking the economic transformation and construction and the advancement of the revolution; and even though natural conditions are unfavorable for developing production and improving the living conditions of the people due to the extensive mountainous terrain in the province; thanks to the perseverance and leadership of all comrades in the Luang Prabang provincial party committee and the local administrations at all levels as well as the efforts of all party cadres and members in guiding the people of all tribes to implement effectively and correctly the overall policy and plans of each specific field adopted by the party Central Committee in accordance with the prevailing situation in the province, this province has scored certain significant achievements as follows:

In agriculture and forestry, you, comrades, have reclaimed and cleared over 2,000 hectares of rice fields. Where favorable conditions for crop cultivation prevail, such as irrigation canals and other facilities, you have carried out dry season rice growing and intensive agriculture, thus increasing the volume of agricultural work between 3.5 and 4 percent. This is a new factor in production development. It can be said that Luang Prabang Province is a front runner in carrying out intensive agriculture, and knows how to apply modern production techniques in agricultural production and to mobilize the people to participate in production and to strive for self-sufficiency and self-reliance. By 1981, the province had no need for rice-supply assistance from the central level as it did between 1975 and 1979 when it had to request between 2,000 and 2,500 tons per year from the central level. By 1982, the province has managed to send surplus rice to the central level and to feed some local army units.

In finance, formerly expenditures were always higher than revenues. In 1979, the Central Committee allocated central budgets to meet the 54-percent budget deficit suffered by the province. However, in 1981, the deficit was down to 23 percent. However, in 1982 the province will be self-sufficient in this area.

In the educational, cultural and social fields, during the past 6 years, you, comrades, have striven to do away with the backward culture and customs left behind by the old regime while restoring the fine culture of the nation in embroidering, weaving, knitting, making earthenwares and doing basketwork. Art and literature have also been restored, consolidated and changed so as to be characterized by nationalism and advanced science. The movements in education, cultural studies and eradication of illiteracy have become outstanding movements among the people of various tribes. The eradication of illiteracy in the whole province was officially announced on 17 April 1980. This means that Luang Prabang is the second province which has successfully stamped out illiteracy. The first province to achieve this success was Houa Phan.

The provision of cultural training for cadres and party members is another problem that the provincial party committee and party members have paid attention to and have tackled enthusiastically and determinedly despite the difficulty of a limited number of cadres and party members with low qualifications.

Dear comrades, regarding the problem of building the party and comrades, in setting up party units in Luang Prabang Province in the beginning, more than 1,000 comrade members of the former Indochinese Communist Party units transferred to become members of the present LPRP. All those comrade members had been trained and tempered in the areas of attitude, stand and revolutionary nature in the flames of the hard, protracted, complex, fierce and furious struggle during the period of national-democratic revolution.

At present, the contingent of cadres and party members has been expanded and developed along with the work style of revolutionary development, thus guaranteeing the fulfillment of the two strategic tasks, namely, the defense and the building of the socialist country. At present, all of you 1,796 comrade party members are divided into 129 party units with a total of 5,500 cadres of various tribes including 2,400 female cadres.

It can be said that this is a great, all-round and firm success. It has advanced the various factors in the province to be fruitful and has created a new work style which serves as a basis for Luang Prabang Province to march forward to new, ever greater and firmer successes.

On behalf of the party Central Committee, I would like to wholeheartedly praise and hail the party committee organization, cadres, soldiers, police and fraternal people of various tribes throughout Luang Prabang Province for their endeavor in overcoming all difficulties and worthily contributing to the common cause of revolution of the party and the nation.

Dear comrades, prior to the opening of this conference, several movements have been carried out in this province. Those included the persistent movements in boosting production, working on the agricultural tax, purchasing rice, making preparations for crop planting, organizing study in the party, carrying out art and literature practices, carrying out sports and acrobatic activities, implementing sanitation rules, positively fulfilling specialized tasks, preparing gifts and so forth. This shows that all people of various tribes, together with all cadres, combatants and personnel, have been concerned for and been proud of the opening of this provincial conference. They all have positively scored achievements to welcome the historical conference of their province, and earnestly hoped that this conference will review and evaluate some lessons experienced over the past 6 years while adopting an appropriate direction and laying out detailed, sacred plans in order to lead their province to march forward continuously and firmly and to introduce them to new activities in performing tasks and in their daily life. I believe that this conference of yours, comrades, is a concrete preparation for the third party congress to be held in the immediate future.

Dear comrades, in the political report at the conference, you have clearly evaluated the achievements and victories scored over the past 6 years, and have pointed out the shortcomings and remaining problems comprehensively. The party Central Commiteee considers this, to have held a congress at the grassroots level and then a cadre conference, a positive preparation by the entire party committee organization and the people of Luang Prabang Province. As a result, they have successfully concentrated the intelligence of the party members on studying, discussing and solving various decisive, basic problems. Most outstanding comrades have been selected to the party committee and to be provincial conference representatives. The various party organizations have become firmer and purer.

The Central Committee would like to hail the pure spirit in self-criticism and criticism among fellow comrades. Such criticism demonstrates the thorough revolutionary characteristics of a genuine communist party which firmly grasps the rules of party development and which maintains a spirit of serving our people. I am firmly convinced that said spirit will be promoted and expanded in this conference and in the concrete implementation of various resolutions of other conferences in the next stage.

An outstanding character of the party committee is in strengthening unity within the party and the relationship between the party and the masses. You, comrades, should constantly strive to maintain and preserve such a spirit. At the same time, as true communists who are fully responsible for the destiny and interests of the laboring people of all tribes, all party cadres and members and the party committees at all levels must try to find their own weak points, handicaps and shortcomings, and resolve to adopt practical measures to eliminate them as soon as possible.

To give you, comrades, some advice so that you will be able to understand more clearly certain national problems and to use it as a basis for studying and implementing the 1982 plan as well as the plans of many years to come, I would like to review certain tasks for you as follows:

1. You must clearly understand that our country is an outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia, and Luang Prabang Province is the rear base for other northern provinces in resisting the schemes of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and the Thai reactionary ruling clique. Even though Luang Prabang Province is a rear province, it has Luang Prabang city as an area of strategic significance for psywar propaganda campaigns. It used to be the old nest of the reactionary elements. The Chinese reactionary clique and the U.S. imperialists have concentrated more efforts in sabotaging this province than any other northern provinces. Therefore, we must constantly maintain a high sense of vigilance, and be determined to smash promptly all sabotage schemes and acts of the enemies in effecting the so-called peaceful transformation policy [kan han pian doi santi], inciting unrest and invading and swallowing our country. Our enemies -- the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese big-nation expansionsts and hegemonists -- are weakening and deteriorating with every passing day and are now more isolated than before. They are faced with a deadlock. The Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists -- the (?most) dangerous enemies directly facing our Lao nation -- are engaging in internal bickering, and are fiercely squabbling for power. They have notoriously accused and eliminated one another. Their four modernizations policy has failed. Their policy of hegemonism and aggression has brought more misery and poverty to the Chinese people of all strata. The Chinese people in several regions have risen up to oppose their reactionary and traitorous policy. With such conditions prevailing, they are unable to wage a large-scale aggressive war to swallow our country and other Indochinese countries easily. But, obdurate and aggressive by nature, they are stepping up their collusion with the imperialists who are always bent on destroying our revolution.

That is why you, comrades, must firmly understand the two strategic duties -- to defend and build the country -- and closely link them together. If you can effectively carry out the former duty of defending the country, you will be able to fulfill the latter well, and vice versa. Your report has already spelled out numerous measures which must be implemented to fulfill these two duties. I would like to reiterate here that to carry out effectively the duty of defending the country and maintaining local security, the party committee must build firm and all-round strong political foundations, firmly control the armed forces and public security forces, consolidate and strengthen unity among the people of all tribes, coordinate Lao-Vietnamese solidarity and militant alliance with regional strength [kamlang khongkhet] to smash the enemies' war of all-round destruction, and consolidate and strengthen all (?economic) foundations in the province so as to build a strong rear for the other northern provinces. This is the most fundamental factor in strengthening the field position [tha sanam] for people's war and in building overall strength for smashing the enemies in all circumstances.

Another important thing is that the provincial party committee and the provincial administration must pay close attention to educating, leading and taking care of the armed forces and public security forces so as to ensure that they are absolutely loyal to the party and the revolution, are highly qualified and are capable of being a sharp tool for the party in defending the country, maintaining public security and building the economy.

It is also important that you take initiative in launching political offensives against the enemies. Especially, we must continue waging propaganda campaigns to convince overseas Chinese to understand the correct and just policy of our party so that they will become more cooperative and support the revolutionary administration in preserving peace and friendship.

2. You must fully explore and make use of all the strong and outstanding potentials of each locality; be determined to solve all economic problems in the province with a sense of self-mastery, self-sufficiency, self-reliance and self-building; and implement an effective management system in goods transportation and distribution with a view to improving gradually the living conditions of the people of all tribes in the province.

Luang Prabang Province, like any other province, has been blessed with political foundations, particularly in the old liberated zone. It is also blessed with a number of economic potentials. However, the development of economic foundations in this province has been slow. The cadres' capability in managing the economy and society remains inadequate and there are insufficient technical cadres in the economic sphere to cope with the economic development work. This problem must be effectively solved.

Even though we have yet to explore economic potentials for economic construction and development profoundly, past experience of the northern provinces clearly shows that to do away with the natural economy and to promote goods production in order to improve the living conditions of the people of all tribes, it is imperative that the production, purchase pricing and transportation of goods and local culture must be interrelated and must support one another. If we fail to resolve problems in these spheres simultaneously, we will be unable to effect change in any small-scale production. When goods production is developed, requirements for technical management [word indistinct] will be automatically established. Then we will have actual conditions for introducing new techniques in science and technology as well as modified tools for use in goods production, and for (?coordinating) agricultural production with industrial production from the grassroots level step by step. It is important that certain detailed appropriate production procedures be adopted and implemented. Such procedures must evolve from the lower to the higher levels, from a simple stage to more complicated ones, from using rudimentary tools to modified ones, and from using semiautomatic machines to fully automatic ones. We must never be hasty in implementing these procedures. At the same time, we must avoid the tendency of conservatism and containment and the habit of refusing to seek and use new methods.

In Luang Prabang Province, in particular, the transformation of production relations is very significant, and the building and development of production forces must be earnestly carried out. This is because in the past Luang Prabang Province was the bastion of the monarchy, feudalism and reactionaries, and an area where the capitalist system was developing. Even though some production tools in Luang Prabang Province have been refurbished, a large number of them still need (?repair). As for agricultural cooperatives which have been set up in this province, they still lack efficiency. Therefore, we must thoroughly uproot the old production relations which bred the oppressive class, and set up new socialist production relations. Only by doing this will we be able to carry out the revolution thoroughly at the grassroots level in the countryside.

As for the exploitation of economic potentials, you, comrades, have set up a goal of carrying out intensive agriculture, digging irrigation canals, building dams, enlarging rice fields, planting industrial trees and supplementary crops, developing livestock raising, collecting more forest products, and expanding handicraft and small industrial production in order to fulfill requirements in agricultural and forestry production and of the people. You must strive for self-sufficiency in food supply, send surplus food supply to the center and keep some for supplying to other front line provinces in the northern region.

Moreover, in order to bring more wealth to the province and to allow the people to improve their living conditions incessantly, you must concentrate on exploiting valuable natural resources for processing into export goods. However, export management must be effective. Regarding exports, you are blessed with numerous potentials, for example, forest products. To tap such potential effectively, you must pay attention to solving problems regarding the exploiting, purchasing, processing, storage, classification of goods for export in accordance with international trade law, packaging and organizing of exports. At this conference, you should discuss with one another to find out measures to overcome various weak points and difficulties so as to attain self-mastery and to bring wealth and prosperity to this province.

3. You must endeavor to bring educational, cultural and public health services to the people of all tribes in order to effect a new change in their livelihood and to their way of life and to gradually narrow the economic and cultural gap among the people of various tribes. An estimated 60 percent of the population in the province are hilltribesmen. Even though illiteracy has been stamped out in this province, the standard of literacy of the people still remains low, thus creating a major obstacle to your efforts in turning the province into an all-round strong and rich entity. It is evident that a number of party cadres and members and a large number of people in this province have been heavily influenced by superstitious beliefs and obsolete and backward traditions and customs. As a result, these people still remain ignorant; and they have encountered difficulties caused by numerous natural calamities. Actually, they also desire to enjoy a better and plentiful life, better education and prosperity in their livelihood. Thus, it is very important that you must implement the idea of offering educational and cultural services to the people of all tribes one step ahead of other tasks. Such an idea will serve to further strengthen the relations between the party and the people of all tribes. Any incident indicating the party's indifference to the laboring masses only runs counter to the party's true nature and serves to weaken the party's strengthe to a certain extent.

You said in your report that you will set up teacher-training schools in three northern districts to serve the people of various tribes, mostly the rural and tribal people, and will also establish primary schools in mountainous areas and canton hospitals in remote areas. This is of paramount significance to the line of gradually and firmly reducing our cultural and ideological disparities and improving living conditions. You, comrades, should study and start taking concrete actions to implement this. Stress should not be put on theory, plans, paperwork and talking.

4. It is necessary to step up the task of building the party and building and nurturing cadres so that they will be capable of actually leading and organizing the implementation of all party policies and plans. As once emphasized by the comrade general secretary of our party, the purpose of building party organizations and nurturing and building cadres is to organize the implementation of and fulfill the party line, policies and plans. This offers a concrete basis on which to assess and control the fruits of building party organizations and the ranks of our cadres.

Generally speaking, our cadres and party members have in the past effectively carried out the tasks entrusted to them by the party and state. Nevertheless, there still are many remaining weak points, the most outstanding of which is that we have not yet firmly grasped the party line and duties. Many comrades have not clearly understood matters concerning the transitional period, the dictatorship of the proletariat, the system of collective mastery, the three revolutions and the absolute reliance on socialism. Many have individually analyzed these issues and do not understand that these issues constitute one whole unified system, that they are inseparable and closely interrelated. One cannot pay less attention to one particular issue than others. The organization of implementation of party policies and plans is still weak. Some comrades are still weak and have thus become victims of the enemy's psychological warfare.

These weak points arise from many different causes. The three main causes are as follows:

a. The training and tempering of party members and cadres to perceive the stand and attitude of the working class has not been effective and has not been regularly carried out. They have not yet persisted in trying to grasp the stand and attitude of the working class and in studying and understanding party policies and plans. They continue to be affected by the peasant ideas of small-scale production.

b. Party members and cadres still have a low level of knowledge of Marxism-Leninism.

c. The various procedures on managing, training, educating and protecting cadres have not yet been effectively carried out. We continue to relax our attention on some occasions and in some places.

For this reasons, the task of building and nurturing cadres and building various party organizations must be aimed at resolving the above-mentioned problems and at fulfilling our final objective. We must attentively resolve the three main points just described. Special attention must be paid to helping party members and cadres to gain a profound understanding of the fierce, uncompromising, protracted, complex and difficult characteristics of the class struggle in the period of transition to socialism. It is necessary to mobilize cadres and party members in order to bring into full play the fine nature and traditions of our party and nation and to train and temper themselves to grasp the revolutionary qualifications in the struggle againt the reactionary forces. We must continue to make more and better contributions to the cause of defending and building our socialist fatherland for the sake of future generations.

Unity within the party and among the ranks of cadres is a vital issue of the revolution. Party committees at all levels -- particularly the standing committee of a party committee and secretaries and deputy secretaries of party committees -- must serve as true models and the core in dealing with this issue. They must serve as mainstays in consolidating and strengthening the unity within the party and among the ranks of cadres and the people of all tribes.

Dear comrades, I am very pleased with the growth and development of the party organization of Luang Prabang Province. This unity is clearly reflected in the spirit of solidarity of the entire party organization in assessing the results of its work and in strictly determining their remaining weak points so as to lead local movements to advance.

More specifically, a party organization is a basic factor in the success of all tasks. Let the comrades pay close attention to, safeguard and nurture it so that it will grow and blossom continuously.

In this meeting you have formulated tasks, objectives and new methods for concrete implementation. This is only an initial success. You comrades must continue to hold meetings and discussions to implement these tasks and turn them into reality.

The party Central Committee is convinced that with its revolutionary traditions and determination to advance, the party organization of Luang Prabang Province will be able to lead the people of various tribes in the province to surmount all difficulties and score more glorious achievements in the task of turning Luang Prabang into a province that is strong politically and militarily, rich economically and progressive culturally and socially so that it can fulfill the honorable tasks entrusted to this province, which is on the frontline and in the center of the northern provinces of heroic Laos, thus contributing to the lofty cause of our party.

I wish that this conference of cadres be crowned with glorious success. I wish the entire provincial party organization growth, development and strength. I wish all comrade delegates good health.

In conclusion, I would like to extend regards, warm solidarity and love and best wishes from the party Central Committee, the Political Bureau, the comrade general secretary and from myself through you to our fraternal people of all tribes and strata in Luang Prabang Province. Let us join in strengthening our solidarity in our joyous and successful labor, our production and our struggle!

Fully understanding the fate of the country and the heavy but honorable and glorious responsibilities of a communist combatant, let all cadres and party members resolutely and heroically advance to win new and greater victories on the new front of the task of defending the country and building our beloved socialist fatherland!

Long live the LPDR! Long live the honorable and glorious LPRP! Long live invincible Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism!

VIGILANCE AGAINST PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE URGED

BK081430 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Unattributed editorial: "Enhance Revolutionary Vigilance To Defeat the Enemy's Psychological Warfare"]

[Text] Respected listeners, dear friends and comrades: Psychological warfare is one of the aggressive schemes intended to swallow up our country. It employs cunning and skillful tactics to peacefully and abruptly change the way of thinking and attitude of our cadres and combatants.

During the war of aggression conducted against our country for the past 30 years, the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen attentively carried out their psychological warfare in coordination with their conventional war to sabotage and destroy our revolution. Despite the complete defeat of their war of aggression, they continue to wage psychological warfare against our country to sabotage our revolution and our cadres and combatants.

Our country has now achieved complete liberation and has been the LPDR for 6 years. It has now embarked on the path of socialist transformation and construction. This has aroused indignation among the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists and their henchmen, who want to sabotage and weaken Laos so as to swallow it up. This visious plan as well as their dark dream is reflected by the conduct of various schemes, for example, the launching of serious psychological warfare attacks against our country. They have adopted psychological warfare as one of the strategies in their state policy, with a view to infiltrating into and interfering with our internal affairs, sabotaging party leadership, slandering and vilifying party and state policy and plans and changing the true nature of the party forces, the administration, armed forces, public security forces and various mass organizations of the party. All this is aimed at carrying out a very cunning and heinous scheme which cannot be easily perceived from the outside.

To conceal their traitorous, aggressive plans, they have always resorted to many methods of slandering and viligying our party and state line and policies and they continue to do. For example, they have slandered and vilified the line leading our country to advance toward socialism and our party's military, economic and diplomatic line. They are taking advantage of the immediate difficulties of our revolution and the country and some weak points of our cadres and combatants, particularly difficulties in our living conditions, to slander the new regime, our party and state. They are launching propaganda campaigns to sow discord among us and sabotage unity within the party, the administration, the front and among the people and our revolutionary forces. They are creating division between the low and the high levels, between the central and local levels, between the party and the masses, between the administration and the people, between the army and the people and among our various tribes. They are trying to divide the militant alliance among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea, and to separate Laos from the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, and the Lao revolution from the world revolution.

The enemies are currently concentrating on causing division within our party leadership, separating Laos from Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, with a view to isolating us in order to attack and swallow up our country.

In addition to launching slanderous propaganda campaigns and other tactics, such as bribery and threats, they have propagandized luxurious ways of life, the way of enjoying oneself on a daily basis and the despicable material life of the colonialist and imperialist regimes in Western countries.

They have deceived and bribed the people to flee the country. This tactic is mostly aimed at the youths, students, schoolchildren those who once followed the colonialist way of life and those within our ranks who have been spoiled.

In implementing this tactic, the enemies first try to get acquainted with our cadres and soldiers, and then give them gifts or offer them bribes. They even go to the extreme of buying off our cadres and combatants with money and other items such as whisky and cigarettes, or even girls, in order to force our cadres and soldiers to follow them and work for them, and to betray the national interest by opposing the party's line and policies. They also create suspicion among us, separate us from each other, threaten to assassinate our cadres and soldiers, and so forth.

Simultaneously, the enemies have striven to carry out deceitful propaganda praising U.S. imperialism and Beijing big-nation expansionism and hegemonism. For example, they have propagandized the strength of the United States and of the Beijing expansionist in the areas of manpower, weaponry, economy and others. They have conducted deceitful propaganda by praising the reactionary, counterrevolutionary organizations in the so-called national salvation front, national salvation party, chiefs of the Mong and Yao tribes, and so forth with the aim of opposing our new system and creating disturbances with violent, counterrevolutionary forces, in particular in the areas where our ethnic minority people have lived.

All the aforesaid psychological warfare schemes of the enemies are aimed at changing the spirit of our cadres, soldiers and people, distorting facts on how we engage in labor and fight to defend and build our country, sow division, create suspicion and distrust among our people throughout the country with the intention of weakening our combat spirit in order to sabotage and destroy our revolutionary forces without combat.

In short, psychological warfare is an extremely brutal and vicious scheme which cannot be simply perceived with a cursory glance. At present, the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, together with other reactionaries, are closely colluding in using this crafty and wicked scheme to sabotage and destroy our revolution, the correct line and policies of our party and state, the contingents of our cadres and combatants, and our international solidarity.

Therefore, it is necessary for us to be very vigilant and conscious and to be determined to defeat all psychological warfare schemes of the enemies in a timely manner in order to maintain, promote and expand the bright and glorious revolutionary tradition and true nature of our cadres and combatants. To do so successfully, we must pay attention to fulfilling certain tasks as follows: educate and train all our cadres, combatants, personnel, workers and people to clearly understand the wickedness and danger of the enemy's psychological warfare; regularly publicize the situation, line and policies of our party and state to our cadres and combatants; pay attention to firmly grasping the political and ideological situation and the general situation in units or regiments; raise the standard of living of various organizations attached to the army; examine and resolutely settle all shortcomings; be concerned for the living conditions of the cadres and combatants; truly respect the people's rights to collective mastery; strictly implement army discipline, rules and regulations; raise to a higher level the model roles of cadres and party members; and do not allow the enemy to take advantage of various weak points or shortcomings to disrupt our internal unity.

The most important point is that we must always be very vigilant; think carefully and maintain an organizational sense before doing anything; maintain regulations and discipline; correctly and strictly implement the line and policies of the party and state; and so forth. By doing so effectively, we can victoriously check and smash all the enemy's psychological warfare schemes, and achieve security and purity.

EMBASSY SPOKESMAN DENIES FORCED LABOR CHARGE

BK090357 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 9 Mar 82 p 6

[Text] The Loatian Embassy in Bangkok yesterday refused to comment on a report that political prisoners are forced to work in a United Nations refugee programme in Laos. The report has prompted the Dutch Government to threaten to halt its financial support for the programme. A spokesman of the Laotian Embassy here said yesterday he had not heard of the report before, but said he had earlier visited the site of the project and found no evidence of forced labour.

The programme, known as the Tomo irrigation project, is being financed by the Netherlands with technical assistance from the UN Food and Agricultural Organization and the UN Development Programme. It is part of a larger resettlement effort in Laos for long-term refugees who fled across the border to Thailand during the Indochina war.

The spokesman said he had taken foreign journalists to tour the site of the project while he was serving in the Foreign Ministry in Laos. "But we came across no forced labour," he said. When asked whether any political prisoners could be employed in the project now, he said: "I have no comments on that." However, he said he will take up the matter with his government. He claimed that most of the workers employed in the project are rural people living in nearby areas. The project site is located south of Pakse, he said. "They are voluntarily working in the project, just the way Thai people are participating in the rural development programme here," he said.

The issue surfaced in The Hague last Thursday in the Dutch parliament when Kees van Dijk, minister for development cooperation, revealed that the Dutch Government filed a protest earlier last year with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees over the alleged forced labour concerning the project. The spokesman of the Dutch Foreign Ministry said the UN High Commission had told the Dutch Government that it suspected about 200 "social deviants" might be working in the Laotian project.

FOREIGN TRADE DELEGATION DEPARTS FOR LAOS

BK080630 Bangkok Domestic SErvice in Thai 0530 GMT 8 Mar 82

[Text] A Thai trade delegation departed Bangkok for Laos this morning. The delegation, led by Foreign Trade Department Director General Phatchara Itsarasena, comprises several members of the private sector. The delegation's visit to Laos follows the recent visit there by the Thai-Lao border cooperation committee headed by Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot. According to Sitthi, the Thai trade delegation will discuss the exchange of goods with the exception of rice of which Laos has plenty.

Regarding the Lao proposal for Thailand to open more border crossings, Sitthi said new border crossings, if any, will be opened only on a temporary basis to facilitate the transit of goods and to relieve border problems. Government agencies concerned will discuss this matter before making a recommendation to the Cabinet. The Cabinet must approve the opening of a border crossing. Sitthi, however, did not disclose where the new crossings will be along the Lao border.

LAO BORDER-CROSSING PROPOSAL TO BE CONSIDERED

BK080351 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 8 Mar 82

[Excerpt] Thailand will consider a Lao proposal to open more border crossings along the Mekong River. This was stated by Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot, who has just returned from a 2-day visit to Vientiane. The proposal was made during talks between Laotian Interior Minister Gen Sisavat Keobounphan and General Sitthi, who left Bangkok on Friday [5 March] with 13 Thai members of the Thai-Lao border committee. General Sitthi was informed by his Lao counterpart that the opening of more border crossings will ease communications and strengthen the relationship between the Thai and Lao people.

Thailand operates three border crossing stations -- two in Nong Khai and one in Mukdahan District of Nakhon Phanom. Minister Sitthi said both sides have also agreed that the future border problems (?would) be settled at the local level with meeting of provincial committees.

ASEAN VIEWED AS TARGET OF ESPIONAGE ACTIVITIES

[Editorial: "More Spy Scandals in the Offing?"]

[Text] Among the criticisms levelled at agencies of the United Nations are that they provide a semilegitimate cover for operatives of foreign intelligence agencies to gather data of a political, military and strategic nature while acting under the guise of a UN "expert." While it would be unfair and untrue to accept the premise put forward by one American commentator that UN Headquarters in New York and Geneva do nothing but provide cover for a "nest of spies," it might be wise to have a good look at the credentials of some of the more obscure "experts" staffing international centres in the Third World. Such a scrutiny, if intensive enough, would be certain to turn up a few "black sheep."

There is reason to believe that ASEAN is a prime target for those engaged in clandestine intelligence-gathering activities. Anyone who doubts this only has to look back through newspapers of recent months to be reminded of plots uncovered in Kuala Lumpur, Jakarta and Singapore. The second secretary and press attache of the Soviet Embassy in Singapore, Anatoliy Larkin, together with Marine Superintendent Alexsandr Bondarev who supervised the maintenance of Soviet and East European ships calling at Singapore were expelled recently by the Lee Kuan Yew Government. Larkin is reported to have posed as a Swedish journalist and to have tried to bribe an army technical officer to provide secret information. The officer reported the attempt and Larkin, together with Bondarev who had been using a Singapore businessman as part of a regular espionage network were expelled.

The Singapore incident followed the uncovering of a similar espionage ring in Indonesia, which led to the abrupt departure of a Soviet colonel from Jakarta. In July last year three Soviet Embassy officials were expelled from Malaysia after it was discovered that Siddiq Mohamed Ghouse, one of the assistants of the prime minister, was a Soviet agent. Even in Thailand we have not been immune in recent years to the occasional "spy scandal."

No ASEAN government has yet officially connected all these events, but it does fuel the suspicion that there is a large espionage network active in this region, possibly controled out of Singapore, and surveillance on the activities of Soviet diplomats has reportedly been stepped up as a result. ASEAN countries already carefully check the credentials of foreign journalists to ensure that they are bona-fide and this once-popular cover for foreign intelligence operatives has now largely been abandoned because it provides too great a focus of attention.

With security checks being stepped up on diplomats, foreign correspondents and suspicious "export-import" agencies and airline representatives, there could well be a greater tendency in the future to use international centres as a base. Here the checks are not so tight, as the host government does not have as great a say in just who is employed in what capacity. And there are plenty of international agencies operating with the ASEAN region. Third World countries are, in general, very much aware of the dangers of spies and subversives and the prompt action taken by the Singapore, Jakarta and Kuala Lumpur governments should be heeded as a warning to those governments who would make use of us to further their own interests to our detriment. ASEAN countries seem to be a magnet for these unsavoury people and our immigration and special branch police must be fully alert to their duty of making them as unwelcome as possible.

FIFTH VCP NATIONAL CONGRESS TO OPEN 27 MAR

NHAN DAN SCORES U.S. SOUTHEAST ASIA POLICY

OW090719 Hanoi VNA in English 0703 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 9 -- NHAN DAN today exposes the United States' collusion with Beijing regarding Southeast Asia. Resource-rich Southeast Asia, the paper points out, is an alluring prey of U.S. capitalism. With its political importance Southeast Asia is also the scene of a bitter struggle between the forces of national independence and socialism on the one hand and imperialism and international reaction on the other and is, therefore, an important target for the U.S. global strategy, the paper adds.

NHAN DAN says: "The United States is colluding with Chinese expansionism and other reactionary forces to pit the ASEAN countries against the three Indochinese countries and the Soviet Union, to check the advance of revolutionary and progressive forces, and maintain the position of imperialism in this part of the world."

The paper continues: "The United States has thus rendered the Southeast Asian situation tense and peace-loving forces in the ASEAN countries are worried by the subsequent threat to regional peace and stability. Washington's decision to sell offensive weapons to China has met with strong protest from countries in this region."

"Who can say that the sophisticated weapons Washington promises to Beijing will not some day be used against the Southeast Asian peoples?," the paper asks. It points out: "Public opinion in the region knows too well that the United States is only concerned with its own interests. It is playing the 'China card' only to further its global strategy regardless of the legitimate interests of the ASEAN countries." Obviously, it notes, Washington's collusion with Beijing runs counter to the fundamental aspirations and interests of the peoples of the ASEAN countries.

"In the interests of the 350 million people in Southeast Asia and for peace, stability, friendship and cooperation, one must resolutely struggle against all forms of intervention of imperialism and international reaction and to start frank, constructive dialogues between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries on the principle of equality and mutual benefit," NHAN DAN concludes.

BANGLADESH PEACE GROUP HAILS INDOCHINA PROPOSALS

OW051603 Hanoi VNA in English 1513 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 5 -- Ali Aksand, general secretary of the Bangladesh Peace Council, has welcomed the new proposals of the Indochinese countries as "timely and realistic" for the stabilisation of the situation in Southeast Asia.

In a newly issued statement, Ali Aksand said: "At present, the situation in Southeast Asia remains tense and potentially explosive as a result of continued hostility, acts of aggression and threat of further military intervention against Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam, by Chinese hegemonism, U.S. imperialism, and other reactionary circles. The renewed attempts of the genocidal Pol Pot clique, Sihanouk and other henchmen of the imperialists to regroup their counter-revolutionary forces with Chinese-U.S. weapons for fresh attack against the legitimate government of Kampuchea are clear proofs of such dangerous designs. China and the U.S., in the interest of their strategic aim, are continuously striving to involve the ASEAN countries in a political conflict and confrontation with the three neighbouring Indochinese states. Such policy, which threatens peace and security of the entire area and the world, creates great anxiety in the mind of people.

"The people of Bangladesh and, for that matter, all people of the world would like to see an end to all these hegemonist imperialist actions against the sovereignty states of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam and establish a good neighbourly and peaceful relations between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries based on peaceful coexistence, friendship and cooperation.

"The fifth foreign ministers conference of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam has once again reiterated these countries strong desire for peace and for peaceful settlement of all problems without the interference from outside, which would guarantee peace, security, independence and territorial integrity of all countries of the ASEAN and Indochinese groups.

THAILAND ASKED TO RETURN MILITARY CARGO PLANE

OW090727 Hanoi VNA in English 0715 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 9 -- Chau Phong, deputy chief of the Foreign Ministry's Third Department for Asia, on March 6 met the Thai charge d'affaires a.i. here, (Bhadung Dhanyangkun), to draw his country's attention to Vietnam's requests concerning a Vietnamese AN-26 military cargo plane which, en route from Kampuchea back to Vietnam on February 11, lost contact with the ground control station due to technical trouble and bad weather and made a forced landing in Thailand.

The requests had been made in the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's note No 70-HC addressed to its Thai counterpart on February 23, but so far they have not yet been met by the Thai side. The Vietnamese Foreign Ministry expresses its concern about this matter and finds hardly accountable Thailand's intention in delaying the return of the plane and the Vietnamese on board, and in preventing the Vietnamese ambassador in Bangkok from meeting the victims. The Vietnamese Foreign Ministry requests the Thai authorities to return the aircraft and the people on board to Vietnam as soon as possible and first of all, allow the Vietnamese ambassador to Thailand to contact the victims without delay.

The Thai charge d'affaires said he would forward the requests of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry to his country.

AFP REPORTER VISITS CAMP FOR KAMPUCHEAN REFUGEES

BK051531 Hong Kong AFP in English 1513 GMT 5 Mar 82

[By Michel Blanchard]

[Excerpts] Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam, 5 Mar (AFP) -- Camp 979-A for Cambodian refugees, to which this correspondent is the first journalist ever to be granted admittance, has a population of 5,000, the majority of which is ethnic Chinese.

Situated at Xa Minh, 110 kms (68 miles) northeast of Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon), the camp has the appearance of a model village and is to outward appearances largely indistinguishable from its neighbours in Song Be Province.

Opened in December 1979 on 400 hectares (980 acres) of reclaimed scrubland, the camp is the first to have been set up to concentrate Cambodian refugees who began arriving in the Ho Chi Minh City area after 1975.

The majority of the refugees are Chinese, and though they are mostly tradesmen or skilled workers -- joiners, mechanics, electricians, and the like -- their qualifications are deemed to be somewhat below Vietnamese standards. They are, in short, "unproductive". More than 50 per cent of the camp's population are female and little less than 50 per cent are under the age of 16 years.

A Vietnamese official told this correspondent that the refugees would not be allowed to remain in the country indefinitely "because of a number of problems" the nation itself had to contend with.

The head of the refugees' committee, which administers the camp, said that all but 1,000 of the 5,000 inmates had relatives already settled abroad, whom they were anxious to join. The breakdown he gave by country was: 2,400 refugees who wanted to go to France, 1,900 to Canada, 243 to the United States, and the remainder to Sweden, Australia, and Switzerland. Between 150,000 and 200,000 Cambodians are estimated to have fled to Vietnam between 1975 and 1979 to escape the Khmer Rouge regime. Of these, 120,000 have been repatriated with help from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Office. Some 12,000 are still in refugee camps in Vietnam.

MEETINGS, PAPER MARK INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

NHAN DAN Editorial

OW080717 Hanoi VNA in English 0701 GMT 8 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 8 -- The role played by women has been very important to the destiny of Vietnam throughout its history, says NHAN DAN in its editorial celebrating International Women's Day today.

With their great contributions to the liberation of the country, women have obtained a worthy position in society, the paper says. It notes that women account for 60 or 66 percent of the workforce in agriculture, light industry, trade, culture, public health and education, and that in public offices they make up 30 percent of the personnel.

NHAN DAN says that equality and other basic rights of women are constitutionally guaranteed and that the state, to create more favourable conditions for women, has expanded the network of creches and kindergartens, and built more cultural and medical facilities for the benefit of women and their children.

The Vietnam Women's Union has mobilized women to build and defined the country while helping them in educating their children and looking after their families.

The campaign for family planning jointly sponsored by the union and the Ministry of Public Health has a great meaning to social and economic development, the editorial adds.

SOVIET OFFICIAL VIEWS POWER PROJECTS COOPERATION

BK060630 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] The joint Soviet-Vietnamese working party on electric power cooperation met in Hanoi in late February. The Soviet delegation was headed by Nikolay Alekseyevich Lopatin, vice minister of the power industry and electrification. Before his departure, Mr Nikolay Alekseyevich Lopatin granted an interview to the Vietnam Central Television Network. Here is a transcript of the Soviet vice minister's answer on the results of the Soviet-Vietnamese cooperation in this respect:

Cooperation in the field of energy between Vietnam and the Soviet Union has been developing satisfactorily. As you may know, the main powerplants in northern Vietnam, such as the Cat Ba hydroelectric power station and the Pha Lai thermal powerplant, are being built and equipped with Soviet assistance. So are high tension lines and 110-kilovolt transformer stations which altogether form the electricity system in north Vietnam. One should also mention Soviet help in restoring the power supply project damaged and destroyed by U.S. bombs.

Many Soviet experts have been giving a helping hand in the operation of these projects. (?Within) the scope of cooperation, giving the increasing Soviet assistance, Vietnam has begun to build bigger power supply projects, including the biggest power plant in South-east Asia, the Hoa Binh hydroelectric power station with the capacity of nearly 2 million kilowatts. Design work for this particularly complex project as far as hydrography and geology are concerned was done by the (Chidev Krovach) designing institute in the Soviet Union.

The construction site is supplied with a high capacity Soviet machine. Building materials and facilities not available in Vietnam are also sent in from the Soviet Union. It is difficult to fully assess the importance of the Hoa Binh hydroelectric power station. In many years, the project will meet Vietnam's increasing electricity demand for various purposes.

During the meeting, the Soviet and Vietnamese delegations reviewed the work done at the construction site of the Pha Lai thermoelectric and Hoa Binh hydroelectric power projects. As for the project of cooperation, according to what has been agreed, the Soviet designing institute has outlined an overall plan for the development of Vietnam's power supply system from now to 1990 and even afterward to 1995.

We think that after each proposal of the Vietnamese Government, this master plan will become the centerpiece of Vietnam's energy strategy [sentence as heard]. Besides the project I mentioned above, it is also planned that another power station will be built in southern Vietnam, the Tri An Hydroelectric power station. Vietnamese designers, with the help of Soviet specialists, are carrying out the economic and technical analysis for the project.

More high-tension lines and transformers are under construction. An energy network will be then set up [word indistinct] to 110- and 220-kilovolt lines.

Technical cooperation between the energy ministries of the two countries will be stepped up considerably, with the training of Vietnamese technicians playing a major role.

We can truthfully say that Vietnam's energy workers are welcoming the forthcoming congress of the Communist Party with major achievements in energy development and they are (?performing) important tasks laid down by the party and Government of Vietnam.

SRV, USSR SIGN COAL-MINING-COOPERATION DOCUMENTS

BK090929 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] On 2 and 3 March, the Standing Committee of Hanoi Municipal Party Committee held a conference to discuss measures to enhance the local military tasks in 1982.

Le Van Luong, Political Bureau member and secretary of Hanoi Municipal Party Committee, and Col Gen Le Trong Tan, member of party Central Committee, chief of the General Staff and vice minister of defense, attended and addressed the conference.

The militia and self-defense forces in the capital have been strengthened, armed and technically equipped to ensure static defense and mobile combat. They have coordinated with the public security forces and troops to serve as a core in the movement for political security and social order and security.

The authorities of suburban districts and municipal precincts have recently begun to fully implement the law on military service, overfulfilling the 1982 first phase norm for troop induction in accordance with the law and quality standards.

The Standing Committee of Hanoi Municipal Party Committee has decided this year to intensively guide the authorities of districts, precincts and towns to fulfill even better the local military tasks in order to increase the capability and standards of the militia and self-defense forces, meeting the requirements of combat preparedness and contributing to the maintenance of political security and social order in the capital.

The 1982 local military tasks will be concentrated on the following aspects: Urgently make comprehensively good preparations for troop recruiting in all phases from now until the end of the year; organize and develop reserve units; and firmly control the mobilized forces when so ordered. As an immediate task Hanoi will continue to perfect projects for developing districts, precincts and towns into strong and firm fortresses by combining the economy with national defense, by better implementing political and ideological education and organizational tasks to make every strata of people thoroughly understand, and scrupulously implement the law on military service, and by dealing promptly and severely with draft dodgers.

SUZUKI DISCUSSES TRADE DISPUTE WITH U.S. IN DIET

OW091201 Tokyo KYODO in English 1150 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Tex] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) — Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said in the Diet Tuesday that every possible effort will be made to prevent the current trade disputes with the United States from developing into a major political issue. Responding to questioning at a meeting of the House of Representatives Budget Committee, Suzuki said disputes over trade imbalance are a problem not only in Japan-U.S. and Japan-European Community (EC) relations but also in U.S.-EC relations.

This is because the world is plagued by production slowdown, expanding inflation, growing unemployment and other unfavorable trends, the prime minister said. A basic solution to the disputes cannot be achieved unless the world economy is revitalized and production pushed up, he said. Japan and the United States alone cannot bring about a solution, he added.

The prime minister further said that some problems in Japan-U.S. relations cannot be avoided, as two-way trade between the two countries now reaches dollar 60 billion a year. But efforts must be made to prevent such problems from causing a "political fissure" between the two countries, he said.

Japan, with its Gross National Product (GNP) accounting for 10 percent of overall world GNP, realizes its economic role in the world and is ready to do its best for the protection, strengthening and promotion of the free trade system, he said.

SAKURAUCHI TO DISCUSS TRADE, DEFENSE WITH REAGAN

OW090931 Tokyo KYODO in English 0924 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) — Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will discuss trade and defense issues pending between Japan and the United States with President Ronald Reagan in Washington March 23. The itinerary for Sakurauchi's six-day visit to the U.S. — March 20-25 — was officially fixed Tuesday.

According to the itinerary, Sakurauchi will also meet with Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr. on March 23. He will also meet with Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, Cabinet ministers in charge of economic affairs, and senators and congressmen on March 22 or 23.

In addition to the trade and defense issues, Sakurauchi will also exchange views on international matters such as East-West relations, the Middle East and Latin American situations and U.S.-China relations.

Sakurauchi intends to talk with the American leaders from the broad perspective of "Japan-U.S. relations in the world," but will confirm "favorable Japan-U.S. relations." He is expected to hear strong U.S. demands for a more open Japanese market and for a Japanese defense buildup.

PLAN FOR ECONOMIC AID TO ROK TO BE DRAFTED

OW091257 Tokyo KYODO in English 1253 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) — Japan will draw up a draft plan for dollar 3 to 4 billion in economic assistance to South Korea before March 20, when Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will leave for the United States, government sources said Tuesday. South Korea had requested that Japan provide dollar 6 billion in aid for its Five-Year Social and Economic Development Program covering the years between 1982 and 1986, and government-level negotiations are now under way.

The sources said the drawing up of the draft plan will serve to demonstrate to America Japan's efforts to promote stability in Northeast Asia.

American Government officials have been calling on Japan to carry a bigger share of the burden in military and economic affairs in the region.

Japanese officials are formulating the plans to meet South Korean needs on 11 projects the South Korean Government intends to carry out in the five year plan. The total amount of economic assistance will be in excess of dollar 3 billion, the sources said.

FRENCH HELP SOUGHT IN REVIVING WORLD ECONOMY

OW090651 Tokyo KYODO in English 0638 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 9 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday Japan needs French cooperation to help the troubled world economy. "I hope Japan and France, an advanced country in science and technology, will help each other in revitalizing the world economy," Suzuki said in a brief meeting with Jacques Mitterrand, chairman of the state-owned aircraft maker Aerospatiale.

Mitterrand, younger brother of President Francois Mitterrand who is due to visit Japan next month, is now in Tokyo on a five-day tour of this country. He noted that France and Japan have been cooperating in nuclear technology and said he hopes such bilateral cooperation will be expanded in the field of aircraft production.

Mitterrand is scheduled to leave Japan Thursday.

NODONG SINMUN HITS U.S. NUCLEAR ARMS DEPLOYMENTS

SK100700 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2323 GMT 9 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 10 March commentary: "Nuclear Fanatics' Anachronistic Illusion"]

[Text] The U.S. imperialists' wicked scheme for nuclear war is becoming more undisguised with each passing day. According to foreign news reports, at a U.S. congressional hearing on 5 March, James Watkins, commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, revealed that it has been decided to deploy Tomahawk underwater cruise missiles tipped with nuclear warheads to the Pacific Fleet.

The U.S. imperialists chieftain earlier revealed in October last year that nuclear-tipped underwater cruise missiles would be deployed to attack submarines. However, this is the first time they have revealed a specifically designated area by announcing they would deploy the missiles to the U.S. Pacific Fleet. According to foreign news reports, submarines belonging to the U.S. 7th Fleet will carry nuclear-tipped cruise missiles in accord with the U.S. deployment plan. It is widely known that the guns of the U.S. 7th Fleet, which has shifted its strategic priority to Korea's East Sea, are trained upon the Korean people.

The U.S. imperialists are scheming to deploy nuclear-tipped underwater cruise missiles to the Pacific Fleet, especially the 7th Fleet. This clearly shows that, giving great priority to Asia, especially the Korean Peninsula, on the basis of their aggressive world strategy, they will not hesitate to ignite a new aggressive war there, even a nuclear war. This is another revelation of the U.S. imperialists' aggressive ambition against Korea and Asia. It evinces the U.S. imperialists' adventurist military nature in their strategy against Korea and Asia.

The reckless U.S. maneuvers to prepare for a nuclear war, which are becoming more undisguised with each passing day, are a provocation to the people who are struggling to maintain and consolidate peace in Asia and the world and a criminal act heightening tension on the Korean Peninsula and surrounding areas, threatening peace in Asia and the world. Although no one is threatening the United States, it is clamoring about defense to cover up its maneuvers to prepare for a nuclear war. Such brigandish logic is absurd.

The U.S. imperialists' defense argument is only a superficially attractive one to cover up their aggressive war policy and nothing but an aggressive slogan to pursue confrontation by means of force. It is no secret that with an ambition to maintain South Korea as a permanent colony and military base and to dominate Korea, the U.S. imperialists have been pushing ahead with a new plan to deploy neutron bombs and new medium-range nuclear missiles, while deploying hundreds of nuclear weapons to South Korea and accelerating the military buildup. It is also known that the U.S. imperialists have had aerial nuclear attack units, such as the 18th U.S. Tactical Combat Aviation Unit, at Kadena air base on an alert status and have conducted nuclear bombing exercises by regularly flying B-52 strategic nuclear bombers over South Korea, while deploying nuclear weapons at military bases in the Pacific and Okinawa and training them on Korea.

In the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise waged on the assumption of a nuclear war for the purpose of attacking our republic, the U.S. imperialists are mobilizing strategic aircraft, including nuclear attack planes, naval ships belonging to the 7th Fleet which carry nuclear weapons and military personnel handling nuclear arms. All facts show that the U.S. imperialist war maniacs are seeking a nuclear war on the Korean Peninsula and its surrounding areas and are prepared to ignite a nuclear war at any time. Clearly, the U.S. imperialists are the most shameless aggressors, nuclear fanatics and disturbers of peace in Asia and the world.

Owing to the U.S. imperialists' reckless military adventurist policies, the situation on the Korean Peninsula is extremely tense, and a war could break out at any time.

It is clear that should the U.S. imperialists ignite an aggressive war in Korea, it would develop into a nuclear war and spread to other regions, jeopardizing world peace. The situation in Korea is becoming the most tense and aggravated in Asia. The Korean people, who are cherishing national dignity and independence and aspiring the country's peaceful reunification, can never tolerate the U.S. imperialists' reckless wicked scheme of a nuclear war, and the world's peace-loving people will not tolerate it.

The U.S. imperialists should correctly grasp the trend of the times, act with discretion, abandon the anachronistic illusion of bringing other peoples to their knees by force and withdraw immediately from South Korea and all other places which they occupy, taking along all U.S. troops and lethal weapons, including nuclear arms.

NODONG SINMUN PLAYS IMPRISONMENT OF KIM TAE-CHUNG

SK091556 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1521 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 9 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today prints a signed article titled "Brutal Atrocity for Destroying Democratic Figure." Pointing out that the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique "commuted" the penalty passed upon Kim Tae-chung, the article says: Though the puppets are loudly advertising their "leniency," it is not any sort of "leniency" to Kim Tae-chung, but a political ruse aimed at shirking pressure brought to bear upon them from within and without. It is an unbearable mockery of and a vicious challenge to public opinion at home and abroad which demands the acquittal of Kim Tae-chung.

The paper notes that the fascist butchers passed life imprisonment upon the democratic figure who had committed no crime and put him to all sorts of tortures and persecution to make him a disabled person and now try to keep him in detention for 20 more years. To all intents and purposes, this is aimed to gradually destroy him in prison. All sorts of persecution and suppression of Kim Tae-chung fully show the reality of South Korea where democracy is totally stifled and disclose in all nakedness the unexampled viciousness and brutality of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist dictatorship.

It cites concrete instances to prove that from the time when the Chon Tu-hwan clique tried to seize power and maintain and prolong the dictatorial rule, it regarded Kim Tae-chung as the most dangerous rival and left no means untried to destroy him. The paper quotes the traitor Chon Tu-hwan as saying to the former puppet prime minister after reducing the death penalty upon Kim Tae-chung to life imprisonment: "Although his penalty was commuted, he is still a life-timer. This is no better than death sentence. Even if he is alive, he will surely be invalid mentally and physically when he is held incommunicado for several years. We should make even his family perish gradually."

This fully reveals the ulterior intention of the puppet clique to destroy Kim Tae-chung, the article remarks, and goes on: Chon Tu-hwan and Co. are ferocious and brutal murderers and truculent fascist tyrants who do not hesitate to slaughter fellow countrymen and plunge the country into a sea of blood to realise their wild ambition for power and stoop to any infamy to remove political adversaries.

The unjust penalty passed upon Kim Tae-chung must be unconditionally withdrawn and Kim Tae-chung whose life is in danger in prison be rescued without delay.

The Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique must lend an ear to the demand of the people and unconditionally release all the illegally arrested and imprisoned democratic and patriotic personages including Kim Tae-chung and ensure all conditions for their participation in the joint conference of 100 Koreans.

NODONG SINMUN VIEWS PARTY DECISIONS, DIRECTIVES

[NODONG SINMUN 9 March special article: "It Is the Party Members' Noble Duty To Unconditionally Carry Out the Party's Decisions and Directives"]

[Text] Today our party is victoriously leading the revolution and construction by preparing and presenting scientific and revolutionary lines and policies. The party's lines, policies, decisions and directives are the organizational will of the party and the only guiding principle that all functionaries and party members should adhere to.

The party leads the entire party and thoroughly practices its leadership of revolution and construction through its decisions and directives. Unconditionally and thoroughly implementing party decisions and directives is the revolutionary duty of all party members.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Party decisions and directives are the organizational will of the party. Therefore, it is the party members' sacred duty to unconditionally and thoroughly enact them.

Party members are voluntary revolutionary fighters who have joined the party with a determination to struggle, devoting their all for the party and the revolution and for the final victory of the cause of socialism and communism.

This faith of the party members finds expression in their struggle to implement party tasks, decisions and directives. The revolutionary struggle of party members is precisely the struggle to implement party decisions and directives. For the party members to carry out the revolutionary tasks assigned by the party constitutes the fulfilment of their duty as party members and their active contribution to the strengthening and development of our party and the overall revolutionary cause of the party. For the party members to unconditionally follow party policies and carry them out is an important requirement for vigorously advancing our revolution and construction along the lines intended by the party.

The party of the working class is the headquarters of the revolution leading socialist and communist construction to victory. All revolutionary struggles are organized and led by the party. Therefore, the implementation of the party's plan is a most lofty struggle to advance the revolution and complete it.

Our party has unfolded a grand plan to complete the revolutionary cause of chuche and constantly presented new lines and policies. The lines, decisions and directives of our party extensively elucidate all strategies, tactics and methods to successfully carry out the revolutionary struggle and construction.

Through the party lines and policies, our party members and working people understand the duty of and methods for the struggle that they should carry out in every phase of the development of the revolution. Therefore, in order to think and act in accord with the party's ideology and intent, the party members should struggle, taking the party's decisions and directives as a guiding principle in their activities and life. When the party members take party policies as an absolute principle and struggle, they can be loyal to the party and the revolution.

Our party members could not struggle or live for even a moment apart from party decisions and directives. For the party members to live with a thoroughly revolutionary faith of knowing only the party means that they live and struggle in accordance with party policy.

The struggle to carry out party decisions and directives is a most rewarding task to implement the grand plan to provide infinite happiness to our people and expedite the construction of communism. All of our party lines and policies on building the party and the construction of the economy and culture reflect ways of rapidly accelerating the construction of socialism and communism and guaranteeing happiness and everlasting prosperity for our people. Only when we enact the party policies can we pioneer our future, hasten prosperity and complete our revolution. Today the party and all people are unanimously joining tideland reclamation, expansion of new farmland, construction of the Nampo lock gate and construction of the Taechon powerplant. This is because they understand these party projects are most honorable ones for the happiness of our posterity and for the infinite prosperity of our fatherland.

The struggle to carry out party decisions and directives in our country has become a voluntary task of party members and working people. For party members to unconditionally accept party policies and to complete them to the end constitutes a firm guarantee for enhancing the combat capability of the party. The party is a weapon of the revolutionary struggle. To successfully accomplish its mission of leading the difficult and complicated revolution and construction to victory, the party of the working class should have strong combat capability. The might and combat capability of the party can be thoroughly ensured by the devoted and active struggle of the party members. When party members vigorously and energetically act in carrying out party policies, party organizations can become vigorous and the entire party can unanimously struggle for achieving one aspiration and goal. Therefore, only when party members carry out their assigned tasks in a responsible manner can the combat capability of the party be enhanced and the revolutionary cause be vigorously accelerated.

The party of the working class is a combat unit organized on the basis of the principle of democratic centralism. Therefore, establishing strong revolutionary discipline and order in unconditionally implementing the lines and policies set forth by the party center is a basic requirement for building the party. For party members to observe party discipline constitutes a most rudimentary duty. For party members who lead their lives, entrusting their fates to the party, there is no more important task than to thoroughly implement the revolutionary tasks assigned by the party. Only when all party members unanimously move to carry out party decisions and directives can the combat capability of the party be enhanced.

Today all of our party members are demonstrating their worth as masters and a high sense of responsibility, following the indomitable revolutionary spirit of the anti-Japanese revolutionary fighters who tenaciously fought like the phoenix to carry out the orders and directives of the respected and beloved comrade commander. The labor exploits of the construction workers of (Dasato) port, who outstandingly fulfilled their assigned tasks with high ideological determination, are a vivid example of the stance and attitude our functionaries and party members of today should possess in carrying out party policies.

Because all party members struggle to carry out the revolutionary tasks assigned by the party, going through fire and water, our party has become an invincible party which can accomplish any task if all policies of the party have been thoroughly carried out in a timely manner. It is an honorable and important task for party members to implement party decisions and directives unconditionally and thoroughly. It is a task to defend and safeguard the authority of our party. Ensuring the party's authority is a fundamental question in thoroughly implementing the party's leadership in revolution and construction.

A working class party is the top organization of the working class and the working masses. The party needs authority if it, under the proletarian dictatorship, is to creditably discharge its leading or guiding role and triumphantly lead the revolution and construction. Accordingly, defending the safeguarding the party's authority is the utmost demand of the revolution and is a principle to be maintained by party members in their work and life. To ensure the party's authority, we should not only defend and safeguard the party politically and ideologically, but also demonstrate the vitality of the party policies. This is why party members should devote themselves to implementing the revolutionary tasks assigned them by the party. Party members should be firm and resolute in the stand that they assume full responsibility for their work and should be stubborn enough to see a task completed once it is begun.

Today our party enjoys a high degree of guiding authority. The party's authority, along with the great achievements it has scored in practical struggle, is thoroughly ensured by the dedicated struggle of party members and working people who uphold the party. Thanks to faithful party members who regard it as a basic question related to the party's authority and dignity to implement the party's decisions and directives, our party's guiding authority is growing more absolute and our revolution and construction are vigorously advancing under the guidance of the party.

Absoluteness and unconditional implementation of the party's lines and policy is the lofty revolutionary spirit of KWP members. Based on their deep understanding of the greatness and wise leadership of the party, such a spirit came into being and has been firmly consolidated. By absolutely supporting and thoroughly implementing the party's lines, policies, decisions and directives during the period of stern struggle or of socialist construction, our party members could tackle weighty and grand tasks arising in the revolution and construction and build a strong socialist nation characterized by independence, self-reliance and self-defense on this land, thus opening a period of national prosperity.

In the struggle to imbue society with the chuche idea, the revolutionary spirit of unconditionally implementing the party's decisions and directives is being fully displayed in the party and throughout society. This becomes a source of invincible might which makes it possible to strengthen our party in every way and expedite the ultimate victory of our revolutionary cause.

As in the past, we should more thoroughly establish a revolutionary spirit of implementating the party's decisions and directives to the end. To this end, the functionaries and party members, above all, should adopt a correct attitude toward the party's decisions and directives. The struggle to implement the party's decisions and directives means to brilliantly embody the party's ideology and leadership in all sectors of the revolution and construction. For this reason, how we receive and implement the party's decisions and directives is an expression of the party member's attitude toward the party. A genuine party member is one who believes in the party's policy as an absolute truth and implements it under any circumstance. The loyalty of functionaries and party members to the party should be evinced in the actual struggle to implement the party's decisions and directives, not in words.

Without the struggle to carry out the revolutionary tasks the party has assigned, we cannot talk about loyalty to the party nor can we contemplate any glory and pride in being party members. Therefore, to do their best and endlessly spread the party's glory, party members should make every moment of their work and living a part of the rewarding struggle to achieve the party's plan.

It is important for leading functionaries to take the lead in implementing the party's decisions and directives. Functionaries are leading members of the revolution and the organizers of implementation of party policy. To implement party policy functionaries should plan organizational work with the correct methodology. All functionaries should positively rally the masses on the road of implementing party policy by investigating reality and leading the masses by personal example.

Firmly establishing a revolutionary discipline -- acting as one under the party center's leadership in the party and society -- is an important demand for thoroughly implementing the party's decisions and directives. Revolutionary discipline is the party's life and the source of its combat ability. Unless revolutionary discipline and order is established in the party, it cannot develop an organized political force, nor we can successfully carry out any task the party assigns.

Only when all party members unanimously think and act in conformity with the party center's plan and intention can we brilliantly fulfill any difficult and complicated revolutionary task that the party assigns. The revolutionary discipline to implement the party's policy can be thoroughly guaranteed by the infinite loyalty of functionaries and workers to the party and their high responsibility toward the revolution. Nothing makes our functionaries and party members happier and prouder than struggling and living amidst the party, enjoying the glory of being a KWP member. Our party member's genuine life began and has blossomed in the bosom of the party. Thanks to our party's benevolence, we have received a precious political life and participated in glorious revolutionary ranks. Without the party's leadership we cannot contemplate the party members' rewarding life, their glory and promising future. Thus, all party members should repay the party center's political trust and consideration by implementing the party's line, decisions and directives in all circumstances.

This year is a very significant one in the history of the struggle of our party and people. By brilliantly implementing all policies and lines that our party has set forth, all functionaries and party members should infinitely glorify this year marking the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, effecting a new upsurge in revolution and construction.

CHON PROMOTES ROLE OF UNIFICATION COUNCIL

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan yesterday called on the Advisory Council on Peaceful Unification Policy to play a leading role in consolidating national unity, emphasizing that the council is a "supranational organization."

Receiving the council's 1982 policy programs from Secretary General Son Chae-sik, the president asked the council to work out thorough measures to make itself thoroughly prepared for future national unification. Meanwhile, Son, who is concurrently minister of national unification, reported to the president that the council will launch a campaign aimed at instilling in the people a strong sense of conviction and confidence on unification. It will also emphasize suprapartisan and strong national cooperation for the achievement of unification. This was disclosed in a report Minister of National Unification Son Chae-sik gave to President Chon Tu-hwan on the council's 1982 policy projects. Son concurrently is the council's secretary-general. Son also said that the council will give lectures on national unification for its members, two days for each person, beginning from April 11.

Son said subjects of the lecture will be the Republic of Korea's unification formula, North Korea's confederal system, a comparison of economies of South and North Korea and the latest developments in the north.

GOVERNMENT DENIES RICE SCANDAL BRIBERY CHARGES

SK100824 Seoul YONHAP in English 0806 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 10 (YONHAP) -- The government Wednesday reiterated that the alleged kickback between Korean supply officials and U.S. rice exporters over rice deals was "out of the question" as a result of an inter-government investigation into the scandal and in consideration of the established practice concerning rice imports from the United States.

Clarifying the government position on wire reports that the Pacific International Rice Mills Inc. (PIRMI) of San Francisco bribed Korean supply officials to resume the shipment of the previously canceled 100,000 tons of rice, Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song said his government has neither made nor renewed a contract for the shipment of the 100,000 tons. The government, Kim said in a news conference, has only delayed the shipment because of changes in the domestic rice supply-and-demand situation, limiting the variety of rice to California rice which is considered suited for the Korean people's taste.

Everytime the price of rice declined at international markets, the government lowered rice import prices considerably through negotiations with supply contractors. The allegation that PIRMI paid or shared Korean officials part of the substantial excess arising from higher contracted price than market price is "unthinkable," the top economic policymaker asserted. He added that the alleged bribery scandal might have been caused by hectic competition for rice exports among major American grain dealers.

Meanwhile, the government has decided to put off the international bidding for the import of 370,000 tons of rice from the United States for the time being until the controversy over the kickback scandal calms down. The bidding was to be hosted by the Office of Supply Wednesday.

PROBE OF CHON ASSASSINATION PLOT CONTINUES

SK100248 Seoul YONHAP in English 0227 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Toronto, March 9 (YONHAP) -- A source with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), which were investigating an alleged plot to kill South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan, said Tuesday the probe was continuing and that the role of "a group" of North Koreans suspected of involvement in the plot was becoming clearer. He refused to elaborate further, but emphasized that the probe was progressing "smoothly."

He also said the investigation is what keeps Charles Yanover still in custody. "You have to understand the Canadian legal system. Police can not keep a person in detention indefinitely without firm evidence against him. Collecting further evidence to keep Yanover in detention is also a part of the continuing investigation," the source said. He added evidence against Yanover may have an important bearing on the group of North Koreans under investigation and vice versa.

The Ontario Supreme Court Monday put off Yanover's bail hearing by one week until March 15 at the request of his legal counsel and also remanded him until then. Yanover's bail hearing was to take place Monday. Asked why the defense lawyer requested a delay, giving the impression that he was notanxious to obtain his client's release, Frank Koziebrockie, Yanover's acting lawyer, said his client's case was complex, implying that freeing Yanover on bail would be difficult. Koziebrickie was acting for Earl Levy, who was visiting London.

Koziebrockie argued Monday for a week's delay in Yanover's bail hearing, saying he needed time to secure RCMP Constable Ron Allard as a witness at Yanover's hearing. RCMP authorities said earlier Yanover would have difficulty obtaining bail. They said they were asking for a continued detention order for Yanover until his formal trial starts.

Yanover was arrested in connection with the conspiracy involving the life of President Chon while he was out on bail on charges of attempting with members of Ku Klux Klan to topple the Government of Dominica last year. Alexander Gerol, 33, who had been arrested along with Yanover on the same charges, was released on a 75,000 (Canadian dollar) surety bond last week. (One Canadian dollar equals roughly 83 U.S. cents].

Asked about Choe Hong-hui, the source said he was questioned by the RCMP shortly after his return from the United States. Choe had fled to the U.S. shortly after the RCMP announced discovery of the plot on Feb. 24. He returned to Toronto on March 2. The source, however, said only that Choe was suspected of involvement in the plot and subject to investigation.

It has been reported here that the RCMP seized Choe's bank transaction documents, savings deposit book and other related papers in a raid on his house here Feb. 10. The RCMP was known to be keeping those papers.

Choe Denies Involvement

SK100259 Seoul YONHAP in English 0237 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Toronto, March 9 (YONHAP) -- Choe Hong-hui Monday said he will soon file a libel suit against three Korean community papers, alleging that their "groundless" reporting about him in connection with a plot to kill South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan had tarnished his reputation.

A statement from the office of Bernard Camin, Choe's lawyer, said "General Choe Hong-hui has retained legal counsel to immediately institute proceedings against the KOREA TIMES TORONTO newspaper, THE KOREAN JOURNAL, the MINJOONG SHINMOON and their respective editors and publishers, and Dr. Hwang Tae-yon, in connection with various liberous statements made about General Choe in connection with an alleged international plot to murder the president of South Korea." Saying the press reports about him in connection with the incident were "entirely without foundation and malicious in nature," the statement charged that the three papers had gravely damaged Choe's good reputation in the "South Korean" community in Toronto.

The three papers generally implied that Choe was involved in the conspiracy to kill President Chon in their coverage of the incident.

Dr. Hwang, a medical doctor engaged in private practice in Toronto, said in an interview with THE KOREAN JOURNAL that it would be reasonable to assume that Choe was behind the plot to kill Chon. Hwang once visited North Korea after obtaining Canadian citizenship, but has since parted company with Choe and his followers.

The three are all vernacular papers. Two of them, the MINJOONG and THE KOREAN JOURNAL, are weeklies. The KOREA TIMES, affiliated with Seoul's KOREA TIMES, is the only paper published daily.

CHON EMPHASIZES IMPROVEMENT OF PRODUCTION

SK100329 Seoul YONHAP in English 0309 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 10 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Wednesday said South Koreans should not expect a second economic leap in the 1980's without quality control, technical innovation and improved labor productivity, and called upon the nation to strive to achieve the three major goals with a sense of mission.

Delivering a speech at a ceremony marking the nation's 10th Labor Day, held in Seoul's Sejong Cultural Center hall Wednesday, the chief executive said workers should realize that their efforts will enrich their country, improve their livelihood and make their lives worthwhile. He emphasized the necessity of technical innovation and said inexpensive but quality goods produced as a result of technical innovation will be welcomed by consumers and help improve the competitiveness of Korean-made products on international markets.

Noting that the establishment of a just welfare society -- a state policy goal -- will mean that people can receive due rewards for their labor, Chon pledged to do his best to improve real worker incomes, maintain ample employment and job security and develop the labor movement on a right and wholesome track.

He called upon enterprises to pay more attention to improving the working conditions and the welfare of their employees and not to mistreat their workers, adding that harmonious relations between management and labor can expedite the realization of a just society.

Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State, and Kong Samol, minister of agriculture, attended the meeting.

The plantations built houses, sick bays and health stations for the workers.

Chan Ven highly appreciated the efforts of the workers and stressed the importance of rubber planting which, he said, is the basis for the economic expansion of Kampuchea.

The meeting participants pledged to broaden the areas of rubber plantations that are being exploited in order to contribute to the economic rehabilitation.

INFORMATION MINISTRY CONDEMNS SRV CHEMICAL USE

BK100431 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Democratic Kampuchea Ministry of Information "condemnation": "The Hanoi Vietnamese Aggressors' Great Crime of Increasing Their Use of Chemical Weapons To Massacre Innocent Kampuchean People" -- dated 9 March]

[Text] On 1 and 2 March the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors sprayed yellow toxic chemicals from their planes over our people's villages in Pailin District, Battambang Province, killing 3 of our people and affecting 186 others.

We recall that on 26, 27 and 28 February the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors used their 105-mm cannons and 82-mm mortars to fire toxic-gas shells and used their planes to spray yellow toxic chemicals over our people's villages in Sala Krau, (Phum Kong) and along Route 10 in Pailin District, Battambang Province. Two of our people were killed, 28 seriously poisoned, 9 others moderately affected and a number lightly poisoned.

Prior to that, from 25 January to 13 February, the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors sprayed toxic chemicals from their planes over the western Leach region, seriously poisoning six of our people and affecting many others who, without prompt medical treatment, could die in 1/2 to 1 day.

Furthermore, the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors ordered their agents, Vietnamese women and men mingling among our people in the zones they temporarily control, to poison water sources -- streams, ponds, wells and even the water jars that our people use in their everyday life. They poison cakes, sweets, foodstuffs, fish, meat, vegetables sold in markets and even fruits on trees to criminally massacre our innocent people daily.

When the international community and the world ask the Hanoi Vietnamese and the Soviet Union to stop using chemical weapons, which are prohibited by international law and completely rejected and opposed by mankind, the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors disregard these humanitarian appeals.

On the contrary, during this dry season they are brutally and barbarously increasing the use of their Soviet-supplied chemical weapons of all types, endangering the Kampuchean people and killing even more of them every day.

The Hanoi Vietnamese, who cannot achieve their criminal purpose to militarily smash and swallow up Kampuchea because their 250,000 aggressor troops are increasingly bogged down on the Kampuchean battlefield, are foolishly intensifying their use of chemical weapons as their last means to break the will to struggle of the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean National Army in order to fulfill their expansionist and territorial strategy.

On behalf of the Kampuchean victims of the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors' chemical weapons and the entire Kampuchean people, the Democratic Kampuchean Ministry of Information firmly and angrily denounces and condemns this Hanoi Vietnamese aggressor clique's greatest crimes of race extermination and of violently and foolishly increasing their use of chemical weapons to heedlessly massacre innocent Kampuchean people. Concurrently, we would like to appeal to peace- and justice-loving governments, political organizations, mass organizations and personalities throughout the world to raise their voices to denounce and condemn the Hanoi clique's use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea and to ask for an immediate halt to the use of these chemical weapons. In particular, we would like to appeal to the United Nations to promptly send the investigatory committee on the Vietnamese and Soviet criminal use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Laos and Afghanistan agreed upon by the 35th UN General Assembly to examine and look for on-site concrete evidence -- on Kampuchean territory -- in order to take appropriate measures to timely check the Hanoi Vietnamese aggressors' continued barbarous and foolish use of their chemical weapons to massacre innocent Kampuchean people.

At the same time, we would like to support the documentary evidence of the blood analysis of nine Kampuchean victims of Vietnamese chemical weapons at the end of 1981 provided by the U.S. representative to the UN secretary general on 24 February.

In order to timely and quickly check the most criminal acts of chemical warfare and race extermination by the Hanoi Vietnamese in Kampuchea and Laos and by the Soviets in Afghanistan, we would like to appeal to peace- and justice-loving governments throughout the world to support the U.S. initiatives aimed at quickly convening an international conference on the use of chemical weapons, because with each passing day there are more Kampuchean, Lao and Afghan victims of the Hanoi Vietnamese and Soviet aggressors.

VODK CITES FRENCH DOCTORS ON SRV CHEMICAL USE

BK100733 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] In November and December 1981 the Association of French Doctors sent a group of doctors led by Doctor Jean-Marie Poncet on a mission to Democratic Kampuchean regions.

This group of French doctors helped to train our youths in the medical field and treated patients, including many of our brothers and sisters who were victims of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors' chemical weapons.

On 6 March this group of doctors held a meeting in Paris denouncing the Vietnamese enemy aggressors' crimes in massacring the Kampuchean people by using Soviet-supplied chemical weapons. Dr Jean-Marie Poncet said: I treated four Kampucheans. I found symptoms caused by chemical weapons -- that is, their intestines, stomachs, gall bladders and livers were blistered, there was anal hemorrhaging and choking. He indicated that these symptoms are the same as those found by other French doctors in Afghan victims of toxic chemical poisoning.

During the meeting there were slides and films on the activities of this group of French doctors in the Democratic Kampuchean regions as well as on the living conditions and the struggle of the Kampuchean people against the Vietnamese aggressors.

On that occasion, Dr (Robert Andre) -- who is the sponsor of medical aid to the Kampuchean people -- declared that the Association of French Doctors will send more groups of practitioners to fulfill missions in Democratic Kampuchea.

SOURCES SAY GAS MASKS FOUND ON DEAD SRV SOLDIERS

BK100041 Bangkok WORLD in English 9 Mar 82 p 1

[Text] Aranyaprathet — Gas masks have been found on the bodies of four Vietnamese soldiers inside Kampuchea, Khmer Rouge sources said today. The four were among 10 Vietnamese troopers at Ban Khao Din, about 50 kilometres south of this border town, Mit Thiap, commander of a Khmer Rouge battalion operating near the border said.

A unit of his forces on patrol found the bodies yesterday, he said. The Vietnamese were believed killed in fighting between the two forces on Saturday [6 March].

A search of the bodies turned up gas masks of Russian manufacture in the rucksacks carried by four of the Vietnamese, Mit Thiap said.

He said he was concerned that the Vietnamese were about to employ chemical warfare against his forces. Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops used chemical weapons about the middle of last year, he claimed, and a number of Khmer Rouge troops as well as villagers were killed or suffered serious injuries.

USSR REPORTED BUILDING NAVAL BASE IN KAMPUCHEA

BK100141 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 10 Mar 82 pp 1,2

[Text] The Soviet Union has been building a new naval base in Kampuchea to facilitate the growing number of its fleet to Southeast Asia, a senior official has reported. Secretary General of the National Security Council (NSC) Squadron Leader Prasong Sunsiri told the NATION that the Russians had also substantially increased its military aid to the three Indochinese states.

He said the Soviet Union began constructing the naval facility at the Kampuchean deep-sea port at Ream, the fourth Russian naval base in Indochina, only a few months ago. "The Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime has no naval forces. So the new naval base must have been designed to serve the Soviet strategy in the region," he said.

Prasong said that the number of the Soviet warships plying between the Indian Ocean and the South China Sea also increased from 20 in 1980 to 30 in 1981. "Just figure it out yourself and see how the Soviet Union has been expanding its military presence in the region. The rate of the increase in a year alone accounts for 50 percent." he said.

He said that the Russian military aid to the three Indochinese states had also substantially increased from the past. The Soviet military aid to the three Indochinese governments now amounted to about $6 million daily, according to Prasong. He said that Moscow had initially extended about $3 million worth of economic and military equipment a day to the three regimes through Vietnam. "But the Soviet Union started giving direct military assistance to Laos and the Heng Samrin regime about 1 year ago," Prasong said. He added that about $3 million worth of military assistance is now given to Vietnam daily while the rest of the amount directly goes to Laos and the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime.

Prasong also quoted intelligence reports as showing that the Soviet Union also increased its military advisors in Vietnam from about 5,000 in 1980 to about 8,000 last year. The top security officer said that Moscow recently tried to tighten its grip on Vietnam — both politically and militarily. "The Soviet Union is attempting to replace some Vietnamese leaders with those who are more obedient to Moscow," Prasong said.

Referring to the recent visit of Soviet Chief of Staff Nikolay Ogarkov to Hanoi, Prasong said that the Russian official might have aimed at checking how the Vietnamese are using its military aid.

"The military delegation led by Ogarkov might be on a factfinding mission about the Vietnamese call for more military aid," he said.

He added that Moscow had been demanding more privileges in using the military facilities in Vietnam and Kampuchea. The Soviet Union is now using two naval bases at Danang port and Camranh Bay in Vietnam. The Kampuchean deep-sea port of Kampong Som is also being used by the Soviet Fleet.

Prasong said that the Soviet Union tended to control Vietnam [more] than ever because of "mismanagement and corrupt practices" by Vietnamese officials.

He declined to comment on whether the Vietnamese leaders were receptive to the growing domination by Moscow, saying that it was up to the Vietnamese leaders to choose between independence and subjugation by the Russians. "I believe that it is not too late for the Vietnamese to sever their links with the Soviet Union," he said.

GENERAL DESCRIBES JOINT EXERCISE WITH MALAYSIA

[By Wiwat Prathipchaikun]

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon yesterday said that Thailand's armed forces are strong enough to defend the country without having to depend on neighbouring countries. "We have enough strength. What we do need most is ideas... the united idea. If our (ASEAN'S) ideas are integrated, our unity will remain firm."

Gen Saiyut gave an exclusive interview to the POST at Butterworth Air Base, Malaysia, before returning to Bangkok yesterday after copresiding Monday at the opening ceremony of the joint Thai-Malaysian air exercise, codenamed "Air Thamal 1" that will continue till March 15 in Malaysia.

He said there has been much speculation that if Thailand falls, the other neighbouring countries would follow like dominoes, thus encouraging them to give full support for Thailand. However, Gen Saiyut said that Thailand did not want military assistance and it would not be effective even if it was extended. "The only significant thing is there is tegrated idea which would be most helpful in the political arena which we will not lose," he said. [sentence as published]

He stressed that the Thai-Malaysian exercise had nothing to do with ASEAN but was just a bilateral agreement aimed at promoting good understanding between the two countries and enabling authorities of both to become familiar with helping each other should joint operations ever be needed. "It is not an ASEAN exercise. Only between two countries which we also do so with others like Indonesia or the United States on a bilateral basis," he said.

Gen Saiyut said ASEAN's aim was nonmilitary, but the security of each member countries is ultimate. "Hence, for security reasons we hold joint exercises, " he said. Gen Saiyut said if ASEAN involved itself in military cooperation, it would not achieve its goal. Instead, it would give a chance to the opponents to wage propaganda attacks, he said.

Air Thamal 1 was the first exercise of its kind involving the actual participation of fighter bombers and helicopters and stemmed from the mutual understanding and confidence between Thailand and Mayaysia, as expressed during the recent meeting of the general border committee of the two sides, Gen Saiyut said.

The closing ceremony of the exercise will be held at Hat Yai Air Base on March 15 and will be presided over by Thai air force commander-in-chief ACM Akaeo Susinlawon.

PREM REMARKS ON ASEAN SUMMIT, KAMPUCHEA

BK100223 Bangkok POST in English 10 Mar 82 p 1

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon said yesterday he would like the ASEAN heads of government to meet to discuss problems of mutual concern. Gen Prem said he has already consulted the Foreign Ministry on the possibility of holding a summit of the ASEAN heads of government as they have not met for some time.

He did not say where and when the summit should be held saying that the venue and the possibility of holding a summit should first be discussed by the foreign ministers of ASEAN.

Gen Prem ruled out the possibility of holding the summit in Bangkok during the main Rattanakosin bicentennial celebrations next month because some of the ASEAN leaders invited to attend had indicated that they may not be able to do so because of other commitments.

On Kampuchea, the prime minister reiterated that Thailand's position remains unchanged -- that Hanoi must withdraw its troops and allow self-determination by the Khmer people. He was obviously referring to a recent remark by Sqd Ldr Prasong Sunsiri, secretary-general of the National Security Council, that Thailand should not involve itself too deeply in the affairs of Kampuchea and should be more concerned with its own security.

He said that the statement reflected not government policy, but Sqd Ldr Prasong's personal opinion. Gen Prem added that the ASEAN nations still shared a similar view on the Kampuchean problem.

SUPREME COMMAND URGES CPT TO SURRENDER, REFORM

BK100752 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] According to the Supreme Command Information Office, at 1030 on 1 March government authorities clashed with communist terrorists in an area northwest of Ban Thung Khamang Noi, Khon San District, Chaiyaphum Province. There were no casualties on the government side. The authorities captured the communist base and some articles.

AT 0720 on 3 March a government security unit in Tambon Mahachai, Kham Muang District, Kalasin Province clashed for about 5 minutes with a unit of about 15-20 communist terrorists near Phu Khiao and Phu Na Ngom. The government side suffered no casualties and discovered many articles in a nearby cave.

At 0830 on 5 March members of an infantry company clashed with about three to five communist terrorists while patrolling in Khian Sa District, Surat Thani. The soldiers captured two mortars, some ammunition and other articles.

At 0945 on 5 March 26 members of a task force unit accompanied by 3 guides clashed with a unit of 7-10 communist terrorists in Ban Khao Luk Chang, Sadao District, Songkhla Province. The clash lasted for about 10 minutes. There were no casualties on the government side; it was belived that the communist side suffered some casualites. Several articles were captured from the communists.

It is apparent that the government is now on the offensive, both militarily and politically, against the communist insurgents. The government side has the advantage over the insurgents on most occasions. It can be said the the successful and suppression of the communist terrorists is attributed to support and cooperation from the local people. The support includes moral encouragement and useful information on communist terrorist movements. Thus, it is certain that the struggle of those who call themselves communist terrorists is rapidly approaching an end. It is useless for them to carry on the struggle. The Communist Party of Thailand should surrender to the government and reform to help solve the country's problems according to the democratic administration system and to help build our beloved country into an eternally peaceful nation.

SIHANOUK-KHIEU SAMPHAN TALKS CALLED 'FARCE'

OW091347 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1230 GMT 8 Mar 82

[Text] The following is a short commentary: "The Farce of the Tripartite Coalition Government Manipulated by the Beijing Authorities":

Under the manipulation of the Beijing authorities, a meeting of representatives of the so-called three Kampuchean parties was held recently in Beijing on the formation of a tripartite coalition government. Although it was called a three-party meeting, Son Sann was absent, and only Khieu Samphan, as the representative of the savage Pol Pot clique, and Sihanouk attended the meeting. Deng Xiaoping and Zhao Ziyang spoke highly of this two-man meeting and its three-point agreement. The so-called three-point agreement was aimed at keeping the UN seat of the savage Pol Pot clique and the political corpse of Democratic Kampuchea. This was not the first tripartite meeting. Actually, the three parties had already held talks on a dozen occasions in the past. However, what they did yielded no appreciable results.

Now the question arises: Why did the Beijing authorities so enthusiastically arrange for the three parties to meet? Acting on Beijing's behest, Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and company launched a Chinese-style great cultural revolution in Kampuchea, killing 3 million people and putting another 4 million in concentration camps. They turned Kampuchea into a Chinese province, a springboard for China to invade Vietnam and Laos and to expand its influence to Southeast Asia. Their heinous feature has been discerned more and more clearly by the whole world. Because of this, the Beijing authorities wanted to put Sihanouk and Son Sann together with the Pol Pot clique so as to keep up appearances and to enable the latter to gain power through fraud and deception.

To the Kampuchean people, the Pol Pot clique is a group of treacherous elements who have been sentenced to death by the Supreme People's Court. In the opinion of the Kampuchean people, the so-called Kampuchean issue does not exist at all. Only the Beijing authorities, in collaboration with Washington and international reactionary forces, are bent on bolstering and supporting the Pol Pot clique and the various reactionaries so as to undermine the Kampuchean people's cause of postwar reconstruction and rehabilitation. Their futile attempt is aimed at subjecting the Kampuchean people once again to the rule of this savage clique.

Obviously what the Beijing authorities are doing to bolster this clique with the Chinese people's material and financial resources is contrary to the genuine wish and vital interests of the Chinese people. The perverse acts of the Beijing authorities are absolutely not to be allowed by the Chinese people.

NHAN DAN SCORES THAI POLICY TOWARD INDOCHINA

OW100731 Hanoi VNA in English 0708 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 10 -- "The Thai authorities should be realistic," says NHAN DAN in a commentary today on Bangkok's negative attitude towards the proposal of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea to conduct a dialogue with the ASEAN countries in order to solve the existing problems in the region through peaceful negotiations.

The paper continues: "Public opinion in ASEAN countries, including Thailand, has come to realize that Chinese expansionism, which opposes the three Indochinese countries and uses Maoist groups to carry out subversive activities in Southeast Asia, is the main danger to national independence, peace and stability in this region.

"The present crisis in Southeast Asia does not originate from the dissensions between ASEAN and Indochina but from China's policy of intervention and aggression. This perfidious policy, which couples brazen pressure with cajolery, is aimed at dividing ASEAN and Indochina and profiting by this division. That situation requires that the countries in the region, in their own interests and the interests of the whole region, meet one another to jointly undertake actions to eliminate the danger to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

"This is also the essential of the proposals of the Indochinese foreign ministerial conference held recently in Vientiane. The conference's communique makes it clear that the three Indochinese countries are ready to consider and will support every initiative wherever it may come from aimed at helping to stabilize the situation at the Kampuchea-Thailand border on the principles of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. The three Indochinese countries have also declared [they are] ready to discuss with Thailand all issues of mutual concern. These proposals demonstrate the good will of the Indochinese countries for settlement of issues of common concern through dialogue. It is regrettable that the Thai authorities have rejected these proposals [and] instead have let the Khmer Rouge continue to use Thai territory as a military base against the People's Republic of Kampuchea. Had the Thai authorities not sheltered and abetted the Khmer Rouge remnants and the other Khmer reactionaries, the fate of the latter had been sealed and peace and stability would have returned to the Thai-Kampuchean border."

The paper goes on: "Bangkok's failure to meet the proposals of the Vientiane conference is an impractical act and a proof of bad faith. It proves that they do not understand the situation. On the other hand, the Bangkok authorities have many times slanderously charged Vietnam with using toxic chemicals at the Kampuchean-Thai border. This only serves the schemes of the Beijing expansionists. Of late, Thailand has received massive military aid from the United States. This does not contribute to reducing tension in the region.

"There is only one correct solution, which also corresponds with the legitimate interests of the Thai people and the Southeast Asian people as a whole, that is,to have (?frank) meetings and dialogues between the parties concerned aimed at settling the existing issues without foreign interference", NHAN DAN concludes.

THAI, CHINESE THREAT TO INDOCHINA ASSAILED

BK091130 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The correct and good-will proposal put forth by the foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea at the recent Vientiane conference is receiving a warm welcome in Southeast Asia and other parts of the world. The proposal is aimed at promoting the trend of dialogue between the Indochinese and the ASEAN countries in order to turn Southeast Asia into a zone of peace and stability.

But it is regrettable that the Thai authorities and the ruling circles in other ASEAN countries have not paid due attention to this proposal. In a prepared statement distributed to newsmen on 26 February, the spokesman for the Thai Foreign Ministry again repeated Beijing's outmoded slanders, saying that this proposal is to cover up long-term occupation in Kampuchea. More recently still, the Thai diplomat said that Thailand is not a party involved in the conflict.

How can the Thai authorities explain the admission by the director of the Information Department of the Thai Foreign Ministry that Bangkok has spent 10 million baht in the slander campaign against Vietnam last year? In fact, some Thai authorities really want to step up hostile activities against the three Indochinese countries.

They have allowed the Pol Pot remnants and other Khmer reactionaries to use the Thai territory, including Bangkok, as the venue for the coordination of activities against the peaceful labor of the Kampuchean epople. Worse still, they have repeatedly conducted armed provocations against Kampuchea and, in some cases, used 105-mm artillery to fire toxic chemical shells into Kampuchean territory.

Unlike the Thai authorities, the three Indochinese peoples consistently pursue a foreign policy of peace and friendship and have a sincere desire to discuss with Thailand all matters of mutual concern, including those concerning peace and stability along the Kampuchean-Thai border. But, shutting their eyes to this fact, some Thai authorities have kept flunging headlong into the road of opposing the three Indochinese countries, not realizing the consequences of Chinese expansionism.

It should be pointed out that Chinese expansionism is not only threatening the Indochinese peoples. China will never give up its support for Pol Pot and Maoist insurgents in the ASEAN countries. Without naming China, Gen Saiyut Koetphon, chief of the General Staff of the Thai Army, accused a superpower of pushing Thailand to wage a proxy war with the neighboring countries. The Thai magazine PARINYA in a recent issue raised the following question: What can ensure that when Thai forces become weak in the fighting, China will not seize on that opportunity to intervene or support insurgent forces to seize power in Thailand and then turn the country into China's satellite?

Bangkok's policy of tailing after China and the United States is erroneous and runs counter to the aspiration and legitimate interests of the Thai people and the common interests of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Such a policy only benefits Beijing expansionism. But no force can reverse the present situation in Kampuchea. The only correct way is for the ASEAN countries, including Thailand, to conduct dialogue and negotiations with the Indochinese countries on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and without imposition from outside

5 MAR PROTEST NOTE ON PRC ATTACK IN SRV WATERS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 5 -- The Vietnamese Foreign Ministry today sent a note to the Chinese Embassy in Hanoi, strongly protesting against China for its recent encroachment on the Vietnamese territorial waters.

The note said that on March 2 and 3, nearly 40 Chinese armed boats intruded into the Vietnamese waters four to 10 nautical miles off the coast and from east of the Ron River to north of Con Co Island in Binh Tri Thien Province. The boats carried out acts of espionage and provocation, thus preventing Vietnamese fishermen from earning their living normally, the note said. The note condemned those acts as serious encroachments on Vietnam's sovereignty over its territorial waters and threats to its security, and demanded an end to such acts.

"The Vietnamese people are determined to exercise their legitimate right to self-defence to safeguard their sovereignty and territorial integrity. The Chinese side must bear full responsibility for all consequences of its hostile acts against Vietnam," the note added.

NHAN DAN'S HOANG TUNG INTERVIEWED BY BUDAPEST TV

LD052342 Budapest Domestic Television Service in Hungarian 1730 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Interview by unidentified reporter with Hoang Tung, editor of NHAN DAN; date and place not given; recorded — Tung's remarks in Vietnamese with superimposed Hungarian translation]

[Excerpt] [Passage omitted on introduction of Hoang Tung and description of his work] [Hoang Tung] The Vietnamese bourgeoisie and the Western bourgeois press willingly spread the saying regarding our land that Vietnam won the war, but it is losing peace; it is losing a battle in a time of peace. They judge us to be simply incapable of peaceful building work. These analyses, spread by our enemies, suggest that we cannot manage our economy, and all this leads to failure. At least, this is what our enemies hope.

In fact, we have shortfalls in these spheres, even weaknesses. The directing organization of our economic life, and generally the functioning of our economic mechanism were formed during the 30-year war, in accordance with the requirements which were demanded from us by the state of war. All this, naturally, hinders the normal functioning of our economy, and causes many problems in our economic work.

This is why we are now trying to change the system of economic direction. So we can say that in the present period of our development, we must work on introducing a reform, and furthermore a fundamental reform. If we do not introduce this reform, then via the previous style, the opportunities for economic development can be lost. Clearly, we also must fight against bureaucracy: we must declare war on the present illnesses which paralyze economic management. In our planning, we must enforce decentralization; that is, we must regroup planning work. In this sphere, we must create three-stage planning, at a central level, the level of rural units and at the base level.

[Question] Excuse me for interrupting. Clearly, the essence of the economic reform is the strengthening of individual interest and material incentive. How do you envisage this?

[Answer] Obviously, we must pay greater attention to the interests of the workers. This means that we profess, with faith; we must portion out and coordinate these three interests to a greater extent and more thriftily, that is, the interests of the workers, the interests of the communities — cooperatives and factories — as well as the interests of the state. However, individual interests must have first place in our method of approach. Our economic policy is directed toward this now. Only in this way can we achieve growth in production throughout the country and a development of producing forces in Vietnam.

A natural interest of workers, of all Vietnamese workers, is connected with our ensuring that they have adequate material circumstances and opportunities for a life worthy of man. And not only for them, but for their family members too. If we do not satisfy the needs of the Vietnamese families, then it simply will be impossible to further increase production at the proper pace.

[Question] It seems that this type of interest is being discovered nowadays in Vietnam; that is, you are beginning to introduce it now.

[Answer] This would have been difficult earlier, because for over 30 years we were constantly compelled to fight an armed battle with our enemies. We managed to mobilize millions and millions of our people to various front of the battle.

In such circumstances it is impossible to believe that we could have paid more attention to the living conditions of the people and the direct interests of the people. The main responsibility of every family, every village, and every person was to contribute to our common cause. In this period, it was natural for us that the most important factor in our life was taking risks and self-sacrifice.

[Question] Six years have passed since your contry was reunified. The SRV has gone through a very important period since this time, since the reunification. How would you describe the most important events of this time?

[Answer] We have achieved significant successes during these years, first of all in the sphere of full reunification of the two parts of the country -- the SRV was founded. We began the economic rebuilding of Vietnam.

However, the greatest victory of our people during this period was the triumph over the Chinese intruders. The talks between our countries did not lead to success, and these talks were prolonged and became unfruitful because of the great power, hegemonist and chauvinist stand of the Chinese side. Beijing is increasing tension. [word indistinct] The atmosphere is tense at the talks too. The Chinese belittle, denigrate us. They have brought together more than half a million soldiers on our borders, and this is only the number of people of the centrally directed troops. The local forces of border districts must be added onto this. (?Six) army corps were concentrated on our borders, with three to four divisions per army corps. That is, on the northern border of Vietnam there are constantly stationed at least 12 centrally directed Chinese divisions. The provocations (come from here). They bombard our territory, their units penetrate Vietnam, they kill peaceful civilian inhabitants, workers.

However, in Beijing they accuse us of attacking them, of increasing the tension. Precisely the Chinese leaders called on their people to modernize the army at any cost, and they oppose Vietnam, or as they put it, the hegemonist power of the Indochinese region. The Chinese leaders, for instance (?Deng Xiaoping) and [name indistinct] constantly threaten that they will give a further lesson to Vietnam. In such circumstances, our people and army undoubtedly must stand in readiness. High-level alertness must be evidenced. This is exactly why we continue to keep general mobilization in force. Our army and people stand in readiness for (?battle). As I mentioned, Vietnam does not want war. We endeavor for peace. We do not want conflict, but friendship with the Chinese people. (?But) if they attack us, we undoubtedly will strike back. They will suffer a much more painful defeat than during the most recent war. It cannot be known yet who will give a lesson to whom, but on the basis of all this, it is my opinion that the threat of war is very real.

And taking place at the same time as all this, which I consider very important to emphasize, was that in cooperation with the Kampuchean people, with joint strength, we managed to bring an end to the rule of the genocidal Cambodian regime.

Regarding the building of socialism in Vietnam itself, we could enter significant successes in our books in this sphere too.

[Question] What do you consider to be the gravest problems in economic development?

[Answer] Our main goal is to boost agricultural production. Only then can we resolve the most urgent, pressing everyday material problems. This is our most important task and goal. The other important aspect is that we continue the country's industrialization program, that we progress in economic activity directed at laying the foundations of socialism.

Our third goal is that we complete the socialist restructuring of our economic life, and here I am thinking mainly of the southern part of our country, south Vietnam. Finally, our fourth goal is that we strengthen our defenses. These are now our most important goals.

[Question] How do you consider it feasible that food production keeps in step with the pace of population increase?

[Answer] This is a very important problem, awaiting a solution, which our people faces. During the past 7 years, our grain production grew yearly by 3.5 percent. However, the increase in population reached 2.3 percent. Our agricultural production still is unable to satisfy the population's needs. It cannot catch up with the continued quick growth in the number of births, but nevertheless it is a considerable result that in 1981 the scale of production growth surpassed the results of the previous year by 6 percent. For this reason, we greatly hope our economy is able to catch up with the growth in the rhythm of births. We are making significant endeavors in the interest of spreading family planning. Thus, our population should increase by 2 percent yearly. In the agriculture branch, we want to make it lasting that production grows by 3 or even 4 percent.

[Question] What do you think could be the best method of overcoming the demographic explosion?

[Answer] In the first place, every person must be taught, every family. This is one of our most important tasks. That is, work of informing. Apart from this, we must spread the necessary tools, such as contraceptive pills. It seems very important, mainly in the country, that we should convince men and women of this. This is a big problem of ours, since we must face deep-rooted feudal traditions.

[Question] How do you see the problem of unemployment in socialist Vietnam at present?

[Answer] I am sure that you understand what we have been right ever since the liberation of south Vietnam. A large proportion of the urban inhabitants of south Vietnam, particularly the young people are unemployed. The reason for this is that before, millions and millions had lived on the war, on the army, on being lackeys. During the past 6 years, work opportunities changed a great deal; we have created work opportunities for more than 5 million people. However, despite this, there are still unemployed, particularly in the cities and among the young.

[Question] Why only in the cities?

[Answer] Naturally, people seek work in the rural areas as well, but there we have various possibilities for providing work for those living in the villages, particularly the young people. In our villages, agriculture, animal husbandry and handicraft industry are developing. If I am right, in recent years very many young girls and boys have joined the party.

[Question] How many members does the Vietnamese Communist Party [VCP] have at present?

[Answer] The party has 1.6 million members at present. We published this figure at the Fourth VCP Congress in 1976. In the meantime we investigated the membership of 100,000-150,000 people in the course of the control work of the party and I must tell you that approximately 300,000 left the party.

[Question] Why?

[Answer] Because they lacked the will and the ability to understand the new revolution and the requirements of the new stage. However, it is at least as important, and I must mention it, that half a million young people, who are more suited to the tasks of the socialist revolution, have joined the party.

[Question] It was originally planned to hold the Fifth VCP Congress at the end of last year. Why was the party congress postponed until March?

[Answer] It was our intention that the various draft programs of the party should receive serious discussion at every level. Well, this is why it was necessary to postpone the congress by 3 months. We have to think matters through again. Practical work is the determining factor here.

[Question] Perhaps you could be more specific. What sort of social and political issues influenced the postponement of the congress?

[Answer] It had no political or social reason. A 3-month postponement? This is a short time. Actually, that is all. In 1980, or, more precisely, at the beginning of 1981, we still believed that the preparation work could be finished by September. However, besides our other important tasks, urgent work, we were unable to fully complete the drafts. This is why we had to allocate an additional 3 months for this work. Of course, this is a question of purely practical significance.

[Question] When we last met in Budapest, you told me that you saw a need for rejuvenation, including the rejuvenation of the leadership. What do you expect from the fifth congress in this sphere?

[Answer] First of all, it is necessary to reduce the number of people over 60 years old, those who are as old as we are. People of 45-50 must be brought into the VCP Central Committee.

[Question] But if you were to realize this idea, it would bring about very serious changes in the Politburo.

[Answer] Naturally, we rejuvenate the Politburo only gradually and slowly.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 6 -- The Smolensk soccer team of the Soviet Armed Forces headed by Major Evgeniy Anstolyevich Mironik arrived here today at the invitation of the Vietnamese Ministry of National Defence.

AUSTRALIA

FRASER DELIVERS STATE OF NATION ADDRESS 9 MAR

BK090921 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] In an optimistic speech on the state of the nation, the prime minister, Mr Fraser, today said Australia had made great economic advances in recent years. Mr Fraser told Parliament that government policies had led to higher living standards and laid a strong foundation for the country's future. He said Australia had prospered despite the slackness in world trade and it was now in a position of comparative strength. The prime minister added that only excessive wage rises and damaging strikes could place the nation's economic progress at serious risk.

In reply, the opposition leader, Mr Hayden, questioned the prime minister's message in delivering his address only a few days before a federal byelection. Mr Hayden said that rather than a state of the nation message, Mr Fraser's speech had been a pathetic exercise in personal survival by a prime minister facing a crisis of confidence within his government.

GOVERNMENT DENIES REPORTS ON ANTARCTIC STATION

[Text] The Federal Government has denied reports that one of its Antarctic bases may be closed. The minister for science and technology, Mr Thomson, said that unless Australia maintains a strong presence in the Antarctic over the next 9 years there would be international pressure to reduce the size of its Antarctic territory. The treaty under which Australia has control of three sevenths of Antarctica will be renegotiated in 1991.

The denial follows reports that one of the Australian stations in the Antarctic -- Casey -- could be forced to close because of government cost-cutting. The minister said Antarctica was of strategic natural resource, environmental and scientific importance to Australia. He said the government was spending more than $50 million rebuilding the bases over a 10-year period and was considering the replacement of present Antarctic supply ships.

HAYDEN FAVORS BARRING NZ FROM COMMONWEALTH GAMES

BK090927 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] The federal opposition leader, Mr Hayden, says New Zealand should be barred from the Commonwealth Games in Brisbane this year if its presence would threaten the participation of black African countries. Mr Hayden told Parliament it would be tragic if African countries were to withdraw from the games because of what he terms the political opportunism of the New Zealand Government. He said that without the African countries, the Brisbane games would suffer lower standards and great financial losses.

The opposition leader was responding to a Commonwealth Day message by the prime minister, Mr Fraser, who had said he was confident the Brisbane games would reinforce the favorable standing of Australia within the Commonwealth.

SUZUKI HAILS GATT OFFICIAL'S CRITICISM OF U.S.

OW100943 Tokyo KYODO in English 0934 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 10 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday praised as a very courageous and correct assessment a recent remark by the director general of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) criticizing the United States and Western Europe for blaming Japan for their economic ills.

GATT Director General Arthur Dunkel suggested in West Germany last Friday that the U.S. and Western Europe were making a scapegoat of Japan in connection with trade frictions.

Speaking in Japan's House of Councillors Wednesday, Suzuki said that the world economy is now facing difficulties of various kinds and that economic frictions would not be basically solved unless such difficulties were overcome. The idea that the U.S. and Europe should themselves do more to boost their competitive power is basically sound, he pointed out. The prime minister did stress, however, that Japan should correct what needed correcting and cooperate in international efforts to revitalize the world economy.

SAKURAUCHI'S TALKS WITH HAIG 23 MAR PREVIEWED

[Text] Tokyo, March 11 (KYODO) -- East-West relations, the Middle East situation and U.S.-China relations will be the main issues to be taken up in discussions on the international situation to be conducted between Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig in Washington on March 23, according to Foreign Ministry sources. Sakurauchi is scheduled to leave Tokyo for Washington on March 20 for talks with U.S. Government leaders.

On U.S.-China relations, the sources said Japan regards that stability of Asia rests on good U.S.-China relations and China-Soviet confrontation.

Japan's stand was explained to U.S. Assistant Secretary of State John Holdridge when he stopped in Tokyo in January on his way home from Beijing where he informed Chinese officials that the U.S. would not sell sophisticated FX fighters to Taiwan.

Japan also has been appealing to the U.S. both formally and informally to build up stabilized ties with China. The Foreign Ministry believes a decisive retreat in Washington-Beijing relations will be avoided and hopes the request to be made by Sakurauchi for an amicable settlement through discussions will result in promoting such a settlement between the U.S. and China, whose relations have chilled recently over the problem of weapon sales to Taiwan.

As to East-West relations, the sources said Sakurauchi plans to be briefed by Haig on the intentions of the U.S. and future prospects.

Although such bilateral issues as trade and defense problems will be taken up also at the Sakurauchi-Haig meeting, agreement has been reached on holding discussions centered on the international situation. This is because of Japan's wish to exchange views on Japan-U.S. relations within the world framework.

TRADE TALKS WITH U.S. END; DELEGATES MEET PRESS

OW101215 Tokyo KYODO in English 1146 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 10 (KYODO) -- The United States Wednesday called for Japan's continued liberalization of its market for competitive American goods, saying that substantial progress in liberalization could block protectionist legislation before the U.S. Congress. Speaking to newsmen at the end of two days of trade talks, chief U.S. delegate David MacDonald said that the U.S. particularly hoped to see Japan ease import curbs on farm and fishery products.

The discussions, which took place against a background of growing protectionist sentiment in the U.S., dealt with a wide range of specific items from herring and tobacco to nuclear power plants and electronic equipment. The negotiators apparently made little progress, leaving many issues for further discussion.

But at a joint press conference, both MacDonald and his Japanese counterpart, Hiromu Fukuda, hailed the talks as "fruitful and constructive."

One of the few areas where the two countries agreed was on trade in agricultural and fishery products. Officials from both governments will meet in Washington next month to review Japan's import quotas on 22 products, including beef and citrus fruit. Japan also agreed to study an increase in the number of sales outlets allowed to sell imported tobacco; to begin consultation on increased fishery product imports within the next month; initiate talks on possible joint research and development projects in high-technology areas; and begin negotiations for import of beef and oranges in October, six months earlier than scheduled.

In a separate press conference later, MacDonald said the two days of talks indicated that "there is some likelihood of substantial movement by the Japanese Government in connection with access to its market." "If indeed this comes to fruition, I believe it would have a substantial effect in reducing or eliminating the rationale for protectionist legislation," he said.

Asked if he has changed his mind of suing Japan before the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), MacDonald replied, "We are hopeful, yes, that future steps by the Japanese Government would obviate anything of that sort."

He said, "I believe that the Japanese Government has made rather substantial progress in a number of service areas, particularly in the financial field."

"Service is an area where we the United States feel that we are extremely competitive and we have in mind in taking this matter to the GATT ministerial meeting in November...." "We do not think that the Japanese Government has fully opened all service areas as widely as the U.S., but there is no question that progress will be made," he added.

The schedule of the next meeting of the Japan-U.S. trade subcommittee will be arranged through diplomatic channels, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said.

TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS ON POLISH DIPLOMATS EASED

OW101115 Tokyo KYODO in English 1103 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 10 (KYODO) -- Japan Wednesday joined other Western nations in easing restrictions previously placed on domestic travel by Polish diplomats.

The Foreign Ministry informed the Polish Embassy in Tokyo of the relaxation, a step taken in response to the abolition earlier this month of travel restrictions on Western diplomats stationed in Poland.

Under martial law declared December 13, Western diplomats in Poland were asked to get prior approval for travel from the military authorities. The Polish authorities, however, eased this in February, switching to a travel registration system for Western diplomats.

Japanese ministry sources said Wednesday that the latest Polish action is a factor contributing to improvements in relations between Poland and Western bloc nations. They added that Poland probably took the step to demonstrate the stability of the Polish situation to the Western world.

VRPR: CHON ASSASSINATION PLOT CHARGES FALSE

SK100912 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Dialogue between two unidentified speakers from the feature "Focus on Topics"]

[Excerpts] [First speaker] In January, the Chon Tu-hwan clique put forward the unrealistic 22 January proposal for reunification, for which it was humiliated by the people. It is creating a public commotion by fabricating a ridiculous incident of an assassination attempt on Chon Tu-hwan. Will you tell us the truth about this incident?

[Second speaker] The incident is a fabrication. It is trying to justify the incident by so-called announcements and statements. Its remarks are all absurd.

[First speaker] Klemerman and Yanover, the Canadians who were arrested by the Canadian police, said that they never conspired to assassinate Chon. The Philippines stressed that there was no assassination plot when Chon Tu-hwan visited the Philippines.

[Second speaker] The Chon Tu-hwan clique has no evidence to convince the people. It only repeats assumptions and hypotheses.

[First speaker] It is said that the incident of an assassination attempt on Chon Tu-hwan is a deceitful drama written at Chongwadae. Will you tell us about this slanderous drama?

[Second speaker] There are two objectives the Chon Tu-hwan clique is pursuing. First, it is attempting to escape international and domestic isolation and a political crisis. Our people and the overseas compatriots are raising their voices, saying "Let us kill the murderer Chon Tu-hwan!" Second, it is trying to suppress the spirit of antidictatorship and anti-Chon Tu-hwan. Clearly, this spirit of struggle will be enhanced during the period of struggle in March and April.

[First speaker] A South Korean paper correctly noted that the people's aspiration for democracy is being temporarily suppressed at gunpoint. However, this silence is enforced by means of power. The masses will surely rise again in the future.

[Second speaker] World figures describe South Korea as a lamp in a storm. Chon Tu-hwan has placed an arsenal of guns in Chongwadae. He always wears a bulletproof vest when he goes out, and he is escorted by many bulletproof vehicles.

[First speaker] In conclusion, the Chon Tu-hwan clique's fabrication of the incident of the assassination attempt of Chon Tu-hwan is aimed at suppressing the procommunist sentiment, which is growing among the overseas compatriot societies, and the anti-dicatatorship spirit for democracy. It is scheming to obstruct visits to the North by overseas compatriots and to escape isolation by overseas compatriot societies.

[Second speaker] The Chon Tu-hwan clique is attempting to hide its vicious nature as murderer, fascist and terrorist through a foolish trick. However, it can neither deceive the people nor escape a crisis by such shallow wisdom.

[First speaker] Our masses will never be deceived by such a mean, slanderous drama. They will raise the banner of struggle higher than ever.

RPR ISSUES LETTER MARKING KIM IL-SONG'S BIRTHDAY

SK090906 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Open letter issued on 3 March by the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification to all members of the party and patriotic people of all walks of life in accordance with the resolution of the Standing Committee of the party Central Committee to commemorate the 70th birthday of Kim Il-song as a most significant one and to glorify this year as one enacting new changes in achieving victory in the revolution for reunification -- read by announcer]

[Text] All party members and patriotic people of all walks of life, we are now living in the glorious era of chuche and are advancing toward the victory of the revolution for reunification, holding aloft the revolutionary banner of chuche. The Revolutionary Party for Reunification [RPR] and people of all walks of life, living and carrying out the revolution in an era of chuche under the resplendent ray of chuche, will soon greet the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a figure in the revolutionary summit of the present era.

The birthday of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great sun of the nation, is the supreme festival of the poeple which our people will commemorate with great joy while holding in high esteem the greatest and most outstanding leader over the long period of half a century. This is a great revolutionary event which should be recorded in the history of mankind.

Greeting the 70th birthday of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song when Comrade Kim Chong-il, the wise leader of the people, has emerged as the great successor to the chuche revolutionary cause developed in the forest of Mt Paektu and has brightly illuminated the future of the fatherland and the people, brings great joy and glory to our people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the patriot of the century and a legendary hero, has devoted everything to the fatherland, the people and the revolution over 70 years of his lifetime, during which he has emerged as the sun of the nation. During this noble period he has performed great, immortal exploits.

Thanks to the presence of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of salvation for the world and the people, and to the history of the leader's lasting and immortal revolutionary activities, our fatherland and people have been relieved from a catastrophic crisis and greeted a glorious new era. During the dark period of the Japanese imperialists' colonial rule, Comrade Kim Il-song, an epochal hero, taking the lead in the revolution in response to the demand of mankind and to meet the requirements of the trend of the contemporary era, invented the chuche idea -- a philosophy respecting men -- victoriously organized and led the anti-Japanese armed struggle under the resplendent ray of this idea, ushered in the new spring of liberation in the fatherland which was in distress and paved the way for national prosperity.

After liberation, Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the revolution, speedily led the democratic revolution and the people's work of building a new society in the northern half of the fatherland, demonstrating that our people could successfully build an independent country. He also demonstrated the firm will and heroic spirit of the people against the foreign imperialists by defeating the Yankee imperialists who tried to swallow North Korea.

By wisely leading the party and the people in the northern half of the fatherland, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the genius of creation and construction, has brilliantly accomplished the historic cause of socialist revolution, construction and industrialization in the shortest span of time, converting Korea into a powerful socialist country -- a paradise on earth for the welfare of the people -- which is dignified, wealthy, prosperous and self-reliant, powerful with self-defense capability and enjoying modern civilization with chuche-type culture and art.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the master of modern art, has completely and brilliantly resolved a basic question which influences the destiny of the party and the revolution by laying a firm foundation for strengthening and developing the glorious KWP into a chuche-type party forever by inheriting and completing the chuche revolutionary cause generation after generation, attaining a great achievement for the people.

Effectively implementing the program to imbue society with Kimilsongism under the outstanding and tested leadership of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great sun of chuche, and Comrade Kim Chong-il, the great guidance star of chuche, today's North Korean society is praised by people throughout the world and shines as the ideal land of mankind.

Under the chuche-type socialist system in North Korea -- the fruition of the immortal chuche idea, the tested leadership and noble morality of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- all people are fused into one through the maintenance of true human relations and comradery with which they help and guide one another. The party and the people are linked by a single idea and will. The working people own all the treasures which have been amassed as a result of the miracles of Chollima and the speed battle.

Viewing the world through chuche Korea and leading mankind's liberation struggle through the chuche revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has ushered in the new era of chuche -- a historic new era in which the raging billows of anti-imperialism and independence surge -- on an earth plagued by the iron shackles of domination and subjugation.

Because the great leader has victoriously led the world revolution in the era of independence with majesty and absolute authority, mankind in the 20th century reveres and praises him as the wise sun of chuche and defines the present era advancing along the road of chuche as the great era of Kim Il-song.

Indeed, the stormy life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a victorious course during which he invented and brilliantly materialized Kimilsongism -- the perfect guidance idea of the chuche era -- a glorious course during which he created the new history of creation and demonstrated the might of chuche Korea and a great immortal epic of love with which he has guided the once oppressed working people as true masters of freedom and civilization and chuche-type men who are aware of themselves.

Thanks to the glorious and brilliant revolutionary activities of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the Korean people have raised their status from that of despair and humiliation to independence. Korea, once plagued by backwardness and poverty, has developed into a great country which has achieved astounding developments and is traversing the road of prosperity.

Indeed, there has never before been an era when such a brilliant chapter was added to the history of our people. There has not been an era when the prestige of the country was enhanced and the dignity of the people was raised so high as today.

Because of the presence of chuche Korea -- a beacon of hope -- which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has glorified and because of the presence of the bright road of the country's reunification, our people, despite protracted colonial tyranny and oppressive fascist bayonets, are illuminated by the leader, living and struggling full of optimism and belief in victory, without knowing despair.

Without the resplendent ray of the chuche sun, how could the torch of democracy and reunification have been raised in South Korea and the heroic nation-saving struggle waged there to make the aggressors and traitors shudder with fear? Without the resplendent ray of the great Kimilsongism and the program for nation-saving reunification, how could it be that the RPR -- a chuch-type revolutionary party -- has emerged, that the strong ranks of those who believe in the chuche idea have been fostered and that the people of all walks of life, picturing before their eyes the future of the reunified fatherland, are filled with hope.

Without Comrade Kim Il-song, the great sun of the nation, we cannot think of the changed aspect that people are highly motivated to lead a true life and to struggle for a good cause in South Korea, which is the worst living hell in history, that the revolution for reunification has been carried out here under the banner of chuche and that a bright future is guaranteed here. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the people's supreme leader. He has devoted his life to the fatherland and the people. He is a benevolent father.

The emergence of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and the dawning road of the chuche revolution he personally pioneered, was a new stage in the history of the people and a historical starting point for the future of the fatherland. Even though we are divided into North and South and dispersed overseas because of interference by foreign forces, our endless reverence, admiration and loyalty for the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song are ardent and firm as one because our people greeted him for the first time in the long history of several thousand years and because they have been revived under the resplendent ray of the chuche sun.

No obstacle can thwart the will of all the people to endlessly trust and follow forever Comrade Kim Il-song, the patriot of the century, the savior of the people and a great leader. Therefore, our PPR and the people of all walks of life are firmly determined to greet his 70th birthday as the supreme revolutionary festival of the people with endless reverence, admiration and loyalty for Comrade Kim Il-song, the great sun of the nation.

Encouraged by the decision of the Standing Committee of the RPR Central Committee intended to magnificently observe the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the organizations of all echelons of the RPR and RPR members and patriotic organizations and people of all strata are now intensifying propaganda activities to disseminate the truth of chuche under the grim circumstances in which the fascist terrorists' surveillance and repression are everywhere.

They are advancing under the banner of democracy and reunification while devoting themselves to embroidering congratulatory banners for the good health and long life of the respected and beloved leader and preparing mememtos. Under the leadership of our party, party members and patriotic people of all strata are burning with revolutionary zeal to make the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song a most glorious year.

Such a bold stand and firm activities of our party and people have now become a major factor for the anxiety and fear of the Chon Tu-hwan fascist military elements. They foresee their downfall in the growing admiration and loyalty of the patriotic people of all strata who have followed and upheld the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the sun of the nation and the lodestar of liberation ever since the days of the anti-Japanese struggle.

Dismayed at the worsening crisis of their rule and the evil omen for their future, the enemy is desperately trying to get through the situation in which their fear is growing stronger than ever. The heinous Chon Tu-hwan clique, which most fears the existence and activities of the RPR -- the chuche-oriented revolutionary party which braves the repression by guns and swords under the banner of the great Kimilsongism, is emphasizing oppression of the RPR and intensifying the fascist anticommunist commotions more than ever.

To thwart the revolutionary influence of the RPR and destroy the rank and file of revolution and reunification, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is feverishly carrying out a slanderous propaganda campaign against our party and running amok by arresting, imprisoning, torturing and trying and executing our party members. In particular, to reverse people's sentiment toward the great sun of the nation Comrade Kim Il-song, the enemy is deceiving and trifling with people with plausible political slogans while tightening the shackles of repression under the threat of guns and swords. However, the enemy's fascist oppression and deceptive tricks cannot reverse the burning admiration of the people who trust in and follow the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- the lodestar of freedom and liberation. Nothing can block the current of revolution and reunification flowing along the path of chuche.

The RPR members and patriotic people of all strata must brave the enemy's oppression, which is being intensified, and observe the 70th birthday of the respected and beloved leader as a revolutionary jubilation. They must make this year a historic year during which the Kimilsongization of the party and the revolutionary rank and file is accelerated and a new turn is brought about in the revolution and for the achievement of reunification. Expressing satisfaction that the party members and patriotic people of all strate are actively responding to the call of our party and overcoming mounting trials and difficulties to observe the 70th birthday of the great leader in a most glorious way and struggling with a single mind to accelerate the victory of the revolution and in the movement to achieve reunification, the RPR Central Committee issues this open letter to put forth a line of struggle and other tasks.

The party members and patriotic people of all strata: It is the revolutionary will and policy of our party to accomplish the revolution for reunification by upholding the chuche sun Comrade Kim Il-song as the great leader, espousing immortal Kimilsongism as a faith and regarding it is a guidance principle. We must be loyal in upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and follow him to eternity.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the legendary hero of the anti-Japanese struggle who liberated the fatherland, the iron-willed commander who wins a hundred victories in a hundred battles and who defeated the Japanese and U.S. imperialists in one generation and the lodestar of the fatherland's reunification and great sun of the nation who is admired by the whole nation.

The great Comrade Kim Il-song is the most outstanding leader of the working class who created the immortal chuche idea and pioneered the chuche revolutionary cause and the resplendent chuche sun.

He opened a new historic era on the globe, blazed the path of the grand march of the chuche era and is shaping the future of mankind. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the benevolent father of the whole nation who embraces our compatriots and progressive people in his bosom and loves them with his peerless personality and noble character. Upholding and following the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- the legendary hero, the genius of the revolution and the sun of the salvation of the world and people -- is a guarantee for the victory of the revolution and the movement for the fatherland's reunification and the South Korean people's happiness and prosperity of the nation. Le us bear in our minds the honor and pride of upholding the sun of the nation Comrade Kim Il-song as the great leader and loyally uphold the respected and beloved leader from generation to generation and through eternity.

Brave the furious fascist gale and the mounting trials and firmly prepare yourself as a genuine revolutionary fighter who only trusts in and follows the chuche sun! Make yourself a vanguard fighter who depends on the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for your destiny and the future of the fatherland and sacrifice your life for him!

On the road of advance under the resplendent ray of guidance of the chuche sun, anything can be overcome! Any task can be accomplished! With this belief, devote yourself to the chuche cause! Smash the class enemy's and reactionaries' vicious offensive and defamation against communists and loyally protect the prestige of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song!

The party members must give priority to making Kimilsongism -- the only guiding principle of our party -- their belief! The great Kimilsongism is the trend of the chuche era in which people have emerged as masters of history and those who shape their destiny by themselves. It is a resplendent banner of all victories and glories. Kimilsongism -- the immortal revolutionary theory -- is the only guiding principle of our party, a truth which illuminates the future of the revolution for reunification and a banner of victory leading the South Korean people to the sacred struggle for freedom and liberation.

Arming oneself with great Kimilsongism and advancing under its banner is the secret to the successful advance of the revolution for reunification along the orbit of chuche and winning the final victory. Moreover, it is particularly important and urgent to arm oneself with Kimilsongism, which enables us to have correct views of nature and society and have a powerful weapon for world reform in South Korea, where all kinds of reactionary ideas are rampant and false concepts and anticommunist theories are sweeping society. Devote yourself to the work of arming yourself with great Kimilsongism! Employ every means and familiarize yourself with the profound truth of Kimilsongism! Make immortal Kimilsongism your faith in victory and make yourself a genuine Kimilsongist who will live forever on the road of the rewarding chuche revolution!

Look into, operate, analyze and judge the corrupt and contaminated South Korean society and establish a firm revolutionary outlook with which to act decisively! Under the banner of ever-victorious Kimilsongism, smash the false theories and anticommunist ideas which make people spiritual cripples and victims of corruption! It is a decisive guarantee for the victory of the revolution for reunification to accelerate the Kimilsongization of the party and the revolutionary ranks. Consolidate the unity and cohesion of the party which are based on the great Kimilsongism and protect the purity of the chuche idea!

More effectively advance Kimilsongization of the revolutionary rank and file and make party organizations at all echelons and other patriotic organizations invincible militant organizations which will brave all fascist storms and trials and advance persistently!

Intensify propaganda activities among the people to disseminate the greatness and truth of Kimilsongism and strengthen the ranks of those who espouse the chuche idea! Enlighten and awaken the people of all strata with the truth of chuche and make efforts to unite them under the banner of great Kimilsongism! Let us persistently advance under the banner of the ever-victorious great Kimilsongism!

Party members and the patriotic people of all strata: To those who will observe the 70th birthday of the great sun of the nation Comrade Kim Il-song, nothing is more important than the great national task to achieve the reunification of the fatherland and to hold him in high esteem in the plaza of the reunified fatherland. It is a supreme, historic, cherished desire of the nation to hold the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in high esteem in the land of the reunified, independent and prosperous fatherland and to live happily from generation to generation.

Let us all recall those days following the liberation when our joy and gratitude for the liberation were soaring high above the skies! When the great leader in his early 30's had returned to the fatherland after winning the victory in the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, how excited our people were with the high hope for living under the leader's government in the independent chuche Korea! When the news spread across the nation that the great leader of the nation Comrade Kim Il-song -- the legendary hero of the anti-Japanese struggle and the benefactor of the liberation -- would come to Seoul, our people, young and old, all rushed to the Seoul railway station plaza like a torrential current.

This was the manifestation of the Korean public's unchanging desire to depend on the great leader for the nation's fate and their future and an expression of the revolutionary will of the South Korean countrymen, who were aware that the nation's prosperity and the people's happiness would be ensured when they followed the leader, holding him in high esteem. Regardless of their social status, occupation and ideology, their ardent desire to follow the leadership of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great sun of the nation, was expressed. Even though our people's aspirations for living in the bosom of the great leader have not been realized due to national division, the people's admiration of the great leader which was demonstrated during those days still lives in this land, where the danger of permanent division is present.

We should immediately reunify the fatherland by crushing the rancorous barrier of North-South division and uphold the nation's supreme leader Comrade Kim Il-song on the highest seat in the reunification plaza. This is the revolutionary will of the movement and the most ardent desire of people of all walks of life. We should elevate this steel-like will and desire into a national salvation movement to realize national reunification and enact a new turn in implementing the reunification cause.

At this moment, the orthodoxy of national reunification is to found the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] declared by Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation. The shortest way to the reunification plaza is to found a confederal reunified state on the basis of mutually recognizing existing ideologies and systems in North and South. Let us vigorously stage a struggle to found the DCRK. Let various political parties and personages from various strata participate in founding this independent, democratic, neutral and peace-loving reunified state. All patriotic forces aspiring reunification should join the struggle for founding the DCRK, transcending ideologies and thought. To establish the DCRK at the earliest date, we should smash the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to perpetuate division and thwart their vicious challenge. The basic tactic of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring is to fabricate two Koreas. Let us resolutely destroy the two Koreas intrigue. Let us deal a heavy blow to the treacherous clique seeking permanent division through simultaneous North-South entry into the United Nations. Let us uncover the treacherous nature of the 22 January proposal. Let us establish an independent reunified state, ending the tragedy of division.

All party members and patriotic masses from various strata: To expedite the glorious reunification of the fatherland, you should open a decisive phase in the anti-imperialist struggle for democratization. The great condition for the salvation movement is to overthrow the truculent military fascist dictatorship and achieve social democratization. South Korea has become a grand military prison where freedom is infringed upon by the treacherous Chon Tu-hwan clique, pursuing fascism and division and running counter to democracy and reunification. In South Korea, which is maintained by massive suppressive forces and laws, aspirations for rights to survival and democracy are regarded as a crime. Any minor complaint about the military dictatorship and national division is a target of suppression. In South Korean society, mass media are reduced to the stooges of dictatorship, campuses are under military rule and the fascist regulations and churches are a stage for inspection of religious activities. To conceal this tyrannical fascist dictatorship, the heinous Chon Tu-hwan ring has fabricated a private national assembly and a private political party. What is worse, it has produced sham political parties under the special license of Chongwadae. While babbling about a just society and constructing a democratic welfare state, it desperately tries to brainwash the people. The villanious Chon Tu-hwan, who has been running amok to cleanse his dirty image as the heinous, fascist murderer, pretends to guarantee freedom, such as lifting the curfew. He has inflicted violence on the people. Under the pretext of the modernization of politics, the fascist clique has accelerated the modernization of the fascist system. While clamoring about eliminating disorder, it has arrested, tortured, imprisoned and murdered students and the patriotic people from various strata. In an effort to shift the masses' resistance against Chongwadae to North Korea, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is viciously kicking up anti-communist rackets and staging provocative war maneuvers in a land of injustice. Engaged in propaganda of southward invasion by the North, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is conducting an anticommunist campaign to incite North-South confrontation, espousing the fraudulent proposal for reunification, and worsening the situation by staging a mock war, "Team Spirit 1982," simulating northward invasion.

The fascist military dictatorship of Chon Tu-hwan, who lords it over the people and acts arbitrarily against the wishes of people desiring democracy and reunification, is the most barbaric of fascist systems. It is a sample of the most outrageous and brazen dictatorship inclined to butchering and cheating the people. It is a cancer blocking the fatherland's reunification.

Democracy is patriotism and the basis of reunification; fascism is reactionism and a tool for national division. Democracy and fascism are incompatible with each other; patriotism and reactionism cannot coexist. With the Chon Tu-hwan fascist military dictatorship allowed to remain intact, we can expect neither a new democratic society nor the glorious plaza of national reunification, much less the human right to survival. This is the bitter lesson the South Korean people have learned through their experience.

We should further uplift the banner of the sacred struggle to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan fascist military dictatorship and to gain democracy and civil rights. An active and massive struggle against fascism and Chon Tu-hwan is the way out through which we can obtain the right to survival and democratic freedoms and the route to the plaza of national reunification.

Party members and patriotic people, burning with their obligations to the times and history, should struggle continuously and strenuously until they overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan fascist military dictatorship and achieve democratization of society.

Let them fan the flames of the struggle for democracy so that they can avenge the Kwangju uprisers who were ruthlessly massacred in the sacred struggle for democracy and reunification.

Let them wage a vigorous campaign for the rescue of political prisoners, including those involved in RPR cases and the Kwangju uprising.

Let them fight for abrogation of the Kim Tae-chung case and for his reinstitution.

Let them carry out in schools across the country the struggle to disband the Student Defense Corps, to abolish the graduation quota system and to obtain the freedom to study and engage in club activities.

Let them incite the workers to a massive struggle for their right to survival and link it with the struggle for democracy and against fascism.

Let them regain democratic rights and freedoms of speech, publication, assembly, organization, demonstration and belief.

Let them fight for the legalization of the RPR and freedom of activities for democratic political parties and public organizations.

Let them give a counterblow to the Chon Tu-hwan clique which, in the name of modernization of politics, commits fascist offenses to consolidate a fascist system.

Let them mete out punishment to the fascists who insult the people's righteous struggle for democracy and their right to survival by labeling it disorder or disturbance and suppress the people's freedom and right to survival.

Let them burn the murderous evil laws and crush the fascist repressive apparatus.

Let them bury the outrageous fascist military dictatorship and on its grave wage more strenuously the patriotic sacred struggle to establish a democratic coalition government.

Party members and patriotic people: If our people are to add lustre to their dignity as independent people enjoying happiness, upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the reunified fatherland, you should put an end to the interference in the internal affairs of South Korea by the U.S. and Japanese reactionaries.

It is none but the Yankee aggressors who brought the tragedy of the national division to our people, who were teeming with joy following the liberation, and imposed subjugation and slavery of fascist dictatorship on our people, who wanted to live a happy life in the bosom of the great leader.

The occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialist aggressors completely frustrated our people's aspiration for freedom and liberation, independence and reunification. Our people have undergone a history of 37 years of trials.

Nevertheless, the U.S. imperialists have installed traitor Chon Tu-hwan -- the ugliest pro-U.S. nation-seller and the most atrocious and relentless human butcher -- in the presidency of the military dictatorial regime. They are further intensifying their colonial rule and instigating the military hooligans to fascism and permanent division and war. Moreover, the U.S. imperialists are, by utilizing their stooge, Chon Tu-hwan, embellishing the 100-year history of the aggression and plundering as a history of fraternity and friendship, and they are planning to stage a farce called a ceremony marking the 100th anniversary of the establishment of Korea-U.S. ties in May.

The U.S. imperialists are indeed the mortal enemy of our people and the ringleader of fascism and division. How can we put up with such heinous aggressors?

Boldly stage the anti-U.S. nation-saving struggle to repel the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces from South Korea and to end the U.S. imperialists' domination and interference in South Korea! Bring the U.S. imperialists' colonial and fascist military rule to an end! Smash the U.S. imperialists' schemes for two Koreas and thwart their new war maneuvers!

Along with the anti-U.S. nation-saving struggle, we must vigorously stage the anti-Japanese patriotic struggle.

The Japanese reactionaries have established new South Korea-Japan collusive relations with the Chon Tu-hwan clique and are stretching their claws to invade South Korea again. They are emerging as a very dangerous aggressive force.

In particular, the Japanese reactionaries, who overlooked the Kim Tae-chung case, are actively supporting the fascist repression of Mr. Kim Tae-chung and other democratic personages by the Chon Tu-hwan clique. They are also promoting the permanent division of our nation.

Bombard with the indignation of the nation the interfering maneuvers of the Japanese militarists who covertly and overtly protect and support the Chon Tu-hwan traitorous clique!

Maintain heightened vigilance over the Japanese reactionaries' schemes to invade South Korea again and smash their claws of aggression!

All patriotic forces, hold the anti-U.S. and anti-Japanese banner aloft, repel all aggressive forces and fan the flames of the sacred nation-saving struggle to establish an independent democratic society, without foreign forces and traitors, and to found a unified state!

Party members and patriotic forces of all strata: Our struggle is an arduous one in which we must fight against the U.S. imperialists -- the ringleader of international reactionaries -- and the relentless military fascists. Even if our struggle is hard and arduous, we must not wait for a favorable situation to be created nor must we sit idle. We must not pause even for a moment. If we do so, this will be a breach of faith in the revolutionaries and patriots.

We have Kimilsongism, which gives faith in victory and invincible courage, and we have unity, which is more powerful than bombs. The revolutionaries and patriots must work out tactics of struggle based on Kimilsongism and implement it efficiently. They must avoid reckless confrontation and effectively carry out the revolution for reunification by organizing active struggle.

As the situation becomes grimmer, hold the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea even higher, unite people of all strata as one and continue to struggle while relying on the concentrated force of the people!

The masters of the revolution for reunification are the people of all strata and the driving force of the revolution for reunification is the majority of the people, including the workers and peasants. When the oppressed proletariat is united as one and awakened, it can be more powerful than guns and swords and can destroy the headquarters of the fascist dictators.

Unite workers, peasants, youths, students, intellectuals and all other people as a powerful chuche revolutionary force!

Form a united anti-U.S. nation-saving front, a united antifascist democratic front with people of all strata, and with political parties, factions and personages seeking democracy and reunification!

Only through an active struggle is it possible to mobilize people of all strata to the front of persistent struggle. Party organizations at all echelons, patriotic organizations and all revolutionaries and patriots must wage a united struggle throughout the nation and achieve class unity and solidarity among the regions. They must form and consolidate the united anti-U.S. nation-saving front and the united antifascist democratic front through the joint struggle of the people!

Invincible is our party and the people of all strata advancing under the banner of the great Kimilsongism!

Party members and people of all strata must hold aloft the banner of the ever-victorious great Kimilsongism. They must unite and continue to fight. By so doing, they must make this year a historic year in which a new turn is brought about in the revolution for reunification.

Let us accelerate the work to provide a glorious reunification plaza where we will receive the sun of the salvation of the world and the people, Comrade Kim Il-song!

The cause of our struggle is just and nothing can block the advance of the people who have risen up for their just cause. Ours are a wise people who have the precious experience of the struggle in which they overthrew the atrocious Syngman Rhee dictatorial regime and brought about the downfall of the heinous dictator traitor Pak Chong-hui. They are revolutionary people who demonstrated their heroism through the decisive battle in Kwangju, in the roaring gunfire.

Our party and our people, upholding the great sun of the nation, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the great guiding star of the nation, the wise leader [chidoja] Comrade Kim Chong-il, and advancing under the banner of the ever-victorious Kimilsongism, can overcome and achieve anything. Only victory and glory await them.

The RPR Central Committee firmly believes that the RPR party members and people of all strata will display the indefatigable fighting spirit, destroy the headquarters of the colonial fascist dictatorship and bring about the day on which we will shout with joy in the plaza of democracy and reunification.

Party members and patriotic people of all strata must vigorously move forward toward the victory of the revolution for reunification under the rays of the resplendent and glorious chuche sun.

Long live the great sun of the nation, Comrade Kim Il-song!

Long live the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song!

CHON CALLS FOR POSITIVE NEW COMMUNITY MOVEMENT

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan yesterday called for the fostering of the national strength by systematizing it through the Saemaul Undong (New Community Movement), saying that this is the very way to help the nation keep its survival and achieve sustained growth amid turbulences expected in the 1980's. He said that the drive should be carried out in such a way as to renovate positively the people's spiritual stand so as to make the Koreans "a first-class people" in the face of the 1986 Asian and 1988 Olympic Games, both to be held in Seoul. At the same time, the nationwide movement should take its roots deep into the minds of the people by developing it as a driving force accelerating the national modernization and development.

Chon made the points while visiting the central headquarters of Saemaul Undong near Kimpo. First Lady Yi Sujn-cha accompanied the president. The president said that activities of the decade-old drive should not be inactive or depressed even after the change of presidents. He then emphasized the need to carry out positively the energy and foodgrains savings drive in connection with the execution of Saemaul Undong.

"Thus far, poor and low-income people have taken part in the movement in a positive manner while wealthy people and intellectuals have tended to ignore it," the chief executive noted. The movement can see a fruitful outcome only when intellectuals and other people from all segments of the society, regardless of their positions and ranks, participate in the drive, he said. The president recalled that the movement, which has played an active role in the rural modernization, has been inactive in the urban society due to peculiarity of city life. Chon urged that the drive should be carried out in a more positive manner in urban communities. He said it is very important to allot profits equally (among the people) through the movement.

Prior to giving the directives, the president was briefed on the new year programs of the central organization of the movement. The briefing session was attended by Minister of Home Affairs So Chong-hwa, Minister of Agriculture and Forestry Ko Kon, Minister of Commerce and Industry So Sok-chun and Minister of Education Yi Kyu-ho.

GOVERNMENT DECREASES OIL PRICES BY 2.82 PERCENT

SK110124 Seoul YONHAP in English 0103 GMT 11 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 11 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government has decided to overhaul its oil policy, cancelling premiums paid to crude oil exporters and allowing the purchase of crude oil on international spot markets.

Energy-Resources Minister Yi Son-ki said Wednesday that beginning next month the government will not approve any commissions or premiums Korean oil companies are charged when importing crude oil. He said the government did not take such charges into consideration when it reduced domestic oil prices by an average of 2.82 percent Wednesday.

The government will also ease regulations on crude oil imports to allow the purchase of crude oil on spot markets. Such oil will meet 20 percent of the domestic oil demand, Yi said.

Prices on spot markets are currently four dollars less than the 32.77 U.S. dollars per barrel South Korea has been paying for crude oil imports. Domestic prices of oil products will also be gradually deregulated, according to Yi.

VISIT TO USSR BY POLAND'S JARUZELSKI TOUTED

OW100133 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in Russian 1505 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 3 Mar (MONTSAME) -- A MONTSAME commentator writes: The recently completed visit to the Soviet Union by the Polish party and state delegation headed by Wojciech Jaruzelski and the Soviet-Polish summit talks are a major contribution to the cause of consolidating and developing relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries at this crucial moment for the Polish people's state.

The United States, infuriated by the failure of the counterrevolutionary coup in Poland and the collapse of its hopes for the restoration of capitalism, initiated an anti-Polish campaign unprecedented in its scale and in its violation of international standards in which they involved a whole series of Western states. Washington wanted to turn Poland into a battering ram with which it could try to smash the structure of European detente. Economic sanctions are being applied against Poland and an unbridled propaganda campaign is being waged to discredit the Polish leadership's measures for normalizing life in the country.

Against this background, W. Jaruzelski emphasized in his address at a Kremlin dinner that the enormous significance of the USSR's irreplaceable and international assistance to Poland and that the understanding of Polish difficulties by other fraternal socialist countries is becoming even more evident. Yes, socialist Poland is not alone! The Polish people have someone to lean on in their time of trial.

In his address Leonid Brezhnev declared: "We have helped and will continue to help Poland in every way possible." The Soviet leader's words are imbued with profound internationalism and concern for the Polish people's fate. They instill confidence that with the fraternal assistance of the socialist countries, Poland will be able to overcome all the difficulties facing it.

Anxiety about the state of the international situation and a desire to strengthen the peace and security of peoples could be heard in the statements of the Soviet and Polish leaders. Once again they appealed to the West to broaden the dialogue and businesslike cooperation, not the confrontation into which the United States is strenuously trying to draw the Europeans.

The joint Soviet-Polish communique stresses that the Soviet Union and the Polish People's Republic are against confrontation, the intensification of tensions and the arms race, and are for the elimination of the military danger, for arms limitation and disarmament, and for a radical normalization of the international situation.

The significance of the visit of the party and state delegation of the Polish People's Republic goes far beyond the bounds of relations between two countries. The results of the Soviet-Polish talks will undoubtedly have a positive influence on the situation in Europe and will force the leaders of those West European countries, which blindly follow the lead of Washington's adventuristic policies, to think hard.

PCI ACCUSED OF 'DRIFTING FROM MARXISM-LENINISM'

OW110117 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1706 GMT Mar 82

["Article" -- MONTSAME headline]

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, March 10 (MONTSAME) -- Today when imperialist forces headed by the U.S. imperialism push the mankind to the brink of nuclear catastrophe, intensify attacks against socialism ever more, significance acquires the unity and cohesion of the world communist movement; but the leadership of the Italian Communist Party [PCI] drifts still away from Marxism-Leninism, from the cooperation with the fraternal parties.

The recent I.C.P. documents clearly show that Polish developments have become a pretext for the I.C.P. leadership to openly attack real socialism. According to their opinion Polish developments prove that socialism, which has become a reality in many countries, has lost its motive force and ceased to develop. But the fact is that socialism in mere 60 years of its existence has made in the interests of the working people colossal socio-economic changes which are unimaginable and inattainable under capitalism. This is clear to anyone who is sound and just in his assessments.

One of the most vivid examples of the historical achievements of real socialism, of its truly inexhaustible possibilities is the Mongolian People's Republic. The Mongolian people, which before the victory of the people's revolution in 1921 was on the brink of dying out, has transformed once backward feudal Mongolia into a modern agrarian-industrial state, steadily develops our economy based on social ownership of the means of production and from year to year raises the material well-being and the cultural level of our people. And this goes not only for Mongolia. The countries of socialist community during the period of socialist construction have turned into states developed in every way.

And denying the reality the I.C.P. leadership tries to negate the historical achievements of real socialism, its decisive role in the cause of social progress and preserving peace. They over-emphasize some shortcomings and difficulties inevitable in the process of building and perfecting a new society and allege that they stem from the essence of socialism.

The antisocialist position of the I.C.P. leadership is testified by its negation of the role of the Soviet Union in the struggle for peace and security of the peoples. There was not and there is not a country in the world which would have and which contributes as much as does the Soviet Union to the struggle for socialism, for freedom of peoples and for peace. But the I.C.P. leadership as if contesting with bourgeois propaganda talk of "hegemonist designs cherished" by the Soviet Union, of pressing upon others its "model of socialism." They totally ignore dozens of Soviet peaceful initiatives and go as far as to attribute detente to the diplomacy of West-European capitalist countries, place on the same plane the Warsaw Treaty Organization and NATO though it is well known that the Warsaw Treaty Organization was founded to counterbalance NATO.

And with the statements of the kind the I.C.P. leaders come out at the time when the ruling circles of the United States and the NATO military have adopted a course at gaining a military superiority over socialist countries, speak of a "limited nuclear war" in Europe, a continent where Italy is situated.

Departure of the I.C.P. leadership from revolutionary traditions of their party and the Italian working class, from Marxist-Leninist theory and from the program of the communist and working parties causes damage to the unity and cohesion of the world communist movement, to the interests of the world working people including the Italian workers.

HOR NAM HONG MEETS WITH RED CROSS OFFICIAL

BK101530 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] On the morning of 6 March, Comrade Hor Nam Hong, vice minister of foreign affairs, received (Orik de Beer), representative of the International Red Cross accredited to Phnom Penh, at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

On this occasion, in response to a request about ensuring security for International Red Cross medical personnel and health centers set up in Thai territory along the Kampuchean-Thai border, Comrade Hor Nam Hong reiterated that the PRK has always respected the sovereignty of neighboring countries, particularly the sovereignty of Thailand. He went on to stress that, on the contrary, the Thai authorities have ordered the reactionary Khmer groups and Pol Pot criminals taking refuge on their territory to sabotage the happiness of the Kampuchean people. He added that the PRK can in no way be held responsible for accidents that might occur in Thai territory, for the Thai authorities, in collusion with the Chinese expansionists and U.S. imperialists, continue to support and assist the murderous Pol Pot gang and other reactionary Khmer groups. At the same time, the comrade vice minister recalled the appeal from the Indochinese foreign ministers conference that a demilitarized zone be set up to ensure security along the border between the two countries and asked the International Red Cross to act as a mediator with the Thai side in order to fulfill this appeal, with the aim of ensuring security for the medical personnel and health centers of the International Red Cross in the region.

On the same occasion, (Orik de Beer) promised to do his best to bring about a guarantee of security along the border in order to facilitate the work of the relief personnel in the area.

STRENGTHENING OF TRADE UNION ACTIVITIES URGED

BK101527 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 10 Mar 82

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Strengthen and Expand the Trade Union Organization" -- date not given]

[Text] After the 7 January 1979 victory over the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique -- lackey of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists -- our country was faced with the serious consequences left behind by the former regime. Cadres in all sectors and most of the specialized workers had been massacred; social order, the organizational structures and the people's living standards had plunged to a sub-zero level. Residual counterrevolutionary views and unethical thinking had a serious influence on the new regime. However, thanks to the fact that the party grasped the good examples of Marxist-Leninist parties in fraternal socialist countries and thanks to the determination to fight permeated with the patriotic conscience of cadres at all levels and the entire working class, we set up the Trade Union Organization for National Salvation with the intention of rallying the workers throughout the country to take part in the tasks of managing and organizing the productive systems, restoring order and living conditions in the society, promoting production and restoring the national economy. This is a most important and premier historic event of our beautiful land of Angkor unprecedented in the previous regimes.

During the past year, while firmly grasping the appeals and directives of the resolutions issued by the first national trade union cadres meeting, all trade unions displayed a high sense of creativeness, mastery and responsibility vis-a-vis the revolution by steadily expanding and strengthening the organizational network in major economic sectors from the central to grassroots levels. Workers in all localities have actively and enthusiastically taken part in political activities in their capacity as masters of the country, electing representatives to commune and ward people's revolutionary committees, participating in and organizing the Fourth KPRP Congress and electing their representatives to the National Assembly and other leading state institutions. This clearly shows the essential role played by the trade union organization at this present stage of our revolution.

The trade union organization has educated and inculcated in us political and ideological matters as well as expanded within us the cultural and technical standards in all fields, and has raised the administrative ability of the workers with every passing day, ensuring the success of revolutionary tasks both at present and in the future, which is in complete contrast with the former regime, which pursued a policy of obscurantism to blind the masses in order to facilitate their oppression and exploitation.

Within the ranks of the trade union cadres, employees and workers, a movement of emulation to create good achievements, select model individuals, promote creativeness and ingenuity of the workers, develop the spirit of mutual affection and assistance as within a big familiy, and appropriately solve problems occuring in productive localities has been successfully launched. The will to struggle persistently in labor and the sense of courage to overcome all difficulties and obstacles has been steadily developed.

The trade union organization has encouraged our workers to continue their militant heroism in transporting equipment in service of production in all sectors, particularly in transporting foodstuffs and consumer goods to be distributed to the people.

This constitutes clear proof showing the lofty confidence and determination of the workers in contributing to accelerating the PRK through the period of transition toward socialism.

The second national trade union cadres meeting held at the end of last February paid particular attention to the question of strengthening and expanding the trade union organization, effectively promoting current activities and coping with the relentless development of our revolution. Therefore, the trade unions must make efforts to continue strengthening and broadening the organizational network throughout the country and heighten the administrative ability of trade union members so that they can correctly implement all tasks with the aim of carrying out all the 1982 economic and cultural plans stipulated by the party and state.

In order to achieve success in this matter, the trade union organization must implement the following:

1. Further disseminate and explain in depth to all workers and employees the immensely significant successes in all fields achieved by our revolution in the past, and the immediate and necessary needs of the revolution; and urge them to consistently implement all resolutions and measures put forward by the party and the front.

2. Clearly define friend from foe; do not hesitate to unmask enemies who have wormed their way into the inner circles of the localities; protect and thoroughly manage state-owned property, factories and enterprises; and, in a timely manner, foil all the enemy's perfidious maneuvers of all stripes.

3. Promote an emulation movement to increase production in all fields in each locality between groups and between machines in a correct and just way, and praise and reward individuals and units that have scored outstanding achievements.

4. Persuade, educate and urge the workers and employees to adhere to a strict ethical code and to be punctual and well disciplined in their work.

Workers at all productive units must heighten the spirit of being masters of the country, of the factories and of enterprises; deepen their sense of responsibility by strictly protecting and managing collective property, and raise the sense of economy as far as raw materials, electric power, fuel oil, spare parts and so on are concerned. They must absolutely avoid such unhealthy phenomena as waste and unprincipled behavior and resolutely punish anyone who sabotages or steals state property.

5. Through daily production, productive groups or sections must hold frequent meetings to discuss, exchange views, learn experience from each other, promote creativeness, seek to understand causes of losses and gains, and aim at always raising the quality and output of production.

6. The trade union must make efforts to take care of and improve the living conditions of workers, take measures to ensure good sanitation, protect the labor force, guarantee social security, implement a sufficient and timely distribution of the food supply, and see to it that the sale and supply of goods to workers and employees meet the limit set by the state in terms of volume, weight and quality without shortage or delay. The trade union must take care of shelter; living conditions; and improvement in vocational, professional, technical and cultural standards for workers and their families in order to encourage the workers to do their best in vigorously accelerating labor and production.

Workers and employees as a whole must unanimously strengthen and expand the trade union organization with a determination to fight, increase production and protect production. They must resolutely follow the authentic line of the KPRP and implement every point in the resolutions of the Kampuchean Federation of Trade Unions regarding the tasks of trade unions in 1982, must pledge to strengthen the worker-peasant alliance, hold aloft the banner of pure patriotism and proletarian internationalist solidarity, and particularly defend and strengthen the Kampuchean-Vietnam military solidarity forever so as to actively, massively and effectively contribute to the cause of building and defending the fatherland.

SIHANOUK DISCUSSES COALITION IN INTERVIEW

PM081625 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 28 Feb 82 p 4

[Gunnar Filseth undated interview with Prince Norodom Sihanouk: "I Must Join in the War"]

[Text] Beijing -- "I do not want war. But there is only one thing left for me to do -- I must join in the war," Prince Norodom Sihanouk said and raised his arms in a dramatic gesture. His lapdog, Meri, a Pomerian spitz, awoke briefly from its sleep on the carpet in front of him.

"For 3 years I have tried to reach an understanding with Vietnam, a reasonable compromise. Three years of patience -- completely in vain. Vietnam has rejected all my proposals, and the Soviet Union supports Vietnam. Now there is absolutely no hope. That is why we must fight and we must unite in a coalition...."

This is how Prince Sihanouk described the decision to once again begin cooperation with the Khmer Rouge -- his former partners in cooperation and his bitter enemies. The plan is to weld together the three largest anti-Vietnamese resistance groups into a sort of political and military union to increase their effectiveness. Sihanouk and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan made a framework agreement in Beijing this week.

This is a plan supported by China and a number of countries in Southeast Asia. If the plan becomes reality -- and this is far from certain -- Sihanouk will probably be proclaimed head of state in a counterregime which will take up the fight against Heng Samrin's Vietnam-supported regime in Phnom Penh.

The question is whether the "third man" -- former Prime Minister Son Sann -- will unite with the others to form the proposed three-party coalition. Like Sihanouk he is a noncommunist and refuses to cooperate with the Khmer Rouge because of the massacres they have committed.

Sihanouk has a piece of news. China has now begun to give him a little of the military aid that he made a condition for uniting with the Khmer Rouge in a coalition. In the last few days he had been supplied with automatic rifles and mortars to equip a 3,000-strong guerrilla force. Hitherto he has only had a few hundred men under arms.

"Recruitment is no problem at all," he assured me in his superbly categorical manner. If I only had the arms and the equipment I would be able to get 100,000 men to fight for me! But I have not been given any aid. Son Sann and the Khmer Rouge have been given a large amount of weapons and other things from China and other countries. But no one has been willing to give me anything...."

Sihanouk knows the reason. He and Beijing had a falling out. China did not like his attempts at compromise with Hanoi. "But I like China and I have decided that in the future I will always have good connections with China. China and ASEAN want me to be more active, play a more important role. China wants me to lead the coalition and be head of state, and I do not want to refuse China," Sihanouk said.

"But personally I am hesitant; I am very reluctant," he added thinking of future cooperation with the Khmer Rouge -- or "Democratic Kampuchea," which is the movement's official name. Sihanouk does not usually hide things, and it is clear that he views his future coalition partners -- whom he has called bloody butchers -- with as much detestation as before. "I can in no way accept the brutal methods of Democratic Kampuchea. Yes, they call themselves democratic, but they are completely undemocratic," he said with a sarcastic laugh. Sihanouk himself uses the name "Cambodia," as the country was once called.

"But what happened then should not prevent us from acting today. Today's problem is not the Khmer Rouge. Today's problem is Vietnam, it is the problem of fighting together against the Vietnamese. I want a political solution, but in order to get Vietnam to agree to a political solution, we must first fight. And when it comes to fighting it is necessary to have the Khmer Rouge as part of the coalition because they have the largest forces."

The interview lasted 2 hours, and Sihanouk received the SVENSKA DAGBLADET correspondent and a British and Japanese journalist in his palatial residence in Beijing -- the former French Embassy building, which the Chinese placed at his disposal when he came here as an exile in 1970. In recent years he has been here only sporadically, but now he is waiting until 9 March for Son Sann's arrival.

Sihanouk is and remains Sihanouk -- cascades of words, a voice which is both mirthful and full of biting irony, shrilly high-pitched. His feelings change rapdily -- the prince was moved to tears when he spoke of the good old days before the war, when he played the role of god king in the countryside and playboy and orchestra leader at home in the palace. Now he is 60.

Many people have criticized him for being capricious and vacillatory; others have admired his political balancing act. It will be a balancing act this time too -- perhaps a neck-breaking one. Sihanouk explains the allocation of roles in the planned colaition -- the Khmer Rouge are far to the left, Son Sann far to the right. "I am the coalition's center and mediator. I cannot enter a two-sided coalition with the Khmer Rouge, because the people would condemn me, they would say that things would go the way they went before. Then the Khmer Rouge pushed me to one side and the people found themselves under an incredibly cruel and despotic regime."

A question, almost as a joke: Would Sihanouk have liked to go back to his old regal authority rather than being head of state in "Democratic Kampuchea"?

The prince wanted to "play with the idea," he said, and he looked back nostalgically. "When the country was a kingdom people were not rich but they had a love of life and there were no problems with food. Cambodia was a major exporter of rice in those days. The people did not call me a dictator, they called me 'Daddy'...."

But since the kingdom fell there has only been misery -- first Lon Nol's military republic, then Pol Pot's "democratic" republic -- "the worst republic in history, in the whole history of mankind," Sihanouk cried. And now, most recently, Heng Samrin's "people's republic." Sihanouk explained: "Cambodia is a protectorate under Vietnam. Things would have been better if the country had been a protectorate under France or even the United States, for the Vietnamese are a people who like to be masters. They give the Cambodians nothing but humiliation and oppression...."

But immediately afterwards the prince did a logical about-turn -- in a way which many would find "typically Sihanouk." "I believe that the majority in Cambodia want the Vietnamese to be there, at least for a while. They are afraid that the Khmer Rouge will come back. They hate the Khmer Rouge more than the Vietnamese...."

Will a coalition of guerrilla groups have any chance at all of being a match for Vietnam? Sihanouk raised his hands in the air, deprecatingly: "We haven't a chance. We do not even have a 1-percent chance of beating Vietnam. When the United States could not manage to do so, how could we? But neither can Vietnam beat us. Our guerrillas will make it more and more troublesome for the Vietnamese to be in Cambodia; we will let them bleed every day, fight for many years, 10 years, 20 years. The people will suffer, but the Vietnamese and the Russians will suffer more. They will be like the Americans in Vietnam. One day they will begin to understand, and then we will be able to find a compromise."

Does Sihanouk see any sign of modification in the fact that the Khmer Rouge recently dissolved its political wing, the Communist Party of Kampuchea?

"That means nothing. It is tactics -- good tactics! The Khmer Rouge are very intelligent. They are very good at deceiving people sometimes. They want to hoodwink the people, to make people believe that they are no longer as brutal, that they are no longer communists, but nationalists. They can fool people in Europe and the United States, but not in their own country. We know that the Khmer Rouge are just as they were before; they are very, very communist....

"I must be very, very careful," he said. The last time he played the coalition game with the Khmer Rouge the stakes were high: "Five of my children were killed, two sons and three daughters. Fourteen of my grandchildren were killed. They were sent to the agricultural collectives. Then they disappeared without trace. And remember -- they were not opposed to the Khmer Rouge; they were in the united front with the Khmer Rouge, in the resistance movement opposed to Lon Nol and the Americans.

"We won the joint victory in April 1975 and then the Khmer Rouge decided to liquidate all the nationalists and Sihanouk supporters when peace came. Many of my relatives and colleagues were killed. One of them was Isoup Gandi, leader of the united front's Scandinavia office in Stockholm; he was tortured to death."

Sihanouk's life was spared thanks to Chinese pressure. He pointed to Meri, his dog, in front of him: "Meri is treated better than I was by the Khmer Rouge in Phnom Penh. They made me head of state. At first they wanted to use Sihanouk to make themselves look good. I was their garnish. But they kept me like a prisoner; I had no human rights. The only difference between Meri and me is that the dog enjoys human rights. It can meet journalists. I was not allowed to meet one for several years," Sihanouk said, smiling nonetheless.

MILITARY SAYS VIETNAM PLANS CHEMICAL ATTACKS

BK101314 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] The military sources in Bangkok have reported that Vietnamese forces apparently planned to use chemical weapons in their offensive against the Khmer Rouge strongholds in the Phnum Malai ranges. The sources said there were strong indications that the Vietnamese would use artillery shells containing poisonous gas in their attack on the highlands which is expected to be launched soon. Gas masks have been distributed to Vietnamese troops stationed in the area.

Meanwhile, a Khmer Rouge officer, Mit Thiap, has claimed that gas masks were found on the bodies of four Vietnamese killed in fighting on Khao Din, west of Phnum Malai, and expressed concern that chemical weapons may be used against his men.

Fifteen Khmers were taken to an International Red Cross field hospital in Ban Nong Pru to be treated for symptoms which they claim were the result of a chemical attack. The military sources have also added that the sound of sporadic fighting was heard across the border, south of Aranyaprathet, and opposite Pong Nam Ron in Chanthaburi Province. Vietnamese casualties were reported to be heavy.

THAI VILLAGE FIRED ON BY SRV-HENG SAMRIN FORCES

BK101320 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT Mar 82

[Text] Vietnamese-Heng Samrin forces in Kampuchea fired another barrage of artillery and small arms fire into the Thai district of Pong Nam Ron and 15 artillery shells landed about 200 meters from a village. The Chantaburi provincial authorities have ordered the evacuation of the women and children.

The firing of the 120 mm artillery shells at the Thai village of Bung Chanang occured at about 0300, Tuesday [9 March]. The village is inhabited by 20 families consisting of about 80 persons. Later on the same day, at about 0900 Vietnamese-Heng Samrin forces directed small arms fire at the village again.

THAILAND READY TO GRANT IMPORT CREDITS TO LAOS

BK101515 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Sublieutenant Praphat Limpraphan, deputy commerce minister, said Thailand is willing to grant long-term credits to Laos for imports from Thailand if that is what Laos desires. He said the Thai trade delegation led by Director General of the Foreign Trade Department Patchara Itsarasena, which left for Laos on 8 March, might have brought up the matter for talks with the Lao officials.

The deputy commerce minister stressed that the decision rests with Laos whether it would desire long-term credits for imports from Thailand. Thailand is already a customer of Laos for electricity. He saw no problem for Laos' imports of oil from Thailand since Laos has already been purchasing oil from Thailand.

ARMY COMMANDER PRAYUT DISCUSSES ASEAN TOUR

BK110254 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 11 Mar 82

[Thai Army Commander Gen Prayut Charumani's 10 March press conference at Don Muang Airport upon his return from touring Asean member countries]

[Text] Army Commander Gen Prayut Charumani told newsmen at Don Muang Airport yesterday evening [10 March] about his ASEAN tour. He said: [Begin Prayut recording] ASEAN wants peace for the whole region. However, if an ASEAN member is invaded, we will fully cooperate with each other in all areas to defend peace, freedom and well-being. [end Prayut recording]

Touching on the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border in Prachin Buri Province, the army commander said: [begin recording] We have nothing to do with them if they operate only inside Kampuchea. However, if they cross the border into Thailand, we will have to retaliate heavily against them. We will push them out of our country. We have successfully done that many times before. We are confident that we can prevent any border incursion. That is what I have told them, and they believe that we can do it. We have gained experience in the wars in South Korea and Vietnam. Although the result of the Vietnam war was disappointing, we have learned a lesson from that country. [end recording]

ASEAN is ready to help Thailand if it faces external aggression. The army commander said: [begin recording] We are like five houses in the same compound. If we are bullied by a hooligan, they will help us. They might not be able to send their troops to help us, but they have guns to give us. They are willing to help us because we are not a rich country. We will fight economically. We are satisfied that our good friends are willing to give us weapons to help. This is our land. It is our duty to defend it. [end recording]

KAMPUCHEAN REFUGEES TO BE MOVED INTO KAMPUCHEA

BK110227 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 11 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] A senior military officer announced yesterday that border encampments along the Thai-Kampuchean border will be "reorganized" so that all displaced Khmers, estimated at about 288,000 at the last count, would in effect be "residing in the Kampuchean territory."

The statement, representing a new policy by the Thai Government, was disclosed by Colonel Sanan Khachonklam, joint operations centre, Supreme Command.

The new move came in the wake of reports that the Thai Government was contemplating a new move to draw a new demarcation line on the Thai-Kampuchean border so that all the displaced Khmers would be considered technically living on Kampuchean, instead of Thai, territory.

Col Sanan, without elaboration, said: "Appropriate means will be employed to reorganize the border encampments to the effect that all Kampucheans would reside in the Kampuchean territory. This would be implemented step by step." Col Sanan was addressing a luncheon of the Rotary Club of Phrakhanong at the Ambassador Hotel. He estimated that about 288,000 Kampucheans are residing in various encampments along the Thai-Kampuchean border, receiving assistance from international organizations and voluntary agencies with cooperation from Thai authorities.

Observers noted that the new policy of re-marking the border line to place the encampments within Khmer territory might be a Thai design to make clear to Vietnamese and Hen Samrin troops the Thai borderline for the first time to prevent fighting spillovers in the future.

Col Sanan said that new Kampucheans fleeing into Thailand will not be admitted to holding centres. "Instead, they would be transferred to the border encampments," he said.

For 1982, several measures will be adopted to reduce the number of displaced persons in Thailand, he said. In short, efforts will be made to increase the number of Indochinese displaced persons to be resettled in third countries. In regard to Kampucheans at holding centres, however, resettlement in third countries would be permitted only for special cases such as family reunification. This is to deter the influx of more Kampucheans fleeing into Thailand," he said.

Kamphut and Sakaeo holding centres are scheduled to be closed down on Dec 23, this year, leaving only Khao I-Dang centre and Phanat Nikhom processing centre in operation in 1983, he added. Col Sanan also pointed out that Vietnamese "land people," numbering over 1,000 at the latest count, who had fled from Vietnam through Kampuchea on land will be confined in a separate area inside Nong Samet (camp NW-82).

Col Sanan also reported that the number of Khmers fleeing into Thailand was on the increase due to food shortage in Kampuchea in the past few months. "According to a report of the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), Kampuchea still needs about 750,000 tons of rice," he said. Col Sanan charged that part of the rice aid sent by sea to Kompong Som in Kampuchea had been diverted by Vietnamese authorities to Hanoi. "And another part of the rice aid shipment was used to feed Vietnamese soldiers while the rest was handed over to Heng Samrin troops. Kampucheans in the remote areas have not got any rice from the aid programme at all," he said.

The military officer reported that during the meeting of representatives from about 40 donor countries, once in New York in November, last year, and another time last month, it was agreed that direct aid to Kampuchea should be halted and that relief supplies should instead be sent to Khmers on the Thai-Kampuchean border and holding centres. "FAO has also been asked to conduct another survey to be presented to the next round of meeting in May so that the donor countries could decide whether to stick to the original decision or not. This because they want Vietnam and the Soviet Union, which have both declared their support for Kampuchea, to produce some concrete contributions in this regard," Col Sanan added.

ACTION THREATENED AGAINST VIETNAMESE REFUGEES

BK110235 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 11 Mar 82 pp 1.2

[Text] A senior official yesterday threatened to take "unilateral" action against about 50,000-60,000 Vietnamese refugees who fled here since the Dien Bien Phu era "when the time comes." National Security Council (NSC) Secretary General Squadron Leader Prasong Sunsiri told the NATION that the Vietnamese refugees cannot be allowed to stay permanently in the country. He said that Thailand had justifications to deal with the refugees unilaterally "because they are posing security problems to the country." "The longer the Vietnamese refugees continue staying here, the more they could harm the stability of the country," he said.

Prasong also said that nobody can blame Thailand for the measure to be taken against the Vietnamese refugees because the Vietnamese authorities themselves appeared reluctant to take them back. Asked to elaborate on the measure, Prasong said: "They are on my mind. I am just waiting for a good timing."

The NSC secretary general said that the Vietnamese who took refuge in the country during the French-Vietnamese fighting have been weakening the stability of Thailand in the political, economical and defence areas. "Economically, the Vietnamese can exert their influence through the enterprises they are commanding against our country," he said. He said that authorities nabbed some Vietnamese refugees on charges of supporting communist insurgents. "Their activities in this regard obviously endanger the defence of our country," he said.

He added that so far as the Vietnamese refused to negotiate the repatriation of the Vietnamese refugees to Vietnam, the Thai people would never believe in their sincerity." Prasong said that his warning against the Dien Bien Phu refugees last October had gone unheeded.

Vietnam has agreed to take back the refugees under the Rangoon agreement signed with Thailand in 1959 but the talks for the repatriation were suspended after they were postponed by Hanoi in early 1979.

Prasong had earlier said that Hanoi tried to distort the issue and put the blame on Thailand for the delay in the talks. All the Vietnamese refugees and their descendants had already signed documents to express their willingness to be repatriated, Prasong said.

Vietnam sent a team of negotiators here late 1978 but returned to Hanoi after a few rounds of futile talks. Its chief delegate later postponed indefinitely the talks which were scheduled to resume in January 1979.

CONFESSIONS OF CAPTURED PRC SEAMEN REPORTED

OW101706 Hanoi VNA in English 1446 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 10 -- "We confess having encroached upon Vietnamese waters" and "we confess having arms hidden under dining tables". These confessions came from (Chen Guanchang), captain of the Chinese boat bearing Number 108 captured on March 3, 1982, within the territorial waters of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, at a place seven nautical miles east of the Nhat Le River mouth.

At first questioning, he denied having any weapons on the boat but after the Vietnamese self-defence forces searched the boat and took out hard evidence materials, he submitted to the undeniable. The weapons included machine guns, thousands of bullets, hundreds of grenades, and several bags of spent cartridges, all with the marking "People's Republic of China".

The captain of the boat 108 tried to alleviate their crime. He said: "We admit that our ships have encroached upon the territorial waters of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. However, we wish you would add the words "because of bad weather".

He further said: "We admit having arms hidden under the dining tables. As for the spent cartridges, they are left from our shooting drills".

(Fang Kimhan), deputy captain of the same boat, also admitted that his ship had entered Vietnamese waters but he said "because this was an order from higher up we had to obey". However, the cartridge belts of heavy machine gun of the 12.7 mm calibre, the cases of AK assault rifle bullets and hand grenades are inconstestable evidence of the plan of these Chinese armed boats disguised as fishing boats to penetrate deeply into Vietnamese waters and carry out China's military design against Vietnam.

When Vietnamese boats closed in and Vietnamese militiamen patrolling the sea jumped onto the Chinese boat, the intruders pleaded that they "did not understand international signals very well" and later "we have learnt maritime navigation laws and international signals but did not remember them after a long neglect".

Before undeniable evidence (Chen Guanchang), the captain of the boat 108 had to sign a written confession admitting that his ship has "encroached upon the territorial waters of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and his ship is armed. Vietnam has acted in conformity with international maritime law and treated the captured Chinese sailors humanely. None of us has been either beaten or humiliated".

Beijing has exerted every effort to deny its hostile acts towards Vietnam. But (Huang Zhipeng), a sailor on the boat 122 (another Chinese boat) testified:

"The boat 122 was equipped with weapons and radio. We received orders from our higher authorities on March 1st and started from Peima Port on Hainan Island. On March 3, 1982, we entered Vietnamese waters, where we spotted Vietnamese fishing boats. We did not expect that the Beijing authorities has used us to further their military purposes in their anti-Vietnam plan. Having penetrated too deeply into Vietnamese waters we had to open fire first on Vietnamese fishing boats in an attempt to flee into the high sea. But we came right upon a resolute riposte. Our boat 122 was hit and set on fire and the captain was killed".

After the ship was hit by Vietnamese fire, the intruders jumped into the sea and were later rescued by Vietnamese self-defence forces even though minutes before they had hurled hand grenades into a Vietnamese boat. The survivors made a desperate attempt to flee by sticking to their blazing ship. They later told the Vietnamese authorities that after spending a day floating on the sea they were rescued by Vietnamese fishermen who took them to the coast.

NEED FOR DEFENSE FORCES IN MOUNTAINS STRESSED

BK091000 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 12 Feb 82 pp 1, 4

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN editorial: "Build Militia and Self-Defense Forces in the Mountainous Areas"]

[Text] Forest and Mountainous regions occupy a vast area of our country and play a very important role in the political, economic, security and defense domains.

The northern mountainous and forest area bordering China is the nation's frontline where the reactionary clique of the Beijing leadership conduct around-the-clock provocations and carry out sabotage activities against us, relentlessly preparing to wage an aggressive war against our country at an opportune moment. The western mountainous and forest area links with the borders of fraternal Laos and Kampuchea. Here the international reactionaries, in collusion with local reactionaries, are plotting to infiltrate and undermine us across these borders. In the Tay Nguyen mountainous region, the reactionary group, henchmen of the imperialists, are also conducting underground activities to undermine, incite hatred and sow division among the people of various nationalities and between tribesmen and delta people in order to fulfill their vile schemes.

As a result, in establishing all-people national defense in the mountainous areas, the building of firm and strong militia and self-defense forces is a basic and regular task and an urgent requirement. Only by strengthening and comprehensively improving the quality of the militia and self-defense forces in hamlets, villages, enterprises and organs can we, together with other forces, create a great and integrated strength to foil the multifaced war of sabotage being carried out by the Beijing expansionists. This will help create a base for establishing a force to defeat all the wars of aggression of the enemies.

In the northern mountainous area, especially the border districts, we must strengthen the building of militia and self-defense forces and turn them into the frontline and local forces which can promptly seek out and attack the enemy. These forces must, together with other armed forces, firmly control the border line and promptly capture all intruder commandos and scouts. When attacked by the enemy, these forces must promptly counterattack and stop the enemy's advance. They must persistently pursue and attack the enemy from the front, the flank and the rear, coordinate with and support the main force to fight the enemy triumphantly.

In building and consolidating militia and self-defense forces in the mountainous and forest areas, we must first carry out the tasks of propagating and educating the people and help each individual detachment, unit and combatant to enhance political awareness, fighting impetus and combat readiness to oppose the enemy's schemes and tactics.

By applying various lively and comprehensive forms of educating the people we will enable them to understand clearly the enemy's basic and long-term schemes, and the reactionaries' current perfidious maneuvers. This will inflame the people's hatred for the enemy, encourage them to strengthen their vigilance to resolutely oppose the enemy and get rid of all illusion and confusion which may influence them to fall victim to the enemy.

On the basis of educating and promoting a sense of mastery among the people of various nationalities, we must encourage young men and women who meet the desired political and physical standards to join the militia and self-defense forces in order to make the personnel strength of militia and self-defense forces in each hamlet and village proportionate with the population.

Training a contingent of militia commanding cadres from among various nationalities is the key and decisive factor and also an urgent requirement in the struggle to further develop the militia and self-defense forces in the mountainous areas.

In coordination with other organs concerned, provincial and district military organs must formulate plans for training these cadres in the immediate future and on a long-term basis. Efforts should be made to ensure that necessary material bases are available and effective measures are adopted so that training activities can be organized and carried out uniformly and that, after a certain period of time, a firm and strong contingent of militia and self-defense commanding cadres at the grassroots level -- composed mainly of local people of various nationalities -- can be formed. It is necessary to select a number of ethnic soldiers -- those who will be discharged from the army shortly -- and arrange for them to undergo training in local military work before assigning them to serve as commanding cadres of the militia and self-defense forces in the localities.

In combination with the plan to regulate the labor forces provided for the mountainous areas by certain provinces in the delta region, military organs in mountainous localities can draw up their own plans for building militia and self-defense forces in various new economic zones, ensuring that forces are available to stand ready for combat and to maintain security and order in these new economic zones as soon had they have been developed.

Military tasks in the mountainous regions require that each hamlet should set up a militia squad or platoon. This must be done in conjunction with local production tasks. Larger-scale militia organizations can be set up for industrial enterprises, construction sites, forestry sites and state farms. We must not build a combined militia unit for two or three hamlets, thus causing trouble in the livelihood, activities and management of militia forces in these localities. We must see to it that each hamlet has its own strong militia unit, capable of ensuring security and order in the hamlet. This will help all hamlets of a village to depend on the support each other in their militia activities. The fact that state farms, forestry sites, industrial enterprises and state organs are located in the mountainous areas helps strengthen the latter with their self-defense forces. Local military organs must pay due attention to developing the strength of these forces in such a way as to ensure their close coordination with the local militia forces in each combat position and on the district level.

By doing so, mountainous localities will further strengthen their local national defense and security tasks and, at the same time, create favorable conditions for developing and protecting production and building and defending firmly the most strategic areas of the country in the present situation.

NHAN DAN URGES INCREASE IN INDUSTRIAL CROPS

[Nhan Dan 10 March editorial: "Plant Industrial Crops"]

[Summary] After a slump the production of industrial crops is now picking up. "The area under short-term industrial crops in 1981 increased by 1.8 percent over 1980, with the production of various main crops such as sugarcane, peanuts, sesame, jute and rush going up in terms of cultivated area and yield as well as output volume. With a twofold increase in output, soybean is now considered by various regions as one of the key short-term industrial crops. In the south, long-term industrial crops such as rubber, coffee and tea are being restored, and they have, in the initial period, turned out a fairly large marketable output. Fruit trees such as oranges, pineapples and bananas have been vigorously developed to become major sources of export goods."

The movement to reorganize production, coupled with the economic policies newly promulgated by the state, the improvement of managerial work and the application of the product-contract system, has encouraged planters to work more enthusiastically. "However, the production of industrial crops has generally developed unevenly and still falls short of demand and actual capability. The slow rate of area enlargement, meager yields and poor product quality have made it impossible to achieve the annual plan norms for total output and export."

This situation stems chiefly from the fact that some policies and managerial methods do not really have the effect of promoting production and productive establishments and workers engaged in industrial crop cultivation are not appropriately rewarded. This has often led to a situation in which planters replace industrial crops with grain or other crops that are more profitable.

Since the industrial crop norms set for this year and the third 5-year plan are far greater than those of previous years, calling for a 49-percent increase in area over 1980 and high increases in the output of main crops -- 200 percent for soybeans, 25 percent for peanuts, 32 percent for sugarcane and 50 percent for jute -- we must simultaneously enforce a series of effective measures designed to bring into full play the great potentials concerning land, labor and the existing material-technical bases. Reality shows that every agricultural area in our country can plant certain companion industrial crops according to the local soil conditions. Setting up areas specialized in industrial crop cultivation is a good way of practicing intensive cultivation and multicropping, enlarging the cultivated area and, at the same time, ensuring a steady supply of large quantities of products. Meanwhile, planting industrial crops in scattered plots of lands is also an important practice that should be broadly encouraged to meet local demands and directly improve the living conditions of the planters' families.

The policies designed to promote production play a decisive role in developing industrial crops. It is necessary to review them and discover bottlenecks and irrationalities for prompt revision in the spirit of ensuring harmony among the interests of the state, the collectives and the workers. In particular, attention must be given to providing sufficient grain for industrial crop planters and appropriately setting prices for every type of product.

VALUE OF LOCAL INDUSTRY PRODUCTION RISES

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 11 -- By the end of 1980 the local industries in Vietnam had 1,900 state-run enterprises employing over 300,000 workers, in addition to about 12,000 small industry and handicraft cooperatives and production teams with a work force totalling 1.5 million. Last year, the value of local industrial and handicraft production totalled 5.4 billion dong, representing a four percent increase over the previous year and accounting for almost 65 percent of the gross industrial output of the country. Seventy percent of this amount came from the small industries and handicrafts.

Most of the local industrial products are consumer goods. Exports accounted for 15 percent of the output value of the local industries. The main production lines consist of primary necessities such as fish, salt, wood, mosquito netting, towels, sleeping mats, silk, hand tools, bicycles, lime, bricks and tiles.... New lines have been added recently such as silk-threading machines, metal-drilling machines, freezers, electric motors, table-tennis bats, car-brake oil, firebricks....

From 1976 to 1981 the local industries yearly produced about 20 million hand tools, 200,000 carts, 180,000 bicycles, 500,000 tonnes of cement, ten million pairs of sleeping mats, 250,000 porcelain articles, 100,000 tonnes of salt, 80 million metres of cloth and silk, 100 million metres of mosquito netting, 20,000 tonnes of paper....

The developing of local industries has helped to boost the district economy. The output value of industrial production, which occupied a negligible percentage in the district economy in the past, has now risen to ten per cent. About 85 per cent of the agricultural co-ops in many Red River Delta provinces have taken up handicrafts as side-line occupations. These occupations are employing about fifteen per cent of the workforce and producing an amount of goods accounting for 60 percent of the yearly agricultural industrial output value of these co-ops.

SUZUKI TO DISCUSS INTEREST RATES WITH REAGAN

OW101119 Tokyo KYODO in English 1106 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 10 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Wednesday he will seek modification of the U.S. high interest policy when he meets with President Ronald Reagan in Paris in June.

Suzuki told a meeting of the House of Councillors Budget Committee that U.S. interest policy is having a serious effect on the world economy. He said he will urge President Reagan to modify the policy when the two of them attend a seven-nation economic summit scheduled to be held in Paris in June.

Suzuki said he would discuss the matter with French President Francois Mitterrand when he comes to Tokyo next month, so that Japan may act in concert with European nations affected by the U.S. policy. He added that he also plans to hold consultations with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on the subject.

SAKURAUCHI, ABE VIEW U.S. TRADE FRICTION IN DIET

[Text] Tokyo, March 11 (KYODO) -- Japan has made no firm commitment to the United States on when it would announce a new package of measures to help ease trade friction between the two nations, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Thursday.

Sakurauchi said the United States has called for prompt Japanese actions during a two-day trade subcommittee meeting which ended here Wednesday. U.S. trade negotiators told newsmen Wednesday that the United States hopes Japan will announce a comprehensive package within three months. Sakurauchi Thursday told the Diet there is a growing feeling among the Americans that the Japanese market is closed and unfair, although the U.S. Government itself is opposed to protectionism. Replying to an opposition party questioner, the foreign minister said that American sentiment critical of Japan would be taken into consideration in deciding the package.

Sakurauchi is scheduled to visit Washington March 20 for talks with U.S. officials on trade and other issues pending between the two nations. The Japanese Government earlier indicated that these measures would be decided before the next summit of major industrial democracies to be held in France June 4-6.

International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe also told the Diet that the trade friction would not be solved through Japanese efforts alone. Abe said he would insist that the U.S. too make the necessary efforts.

During the two-day trade subcommittee meeting, the United States called for Japan's continued liberalization of its market for competitive American goods. The negotiators apparently made little progress, leaving many issues for further discussion.

Japan has been under fire from abroad for its huge trade surpluses and been asked to open up its market wider. Japan posted a record dollar 13.4 billion with the European Common Market in 1981, according to Japanese figures.

AUTO EXPORTS TO U.S. TO BE SET AT 1981 LEVEL

OW121027 Tokyo KYODO in English 0915 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 12 (KYODO) -- The Ministry of International Trade and Industry plans to set the volume of Japanese car exports to the United States in fiscal 1982 at the same level as in fiscal 1981 -- 1.68 million units, ministry sources said Friday.

MITI, the sources said, will notify the U.S. Government of this policy shortly -- probably by the end of this month.

The sources said the ministry decided on this policy after James Murphy, deputy assistant U.S. trade representative, visited the ministry for an exchange of views on the 1982 outlook for car demand in the United States and other related matters.

At the conference, Murphy said the U.S. Commerce Department estimates this year's U.S. car demand at 9 million units. But, he said, the actual demand may turn out to be lower if the U.S. economy does not recover.

Under such circumstances, the MITI sources said, the ministry decided Japan cannot but hold down its car shipments to the United States in fiscal 1982, the second year of a three-year Japan-U.S. auto trade agreement, to the same level as in the first year ending this month.

SUZUKI-PERTINI MEETING FOCUSES ON WORLD ECONOMY

OW101257 Tokyo KYODO in English 1248 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 10 (KYODO) -- Italian President Alessandro Pertini and Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday agreed that the Paris summit of seven industrial democracies in June should focus on how to revitalize the world economy, Japanese officials reported.

During an hour-long meeting at the government guesthouse here, Suzuki said the world economy is plagued with recession, unemployment and other economic ills. The summit, therefore, should discuss in concrete terms how to revitalize the global economy, Suzuki was quoted as telling Pertini, who arrived Tuesday for a week-long visit.

Suzuki said the summit conference should also discuss how to promote joint investments and industrial cooperation among the participants -- the United States, Britain, France, Italy, Canada, West Germany and Japan.

The officials said the Italian President basically agreed with what Suzuki said but told the Japanese prime minister that Italy is unable to engage in joint investments with other nations because of Italy's high inflation rate.

JOINT STATEMENT ISSUED WITH ITALY ON POLAND

OW120911 Tokyo KYODO in English 0849 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 12 (KYODO) -- Japan and Italy Friday stressed the need of "unity and cooperation" among the Western nations to deal with the Polish issue.

Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and his Italian counterpart Emilio Colombo in a joint statement "confirmed that unity and cooperation are very important to deal with the Polish problem." The statement followed regular bilateral governmental consultations which took place here Thursday on the occasion of Italian President Sandro Pertini's state visit to Japan.

The two countries called on the Polish military regime to promptly end the "present abnormal state" in the country, referring to martial law and suspension of the independent trade union movement. Sakurauchi and Colombo shared a similar perception that the current situation in Poland not only affects East-West relations in Europe but also could jeopardize the international situation in general. The foreign ministers also urged the Soviet Union which they said is responsible for the Polish situation, to show self-restraint.

The two ministers said world peace and security must be strengthened on the basis of effective and verifiable arrangements on disarmament and arms control, the statement said.

In regard to the Middle East, they stressed the need to recognize the right to exist of all nations in that region, as well as the right of self-determination of the Palestinian people.

The two foreign ministers expressed their hope that all parties concerned would show readiness to negotiate a peaceful settlement of the Middle East dispute.

Sakurauchi and Colombo emphasized the importance of maintaining and strengthening the free, multilateral trade system.

Further Report on Statement

OW120033 Tokyo KYODO in English 0011 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 12 (KYODO) -- Japan and Italy shared a common view that Soviet interventions in third countries, including Poland, and its military buildup efforts pose a threat to world peace, Japanese officials said Thursday. The two countries agreed to promote solidarity and cooperation between Japan, Western Europe and the United States over sanctions against the Soviet Union, the officials said.

Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and his Italian counterpart Emilio Colombo reached the agreement at a four-hour meeting here late Thursday night, the officials said. The foreign ministers also agreed that Western Europe should expand exports to Japan to rectify the current trade imbalance which is now in Japan's favor. Japan posted a record dollar 10.3 billion trade surplus with the European Common Market in 1981.

Sakurauchi and Colombo exchanged views in depth on Japan-Europe dialogue, East-West relations, the Middle East, the Asian situation and bilateral ties at the meeting, the sixth Japan-Italy foreign ministers' regular consultation, the officials said. On Japan-Europe dialogue, the foreign ministers agreed to promote closer discussions between them, the officials said. Sakurauchi and Colombo reached an accord to work out a comprehensive settlement of the Middle East issue. They condemned Israel for having created fresh tensions and difficulties after the Jewish state annexed the Golan Heights in December last year, they said.

On bilateral relations, Japan and Italy agreed to cooperate in the field of science and technology, they added. Colombo arrived in Japan Tuesday for a week-long visit, accompanying Italian President Sandro Pertini who is a state guest.

JSP TO SEND ANTINUCLEAR REPRESENTATIVES TO EUROPE

OW110913 Tokyo KYODO in English 0837 GMT 11 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 11 (KYODO) -- The Japan Socialist Party decided at a meeting of its Central Executive Committee Thursday to send Chairman Ichio Asukata and other leaders to Europe later this month to strengthen the international antinuclear and disarmament movement.

The mission will visit France, West Germany, Sweden and Britain for about 10 days from March 23. It will exchange views on promoting international antinuclear movement with French President Francois Mitterrand, Chairman Willy Brandt of West Germany's Social Democratic Party, Chairman Olaf Palme of Sweden's Social Democratic Labor Party and Chairman Dingle Foot of the British Labor Party.

The Socialist mission will then formally invite these European socialist leaders to attend an international disarmament meeting it is scheduled to hold in Tokyo in May. On April 1-2, Asukata will attend a meeting of Socialist International leaders in Bonn to introduce his party's proposal for disarmament.

The party has already agreed with the Labor Parties of Australia and New Zealand on establishment of a nonnuclear zone in Asia and the Pacific region, and with North Korea's Workers Party to create a similar zone in Northeast Asia. Through the talks with Brandt and Palme, both advocates of nonnuclear zones in Europe, and other European leaders, Asukata wants to unite the European movements and similar campaigns in the Asian region.

SK100719 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0412 GMT 10 Mar 82

The meeting was attended by Comrade So Chol, member of the Political Bureau, and chairman of the Control Committee of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea; Comrade Ho Chong-suk, secretary of the C.C., WPK, and Presidium member of the C.C., the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland [DFRF]; Chong Sin-hyok, chairman of the C.C., the Chondoist Chongu Party; Yo Yon-ku, director of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Democratic front for the Reunification of the Fatherland; and other cadres as well as working people, youth and students in the city.

DFRF's Ho Chong-suk Speech

[Speech by Ho Chong-suk, secretary of the DPRK KWP Central Committee and Presidium member of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland [DFRF], at 9 March Pyongyang mass rally denouncing "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises -- recorded]

[Text] Comrades, today a grave situation in which a new war can break out at any moment is being created in the southern part of our fatherland due to the frantic war-provocation maneuvers by the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their stooge, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique.

As is known, the U.S. imperialists have been staging large-scale war-exercise rackets codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" for nearly a month from 13 February, making our republic a target of their attack.

According to the official announcement of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, forces numbering 161,600 are mobilized in these exercises, including U.S. troops occupying South Korea. U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine units from various military bases on the U.S. mainland and the Pacific including Okinawa, Hawaii, Guam and the Philippines; the South Korean puppet army; and a large quantity of combat equipment. The exercises will last until 26 April.

On 13 February, troops of the U.S. 2d Division stationed in South Korea and 100,000 puppet troops launched an operation. The advance unit of the U.S. 3d Marines Division in Okinawa flew into South Korea from Kadena air force base. Combat troops of the U.S. 7th Infantry Division stationed in the western United States will be the main force in these military exercises; and the U.S. 25th Infantry Division, stationed in Hawaii, is deployed in the operational area.

The U.S. imperialists also mobilized in these exercises the military personnel and combat equipment of various divisions belonging to the Rapid Deployment Force. They mobilized the C-141, known as a transport aircraft with the longest flying range; Boeing 747's; and six large transport ships, including the "Mercury," and other ships.

The strategic Air Command of U.S. Air Force and tactical air units stationed in the Pacific, and scores of ships, including the notorious U.S. carrier "Midway," the main vessel of the U.S. Seventh Fleet, are assembling along the coast of South Korea in accord with the U.S. imperialists' plan, and a large quantity of operational equipment is being introduced in the exercises. What is noteworthy in these military exercises, in which such large forces and modern military equipment are mobilized, is that the U.S. imperialists and their stooges are preparing in earnest for a nuclear war in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists are hurling into the military exercises massive numbers of U.S. Air Force and Marine personnel specializing in nuclear war as well as special service personnel.

According to a report by the information office at Iwakuni Air Force Base, some 45 aircraft belonging to the U.S. 7th Marine air wing stationed at Iwakuni, including A-4 Skyhawks capable of nuclear attack, were mobilized for the military operation 25 February. Foreign news reports expressed concern over the strong possibility of participation in these exercises by the members of the MWWU-1, a unit specializing in nuclear weapons belonging to this unit.

The U.S. imperialists are hurling into the military rehearsals nuclear weapons belonging to U.S. troops occupying South Korea and several hundred missiles with nuclear warheads and troops of the unit specializing in nuclear weapons belonging to the U.S. 3rd Marine Division in Okinawa. They are daily sending to the operational theaters modern F-15's and F-16's capable of carrying nuclear shells and bombs and strategic planes. What is noteworthy about the current exercises is that they are aggressive war exercises presuming an all-out attack on our republic.

When the airlift and deployment operations -- the first part of the three-stage exercise -- are completed, the U.S. imperialists plan a genuine joint operation of U.S. troops and the South Korean puppet army from 26 March to 2 April. According to what has been announced, in this second stage they will culminate the current military exercise by staging an overall attack operation, a landing operation, paratroop operation and close support operation, assuming our republic to be the target of their ground, sea and air attacks.

According to foreign news reports, at that time U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger will come to powder-reeking South Korea under the pretext of attending a joint military council meeting. We must direct our keen attention to the fact that such a trip to South Korea by this bellicose element who plans and executes the aggressive war policy of the U.S. imperialists closely resembles that of Dulles, the notorious war merchant, who sneaked into South Korea on the eve of the 25 June war and checked the final stage of preparations for a northward war of invasion along the 38th parallel.

Judging from all indications, the current war racket called "Team Spirit 1982" is not a repetition of the usual exercises which have been staged consecutively for the past 7 years since 1976, but a new test war and a preliminary nuclear war for the completion of nuclear war preparations in Korea and the invasion of our republic at any time they please. In fact, nobody can guarantee that this unprecedentedly large-scale war exercise staged with many nuclear weapons will not escalate into a full-scale nuclear war against our republic.

Because of the reckless war-exercise racket staged by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique, the situation in our country is extremely tense. This is exactly the opposite of the aspiration for peace and peaceful reunification of our people and the peace-loving peoples in the world. Needless to say, it a new war breaks out in Korea it will cause great losses and disasters not only to the Korean people but also the peoples in neighboring countries and in various countries of the world.

At a time when we are doing everything possible for peace and the peaceful reunification of the fatherland and when the voices calling for enactment of the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] and convocation of the 100-man joint conference are heard among the Korean compatriots at home and abroad, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military hooligans are leading the situation to the brink of war by staging a reckless war-exercise racket. This is a criminal act which is incompatible with peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea.

Unable to suppress national indignation over the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique, who are unabashedly committing criminal maneuvers to provoke war against us by staging the adventurous military exercise called "Team Spirit 1982", on behalf of those attending this rally, I sternly denounce the war exercise, regarding it as a premeditated, provocative act to ignite a nuclear war in Korea and a serious criminal act disturbing and threatening peace in the Far East and the world at large. [applause]

Comrades, the military exercise racket called"Team Spirit 1982" being staged by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets is not a simple military exercise but a result of the policy against Korea of the U.S. imperialists, who are trying to annex all of Korea while keeping South Korea as a colony and military base.

The vast number of troops participating in this military exercise and the aggressive character of all the operations using our republic as their target show clearly what the U.S. imperialists' purpose in this military exercise is. The U.S. imperialists, while occupying South Korea with military forces and having opposed the reunification of our country for 37 years, have been strengthening their policy of aggression and war against our people.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The forcible occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists and their policy of aggression are the source of all our national misery, the fundamental obstacle to our nation's reunification and a catalyst of war in Korea.

Since they sneaked into South Korea, the U.S. imperialists, while pursuing a wicked goal of keeping South Korea as their colony and dominating Korea and the world by taking advantage of South Korea's strategic position, have turned the southern part into a powder magazine and a military beachhead. Recently the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war against Korea has reached a grave stage. Shouting about superiority and rebuilding a strong America, the current U.S. rulers are entering the road of military adventurism in an attempt to threaten and bring other countries to their knees. They are using the Korean Peninsula as an important testing ground for executing this aggressive world strategy.

The reason the U.S. imperialists prattle that the function of the U.S. troops stationed in South Korea must be strengthened, frequently stressing the strategic importance of the Korean Peninsula, is that the Korean Peninsula is the source of the next world war. This clearly shows the vicious intention of the U.S. imperialists.

Repealing the formal troop-withdrawal plan in order to achieve their aggressive goals, the U.S. imperialists, with a plan to strengthen the attack capability of the U.S. troops occupying South Korea and of the puppet army, are augmenting the armed forces and modernizing their equipment.

Last March, the U.S. imperialists deployed six modern A-10 close support aircraft to South Korea for the first time in the Far East region. In all, they are planning to deploy 24 A-10's to South Korea by next March. The U.S. imperialists are intensifying military aid to South Korea.

On 17 February, the U.S. Defense Department announced that 170 modified Hawk missiles and 723 rockets will be transferred to the South Korean puppet army. And on 1 March, it submitted to congress a special plan designed to transfer or sell to the South Korean puppets $2 billion worth of ammunition and other war supplies quickly in case of a contingency. At the same time, the U.S. imperialists are trying to supply the puppets 36 modern F-16 fighter-bombers, 1,000 M-550 amphibious tanks and some destroyers. They also are assisting the puppets in the expansion of their military facilities and in the production of helicopters. The U.S. imperialists are even dragging the Japanese reactionaries into their aggressive war policies.

Studies by the U.S. and Japanese reactionaries of emergency situations in the Far East are a plot to drag the Japanese armed forces of aggression into a new war against Korea by establishing a tripartite military alliance system of the United States, Japan and South Korea. Following the U.S. imperialists' policy of war, the Japanese reactionaries are accelerating a military buildup and increasing their share of the defense burden, thus rapidly advancing along the road of militarization.

Praising the U.S. imperialists' forcible occupation of South Korea and their support of the military buildup of the South Korean puppet army and clamoring about the aggressive doctrine called unity between Japan and South Korea for security, the Japanese reactionaries are strengthening military collusion with the South Korean puppets and supporting the war industry in South Korea on a large scale.

Most of the U.S. forces participating in the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise are from U.S. military bases in Japan. The bosses of the Japanese Self-Defense Forces are also actively participating in this exercise. This shows that the Japanese reactionaries are actively participating in the U.S. imperialists' war schemes.

The schemes by the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique for a new war in South Korea have entered a more dangerous stage.

A war maniac tamed by the U.S. imperialists, traitor Chon Tu-hwan has accelerated a military buildup and preparations for a new war since he seized power with a bayonet, openly declaring confrontation with us. Noisily clamoring about all-out security and cultivation of national strength, the Chon Tu-hwan ring today is desperately trying to increase the military strength of the puppet army, build more military bases, accelerate modernization of the South Korean Army and strengthen the war industry. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is increasing not only the military strength of the puppet army but also the military strength of the reserve forces. It has bound all people in South Korea, from teenagers and women to persons in their 80's, under military organizations and has forced them to receive military training. It has thus mobilized all available human and material resources for war preparations.

Since they seized power, the South Korean rulers have sharply increased the military budget. This year they will spend 3.29 trillion won on the military, an increase of 21 percent over the previous year. They are not only purchasing lethal weapons from foreign countries with taxes plundered from the people but are also importing large amounts of war-industry facilities and equipment to produce lethal weapons.

Chon Tu-hwan, who was the first to visit the United States as soon as his new U.S. boss appeared and who begged for permanent occupation by the U.S. imperialist aggression forces of South Korea, is committing an unbearable criminal act of handing the land of South Korea to the aggressors to use for their nuclear war exercise. Describing "Team Spirit 1982" as an exercise for peace, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is welcoming the U.S. expeditionary forces as if they were apostles of peace. Furthermore, it is revealing its scandalous nature without hesitation by offering numerous young women to the butchers of the aggression forces.

On 1 March traitor Chon Tu-hwan roamed about the frontline units of the puppet army in the west sector all day long. He not only inspired war hysteria among the officers and men of the units deployed in "Team Spirit 1982" but also openly encouraged them to impose war disasters on fellow countrymen.

Because of the indiscreet war schemes by the South Korean rulers, the dark clouds of war hang over our country today, and more difficult obstacles have been created on the road to the country's reunification. For the South Korea bellicose elements to talk about peaceful reunification, pilot projects and so forth is a deception and a preposterous act, when they have reduced South Korea to a field of power-seeking war exercises.

For the South Korean puppets to clamor about dialogue and reunification is a trick to conceal their true color and to mislead public opinion into thinking they are actually concerned about peace and peaceful reunification.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is the murderer who brutally massacred countless numbers of fellow countrymen who were demanding democratization and the peaceful reunification of the country. Therefore, he has already lost the political and moral qualifications to attend a dialogue discussing the reunification question of the country, an important issue for the nation.

The war-exercise rackets staged by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges in South Korea have become grave obstacles not only to peace in the nation and peaceful reunification but also to the development of democracy in South Korean society. In South Korea today, the military fascist dictatorial system has been further strengthened and the people's democratic freedom has been mercilessly trampled because of the policy of war of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring.

Recently, the South Korean rulers staged a farcial commutation of sentences of some political prisoners, including Kim Tae-chung, and clamored as if they were bestowing a great favor on them. But this is no more than a deceptive drama to soothe the strong protest at home and abroad against the illegal arrests and imprisonments of those demanding democracy and freedom and to allay public opinion demanding their immediate and unconditional release.

While staging such a deceptive drama, they are at the same time wantonly arresting and detaining youths, students and patriots who demand democracy and peaceful reunification, subjecting them to murderous trials and imposing heavy penalties upon them. The Chon Tu-hwan ring has gone so far as to stretch its fascist and oppressive claws overseas, thus resorting to unprecedented anticommunist, fascist schemes. This is clearly shown by the fact that the South Korean puppets recently fabricated the so-called international assassination conspiracy incident and are waging anticommunist rackets by deliberately linking this with us. Their policy is totally different from ours -- which stipulates that the masses are the masters of, and decide, everything. If there is an assassination conspiracy, it has nothing to do with us. This must be a plot taking place within the South Korean ruling circles, which adopts terrorism and assassination as its profession, as shown by the murder of the former dictator.

The fact that the South Korean puppets fabricated a new assassination conspiracy incident and are deliberately linking this with us is a foolish slanderous drama aimed at repressing the sentiment for national reunification through collaboration with communists and the antidictator spirit and at inspiring the North-South confrontation.

All facts show that the South Korean ruling faction is a war maniac relying on outside forces and running amok with war maneuvers, a vicious enemy against reunification pursuing the nation's permanent division and a fascist tyrant who violently infringes upon human rights and democracy. All these criminal maneuvers waged by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique in South Korea today clearly prove that they do not want dialogue and peaceful reunification in Korea and that they only advance along the road of confrontation and war.

Despite such a situation, the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys are viciously slandering us, loudly babbling about a threat of southward invasion and a balance of forces, just like a thief crying "Stop thief!" However, their outcries about a threat of southward invasion and a balance of forces are a sophistry aimed at justifying the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their troop reinforcement maneuvers in South Korea and at diverting the attention of the world's people.

We have made clear many times that we have no intention of invading the South, but take as our basic principle the resolution of the question of national reunification in a peaceful manner. The world's people know very well that we are only devoted to peaceful construction. Nevertheless, the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys are loudly talking about the groundless theory of a threat of southward invasion and balance. Their cries are a clumsy drama for concealing their criminal scheme to increase the threat of northward invasion, while running about feverishly in South Korea for the provocation of a war.

The U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, the Chon Tu-hwan clique, cannot conceal the criminal nature of their policy of war or their true color as bellicose elements with any sophistry and slander. The U.S. imperialists must promptly stop their grave war gamble, which is being carried out behind a false signboard and is threatening peace in Korea and the world. They must give up their aggressive designs on our country and get out without delay, taking along nuclear weapons and other weapons of destruction shipped into South Korea. [shouting of slogan: "Let us sternly condemn the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique's anticommunist rackets!"]

The Japanese reactionaries should not follow the U.S. imperialists' policy of war aggravating tension on the Korean Peninsula. They should stop encouraging the South Korean puppets.

The Chon Tu-Hwan group, engrossed in a frantic war clamour for murdering fellow countrymen hand in glove with outside forces, must stop at one the criminal war maneuvers, give up fascist repression and step down from power without delay as demanded by all the South Korean people. [shouting of slogans: "We sternly condemn the new war provocation manuevers by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tus-hwan clique!" "We sternly denounce the anticommunist confrontation rackets by the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique!" and "Let us resolutely crush the two Koreas plot by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique!"]

Workers, farmers, students, intellectuals and other people from all walks of life in South Korea should courageously rise in a nationwide anti-U.S. and anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle to drive out the U.S. imperialists aggressors -- the mortal enemy causing various misfortunes and calamities by instigating such a murderer as the Chon Tu-hwan clique, after sneaking into South Korea wearing the mask of a supporter -- and to crush the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, filthy national traitor, fascist hangman, warmonger and national splittist.

Comrades, today, all the people in the northern half of the republic are confronted with grave and glorious tasks to step up socialist construction while reliably safeguarding the socialist fatherland and the revolutionary gains against the fanatic new war provocation maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys.

All workers should remain faithful to the chuche revolutionary cause to the end in rock-firm unity around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center. We should vigorously accelerate the chuche orientation of the entire society and the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture, by upholding the programmatic report by the respected and beloved leader at the Sixth KWP Congress and the militant tasks put forward in his New Year's message. All workers, in particular, should register brilliant labor exploits on all fronts of socialist construction so as to greet the 70th birthday of the great leader as the greatest national festival and a grand political celebration.

We should make full preparations and heighten revolutionary vigilance so that we can smash the enemies at one blow if the aggressors dare trigger a war against us. Only victory and glory lie before us as we advance upholding the great leader and following the wise leadership of the glorious party center.

Let us all rise up more vigorously in the sacred cause for the complete victory of socialism and achievement of the independent reunification of the fatherland in firm unity around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, peerless patriot and national hero, and the glorious party center. [shouting of slogans: "The U.S. imperialists and their lackeys should immediately stop the "Team Spirit 1982" war rackets!", "Let us achieve the historic cause of national reunification through the unified strength of the entire nation!"]

NODONG SINMUN HITS SOUTH'S REPORTED RICE SCANDAL

SK120614 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2352 GMT 11 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 12 March commentary: "Misdeeds Are Being Constantly Exposed"]

[Text] Recently, the U.S. Rice Growers Association exposed the fact that a fellow rice exporter sold rice to South Korea at a higher than market price and paid kickbacks to the South Korean puppets to compensate.

According to a report, Pacific International Rice Mills Inc., concluding an agreement to ship 100,000 tons of rice to South Korea last year at a cost 33 percent higher than the international market price, paid kickbacks amounting to $6 million. It agreed to ship 130,000 tons of rice in February and march this year in the same manner and to share the difference between the selling price and the international market price with the puppets.

The incident of unlawful import of U.S. rice exposed by U.S. dealers has stirred up great trouble among the South Korean ruling circles. At the 10 March session of the puppet National Assembly a motion was put forward to demand an explanation of the truth of the incident and heated discussions continued until 0200 the next morning. The puppet minister of agriculture and fisheries and the administrator of the Office of Supply, trying to explain the incident, were engrossed in evading their responsibility by saying that the foreign reports about illegal rice transactions are groundless, that an investigation indicated no irregularities or bribery involved in this incident, that we should not be involved in U.S. dealers' machinations and so forth.

The puppets, for fear of exposure of the truth of the incident, rejected a resolution calling for formation of a special parliamentary committee to inquire into the truth of the incident and hastily closed the session of the puppet National Assembly. This is a stereotyped trick by those bothered by their conscience.

This is not the first time that a scandal involving illegal imports of U.S. rice has been exposed. A sales contract between the U.S. dealers and the South Korean puppets, specifying that the South Korean puppets would buy the U.S. rice at $499.90 a ton when it cost no more than $350 per ton in the market at that time, already had caused due suspicion in U.S. social circles.

Letters demanding investigation of the facts in the transaction were sent to the U.S. Department of Justice and the Department of Agriculture. In November last year, 113 U.S. congressmen sent a similar letter to the U.S. Government and the South Korean puppets. However, neither the U.S. Government nor the South Korean puppets made any response to the letters up to now. For fear of an uncontrollable development of events when facts about the rice transaction incident became known to public opinion, the Chon Tu-hwan clique sent subordinates to the United States as soon as it received the letter. It had them bribe influential persons in the political and journalistic circles, waging behind-the-scenes deals to conceal the truth of the incident.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique's behind-the-scenes maneuvers to deal with the situation and its phony excuses in the puppet National Assembly show, even without disclosure by the U.S. Rice Growers Association, that the illegal transaction over U.S. rice is a premeditated fraud designed by the Chon Tu-hwan clique to embezzle the national treasury and conspire with the U.S. rice exporters to receive kickbacks.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique loudly raves about new politics, reform of state affairs, elimination of corruption and so forth. However, it is engaged in irregular and corrupt activities in a more shameless manner than any other predecessor puppet in South Korea. All the illegal profiteering by the authorities, such as the embezzlement of the Kim Chong-pil political fund, the incident of the $500,000 illegal bribery, the incident of low-quality heating briquettes and so forth, which caused public sensations in South Korea, occurred after Chon Tu-hwan came to power.

The nature of the illegal rice import is ever-more vicious because the Chon Tu-hwan clique committed this crime by abusing the people's funds deposited in the national treasury due to its desire to sucure kickbacks. It is an intolerable treachery to commit internatonal fraud by conspiring with foreign merchants. As long as such impostors remain in South Korea, the South Korean people cannot escape misfortunes and calamities. Today, businesses are going bankrupt, the streets are overflowing with the unemployed, people suffer from price hikes and corruption and irregularities are becoming more serious in South Korea. This is the result of the puppets' reactionary rule.

The South Korean people will never tolerate the Chon Tu-hwan clique's filthy criminal acts. The Chon Tu-hwan clique should reveal to the public the truth about the illegal import of U.S. rice, apologize to the people and step down from power.

Expressing his thanks to the mayor and the citizens who had organized the meeting and warmly welcomed him, Comrade Yi Chong-ok conveyed the most ardent friendly greetings of the Korean people to the Guyanese people. He said: Though the two peoples are separated geographically from each other, their minds are closely linked. The beautiful flowers of friendship between our two countries which were personally planted and cultivated by the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song and respected President Comrade Linden Forbes Sampson Burnham have been brought into fuller blossom on a new, higher stage through a historic meeting of the leaders of the two countries in Pyongyang in April 1978.

Today the Guyanese people under the correct leadership of the People's National Congress and the Government of Guyana, headed by their outstanding leader Comrade Linden Forbes Sampson Burnham, are striving to achieve national unity and build a new Guyana, independent and prosperous, by building cooperative socialism, frustrating repeated subversive activities and sabotages of the imperialists and their stooges. The Korean people sincerely rejoice, as over their own, over all the successes registered by the Guyanese people in their struggle for consolidating national independence and building a new prospering Guyana, successfully overcoming all difficulties and trials on the way of their advance.

The Korean people hope that the Guyanese people will gain greater successes in their struggle to implement the decisions to be adopted at the 4th People's National Congress.

Upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people are vigorously struggling to achieve the grand program for socialist construction set forth at the sixth KWP Congress and to expedite the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland under the wise leadership of the glorious party center.

The Korean people are grateful to the People's National Congress of Guyana and the government and people of the cooperative republic for their active support to the Korean people's struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country. He extended deep thanks to the People's National National Congress of Guyana and the government and people of the cooperative republic for their positive support of the Korean people's cause.

Unbreakable is the unity of the Korean and Guyanese peoples advancing hand in hand along the road of independence and socialism under the banner of anti-imperialism and independence, and no force can block their road. The Korean people will advance courageously, always shoulder to shoulder with the Guyanese people in the sacred struggle for the common cause of anti-imperialism and independence.

LAWMAKERS QUESTION GOVERNMENT ON 'RICE SCANDAL'

[Text] Lawmakers on the Economy-Science Committee of the National Assembly intensified their sizzing interpellation of the administration about the alleged rice payoff scandal until early this morning. Both the majority and minority members pressed the government hard about what they claimed the waste of the national fund in the course of importing American rice.

They argued that the Office of Supply (OSROK) gave a special favor to the PIRMI [Pacific International Rice Mills Inc.] by renewing a contract for the import of remaining amount which the U.S. dealer failed to supply in violation of the earlier contract. They also asked the government why it made a contract with the PIRMI for import of 200,000 tons of rice despite that the U.S. exporter secured only 120,000 tons.

Rep. Cho Sun-hyong, an independent, inquired why the OSROK imported 100,000 tons of rice in addition from the Connell Company, who raised the alleged kickback scandal. Kim Chu-ho, director-general of the OSROK, said in his reply that his office contracted with the Connell Company for the additional import in February, 1981 because until then it had only secured 1.7 million tons of U.S. rice out of the total 2.4 million tons of foreign rice which the Agriculture-Fisheries [Ministry] had asked it to import.

Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song said, "The EPB [Economic Planning Board] has not intervened so far in deciding on the import of foreign rice. But, it will inquire of the movements in the world market of major materials including rice in detail in the days to come, and will provide the OSROK with information it obtained."

During the panel session, the first minority Democratic Korea Party members asked for the attendance of Yi Han-ki, chairman of the Board of Audit and Inspection, and Fisheries Minister Ko Kon in the meeting. But the request was rejected by a 9-8 vote.

In the Foreign Affairs Committee, Foreign Minister No Sin-yong said that the U.S. Government had made it clear that allegations of a bribery scandal involving Korean officials and U.S. rice dealers were totally groundless. He said that he believed the scandal had been attributed to the OSROK officials as a result of conflicts among major American rice dealers. Answering questions by Rep. Yi Man-sop of the Korea National Party, he also said that the government did not intend to bring the case to the International Court of Justice.

In the Finance Committee, lawmakers of the DKP proposed the formation of a special body in the panel to look into the recent bank loan scandals involving the Korea Housing Bank. The motion was turned down by 12-9 vote.

Kim chu-ho, director-general of OSROK, testified before the National Assembly yesterday that he would recommend the government sue the Connell Company for libel in connection with its allegations of bribery scandal. He said that his office would consult with the Foreign Ministry and the Justice Ministry about the possible libel law suit.

Further Report

[Excerpt] The rival parties are wrangling over the formation ofa special parliamentary committee empowered to investigate state affairs with regard to the alleged bribery scandal involving imports of U.S. rice.

The minority political groups formally forwarded a joint resolution calling for the organization of the ad hoc house panel to the National Assembly yesterday.

They also demanded that the duration of the current 110th extra house sittings, which ends tomorrow, be extended to deal with the case further.

The floor leaders of the three major parties got together yesterday to discuss the minority-raised issues, but failed to reconcile their different views. Reps. Kim Chong-ki and Yi Tong-chin of the minority Democratic Korea Party and the Korean National Party claimed that a special parliamentary panel should be formed to look into the actual condition of rice imports from the United States as well as the payoff scandal.

However, Rep. Yi Chong-chan of the Democratic Justice Party opposed the minority idea, saying that it was not desirable for the assembly to tackle the matter for a long time, taking into consideration international relations and the government's earlier explanation of the case.

In the resolution, which obtained 121 lawmakers' signatures, the minority camp claimed that the alleged kickback scandal appeared to have damaged the government's prestige both at home and abroad. "Therefore, it is the duty and responsibility of the assembly, which represents the people, to determine whether the charge is true," the resolution insists.

The majority DJP plans to turn down the resolution by a vote in a Steering Committee meeting expected to be held today. The DJP, explaining the reasons for opposing the setup of an investigation panel, said that no defects had been found in the procedures for importing the American rice and it was unclear who should be investigated by the panel. The panel also said the formation of such a body would just give the impression that the house was affected by the intrigues of American rice workers.

Rep. Yi of the DJP also said that his party was unwilling to prolong the house session merely for the purpose of further inquiry of the administration about the case. He indicated that extra sessions of the Economy-Science Committee could possibly be held after the current special house meeting ends tomorrow.

The DKP will hold an emergency meeting of its Executive Council this morning to discuss its strategy on the price import scandal.

KOREA TIMES GIVES DETAILS ON 'RICE SCANDAL'

SK110726 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 11 Mar 82 p 7

[By Pae Chol-su]

[Text] A rice rift is rising between the Korean Government and an American grain major. The quarrel flared up Monday when two U.S. rice growing cooperatives fielded an antitrust lawsuit, alleging that two American rice exporters had bribed Korean officials in return for higher rice export prices.

The allegation has triggered a flurry of "anger and embarrassment" among senior Korean officials, including the challenged administrator of the Office of Supply of the Republic of Korea (OSROK), Kim Chu-ho.

The international strife originated in the fall of 1980 when Korea was stung by poor harvests and hastened to import foreign rice. The Korean rice purchase operation went well, propelled by the Korea-Japan agreement on a 1-million-ton rice deal. Ironically, this success was the seed of future disputes.

According to OSROK, the single window of the Korean Governments' overseas purchase activity, the nation was forced to buy an unnecessary 200,000 tons of rice produced in southern American states. "We had to buy the extra 200,000 tons from the United States in order to prevent them from intervening in our deal with Japan," said an OSROK official, who refused to be identified. He noted that U.S. rice brokers had enormous power on the world grain market.

"At any rate, we placed it under open bidding and 18 American firms took part in the tenders on Dec. 11 in 1980," according to OSROK head Kim's testimony in the National Assembly.

Their estimated bids ranged from $477.90 to $538.90 per ton, an available record book says.

"I thought they were too high. So OSROK shelved any accord with one of the American dealers," Kim recalled. "In fact, we could not think of negotiations with our American partners before because of their monopolistic power in global grain deals."

The Connell Co. is the "godfather" of the American rice brokers, accounting for 75 percent of California rice exports, according to the related business circles. In fact, the Korean countercharge against the kickback allegation seems to have focused on Connell, which dominated U.S. rice sales to Korea and was indicted during the so-called Pak Tong-sun scandal four years ago.

According to OSROK, Connell's quotation for the controversy-making bid was $530 per ton. "Scolding unreasonably high estimates of the American dealers including Connell, we postponed signing a contract for about two weeks," the OSROK administrator said. "Finally, we signed a contract with PIRMI [Pacific International Rice Mills Inc.], on Jan. 23, 1981. The per-ton price was a moderate $449.9."

It must have been an unexpected and shocking setback for the Connell Co. But the American grain major, which is well known as a generous contributor to U.S. congressional campaigns, bounced back.

Connell displayed its power soon when it won a 100,000 ton rice contract with Korea, partly compensating for its setback to PIRMI, a rising star among American rice brokers, a month before. Connell's contract price was also $449.9 per ton. En route to its blitzkrieg contract, Connell was known to have used a negotiating window with then Deputy Premier and Economic Planning Minister Sin Pyong-hyon.

Nonetheless, Connell seemingly could not forget the bitter setback against PIRMI. It has been heavily involved again in Korean market strategy, the local business circles say.

Three months ago, 113 American congressmen sent Korean President Chon Tu-hwan a sharply worded letter expressing "grave concern" over reports of possible kickbacks in sales of the American rice. Also, the Monday suit said that of the contracted 200,000 tons, PIRMI shipped only 100,000 tons and cancelled the remainder of the shipment.

It went on: The price began dropping and by August was down $100 to $350 a metric ton. The suit said PIRMI then made an agreement with "certain individuals in the OSROK to renew the previously cancelled 100,000 tons at $449.90 per ton."

The suit said PIRMI accomplished this by agreeing to pay or share with certain Korean officials $6 million, or part of the "substantial excess above market price" that OSROK was paying. It also alleged that another rice broker, AGROPROM, committed similar violations in connection with its 160,000-ton deal with the Korean side.

OSROK chief Kim flatly denied the charges as groundless. Higher government officials including Deputy Premier and Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song and assemblymen joined the defense of the OSROK head. They said their defense was based on a thorough investigation of the affair since American congressmen sent a letter.

"PIRMI since the 1981 contract has delivered 130,000 tons of rice to us. For the remaining 70,000 tons, we have renewed a contract, based on the 1981 prices," Kim said.

CANADIAN COURT POSTPONES TRIAL ON CHON PLOT

SK120226 Seoul YONHAP in English 0155 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Text] Toronto, March 11 (YONHAP) -- An Ontario provincial court Thursday delayed setting a date for the trial of Charles Yanover and Alexander Gerol, both accused of conspiring to assassinate South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan, until March 18.

Frank Koziebrockie, Yanover's acting lawyer, said he requested the delay pending his client's bail hearing on March 15.

He said if his client is unable to obtain bail and remains in customdy, he will seek a quick trial.

Both Yanover and Gerol appeared before the court held at the Old Toronto City Hall located in downtown Toronto, Yanover sitting in the docket and Gerol in the public gallery. Gerol was released from custody last week on 75,000 Canadian dollar bail. (One Canadian dollar equals roughly 83 U.S. cents).

Asked about the prospect of Yanover being granted bail, Koziebrockie just shrugged his shoulders. Canadian investigation authorities, however, said earlier that Yanover's chances of getting bail are extremely slim because he was arrested while he was out on bail on charges of conspiring to overthrow the Government of Dominica last year.

ROK FIRM TO DRILL SIX OIL WELLS 'INDEPENDENTLY'

SK100110 Beoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 10 Mar 82 p 7

[Text] The Korea Petroleum Development Corp. [PEDCO] plans to drill a total of six wells in Korean territorial waters independently from 1984 through 1986, it was learned yesterday.

According to a PEDCO report presented to the Energy-Resources Ministry, the state-run oil company will bore two wells each year during the three-year period. The oil-search program is in line with the government policy of exploring all potential oil deposits in the nation's waters.

To prepare for the projected drilling operation, PEDCO will select candidate well sites by the end of 1983 through reprocessing and reassessment of the existing data on past exploration. During the 1983-85 period, PEDCO will pick well sites through detailed seismic surveys of potential oil deposits.

Of the nation's total seven mining blocks, the seventh is set for joint development by Korea and Japan and part of the fourth for joint exploration by PEDCO and ZAPEX of the United States. The potential areas to be sought by PEDCO are northwest of the second block, southwest of the fourth block, south of the fifth block and southwest of the sixth block.

Of the four [number as published] mining blocks, Gulf has drilled two wells in the second block in vain, Gulf conducted seismic surveys in the fourth, Shell bored two wells in the fifth with no success and Shell also bored three wells in the sixth unavailingly.

As the first step toward a full-fledged oil hunt, one or more well sites are scheduled to be picked by the end of October this year in the sixth mining block northeast of Cheju Island.

According to the ministry, the Korea Institute of Energy and Resources will undertake thorough surveys of the geological structure and seismic surveys of the sixth block by the end of September in cooperation with the U.S. Geological Survey before selecting candidate well sites one month later.

In parallel with the oil-hunt program, PEDCO said the construction of a semi-submersible rig would require $82.5 million. The nation's planned first offshore rig is expected to be built by the end of October next year.

PHOUMI VONGVICHIT SAYABOURY CONFERENCE SPEECH

BK110145 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Speech by Comrade Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the Political Bureau of the LPRP Central Committee, delivered at opening of conference of Sayaboury provincial party committee on 27 February 1982 -- recorded]

[Text] Beloved members of the party committees and administrative committees at the provincial, district and canton levels in Sayaboury Province; beloved compatriots in Sayaboury

Province: Today, I am very glad and regard it a great honor to visit Sayaboury Province to meet our compatriots who have gathered here to welcome me. My meeting with you today reminds me of my life during the resistance period when I carried out activities from this province, such as in Siang Nguyen Canton, Siang Hon, Siang Lom, (Mouang Sok), Hongsa and up to Luang Namtha Province.

This meeting also reminds me of the time I joined the first coalition government as minister of education and my subsequent visit to this province to attend a festival in 1937 during which I was warmly welcomed by our compatriots.

My visit to this province this time is like a visit to an outpost of the LPDR. The people in this province have resolutely implemented the party's line and policies. You compatriots have successfully set up agricultural cooperatives and settlements. You have endeavored to carry out the socialist economic construction correctly and effectively, and have managed to harvest sufficient rice and other crops for consumption. I know that our guerrillas, regional forces and regular armed forces in this province have successfully suppressed traitorous commando elements. Additionally, our policemen in this province have also cooperated with local residents in triumphantly suppressing enemy spies and agents, thus bringing peace and tranquillity to the region.

I am visiting a province which has effectively fulfilled the state educational policy, that is at a time when the people of all tribes here have managed to stamp out illiteracy among themselves completely, and are concentrating efforts on raising their cultural standards and building new socialist men for the province with a view to turning this province into a stable rear area for the country and a heroic and gallant front for the revolution.

On behalf of the Political Bureau and the LPRP Central Committee, the LPDP Government, and the Ministry of Education, sports and religious affairs, I would like to thank the Sayaboury provincial party committee and the party committees at other levels and our compatriots in this province wholeheartedly for holding a grand meeting to welcome our party. [applause]

I would like to extend my respect, unity, affection and greetings to all Buddhist clergymen, armymen, policemen, youths, members of the women's unions and the trade unions in this province, and all compatriots for gathering here to warmly welcome us. [applause]

Beloved members of the provincial party committee and administrative committee, and compatriots, we are holding this meeting at a time when the world situation is changing rapidly in favor of the revolution and socialist construction. At present, the three revolutionary currents -- the socialist current, the national liberation current, and the current of the laboring class struggling to liberate themselves -- are fiercely struggling against the U.S. imperialists, the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, and other reactionary forces throughout the world. The socialist forces are becoming more progressive and stronger qualitatively, and their numbers are increasing with every passing day. The national liberation forces are also becoming stronger and more powerful, thus marching forward to liberate one country after another from foreign colonialists. The forces of the laboring class struggling in the capitalist and imperialist countries are becoming more powerful, scoring one great victory after another.

Though suffering heavy defeats, the U.S. imperialists still hope to regain their strength to oppose the revolution so as to prolong the life of their decadent system. Other imperialists are also engaged in internal bickering and are unavoidably heading toward bankruptcy. The U.S. imperialists are using the Chinese reactionary clique and the Thai reactionary clique to create tension along the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao borders.

In the meantime, internal conflicts among the Chinese reactionary clique are worsening. They are warmongering [words indistinct], but remain weak. They are unable to solve their internal problems. The Chinese leadership is divided into three rival groups. They are squabbling for power. The internal conflicts among these groups are deteriorating with every passing day. The Chinese people have no desire to engage in a war with anyone. This is because they have already suffered severe hardships and only want to enjoy peace and build socialism.

The U.S. imperialists have created conditions for waging wars in Africa, the Middle East, Afghanistan, Poland, Kampuchea, Asia and El Salvador in Central America. They have endeavored to separate the three Indochinese countries from the ASEAN countries. Nevertheless, they have unavoidably suffered defeats elsewhere. All forces struggling for peace, national independence, democracy, justice and social progress are becoming stronger and more powerful. These forces are united and have cooperated with one another more closely, and will certainly defeat the warmongering forces in the end. We must, however, always remain vigilant, be confident in our glorious future and victory, and march forward to score even greater victories. Only by doing this will we be able to guarantee that another world war will not take place.

Beloved compatriots at this meeting, the internal situation in our country at present still remains complicated. This is because our country is inseparable from the world situation. When the world situation becomes complicated, so does the situation in our country. The situation in our country has become complicated because of the psywar tactics of the enemies. The enemies have tried to use deceitful propaganda campaigns to confuse our people and make them lose faith in the party, thereby weakening the revolutionary forces. This is the objective of the imperialists and the international reactionaries.

The Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists have stepped up their collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces. Following the defeat of their genocidal scheme in Kampuchea by the Kampuchean people under the leadership of the KPRP led by Comrade Heng Samrin, and following the defeat of their war of aggression against the SRV, the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists have turned to force the Thai reactionary clique to allow reactionary Khmer refugees to create disturbances along the Kampuchean-Thai border. They have instructed exiled reactionary traitors to carry out plundering and military provocations along the Vietnamese-Sino border as well as the Lao-Sino border. They have stepped up psywar tactics by threatening the SRV that they would launch another attack against that country to teach it another lesson. They have also threatened to wipe out the Lao race by using the 900 million Chinese people to attack Laos. We think that such a threat, however, is only part of a psywar propaganda campaign. They have no (?facilities) to use the entire Chinese population to wipe out the Lao people as they have claimed. The truth is that they are unable to do such a thing!

The poverty-stricken Chinese people have no desire for war but instead want peace so that they can freely build socialism and improve their living conditions. They will never carry out such an absurd (?plan) of the Chinese ruling clique. The Chinese people have opposed the Beijing warmongering ruling clique. The internal bickering among the three ruling groups in Beijing is worsening with every passing day. The Chinese people are now trying to stage a revolution to topple the three reactionary ruling groups in order to lead China genuinely along the path of socialism and to unite with other socialist countries in resisting the U.S. imperialists. Anti-leadership leaflets have been circulated throughout China; wall newspapers have appeared in all cities; and clandestine radio broadcasts have called on the people to pursue their progressive activities. As a result, internal conflicts in China have been widening.

As for the Thai reactionary clique, their internal rifts are also accelerating. The Thai people do not support the warmongering policy of the Thai ruling clique nor that of the Chinese reactionary clique. They call on the Thai reactionary clique to strictly implement the peace agreement [san-gna santiphap] recently signed by the Lao and Thai premiers.

In spite of such a complicated world situation, the situation in Laos is getting better. Our armed forces and public security forces have coordinated with our people of all tribes and nationalities in suppressing and wiping out commandos and spies of the exiled Lao reactionaries in several areas, thus securely defending the young LPDR and allowing it to stand majestically as an outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia.

Under the correct leadership of the LPRP, our people have scored great achievements in socialist economic construction and our agricultural cooperatives and settlements have been developed favorably throughout the country. For the past 2 years, it has not been necessary for us to import rice from other countries to feed our people. Such a development is unprecedented in the history of Laos.

In 1976 we managed to harvest some 800,000 tons of grain. Our grain harvests in 1977 and 1978 decreased considerably due to severe floods and droughts. In 1980 our grain harvest went up to 1.2 million tons. It is predicted that our 1981 grain harvest will exceed that of 1980. The exact official statistics, however, have not yet been compiled. It is apparent that the grain harvest of 1981 will be a record harvest in the history of Laos. During the French and U.S. occupation, we never produced sufficient rice for domestic consumption. Each year, we had to import rice to feed our people. This is not the case any longer for we are now able to supply sufficient rice to our entire population. In addition to rice, we also produce cassava, corn, potato and other starchy crops which can be used as a substitute diet. In other countries, the harvest of these crops must be included into the harvest statistics of food production. Because of such good crop harvests, we have also tried to expand livestock raising so as to increase our food supplies and to improve the living conditions of our people of all tribes.

Our educational, cultural and public health development has also proceeded effectively with each passing day. Seven provinces have completely stamped out illiteracy, while three other provinces are going to do the same soon. There are all together 13 provinces in Laos. Seven of these have already stamped out illiteracy, while three others are preparing to announce the complete eradication of illiteracy. Therefore, there are only three provinces left. Most of the people in these three provinces, however, have become literate. I believe that we will be able to stamp out illiteracy throughout the country completely in the near future.

Cultural training to help the people raise to a higher level their understanding and knowledge has also been carried out effectively. Those who have stamped out illiteracy have maintained knowledge at the levels of elementary classes 1, 2 or 3. People in many areas have been educated at the secondary and senior high school levels.

With regard to public health work, it has been expanded to the canton and village levels. There are public health cadres working in villages and there are canton-level hospitals in almost all cantons while hospitals in districts, provinces and in the capital have been expanded. The number of beds for patients in each hospital has increased. This has guaranteed the saving of our Lao people's lives.

Information work -- propaganda through newspapers and radios -- has also been expanded to the grassroots level. Recently, we successfully set up a satellite relay communications station with Soviet assistance. From now on, we can watch television programs relayed from Soviet television station, and will be able to talk with people in countries all over the world through Soviet satellites.

The sports, art and literature activities have also been widely expanded. They have daily become a mass movement characterized by patriotism, science and progress. This is a great, glorious, unprecedented success of our Lao people. This success has pushed our Lao country to march firmly forward along the path of socialism, and no force can reverse it.

Sayaboury Province has made great, positive and glorious contributions to these successes. Therefore, I would like to take this occasion to hail the party committees at all levels, people of all nationalities and tribes, soldiers, policemen, monks and novices, youths, women, trade union members, the Lao Front for National Construction, and everyone in Saraboury Province for their close unity and determination to score these great and brilliant successes. [applause]

Delegates to the meeting, we must accept that the successes we have achieved are merely initial successes. They have not yet met all our requirements. Our goal is to build an ever more progressive and prosperous socialist system than that which we have today. This is because we are still in the beginning step of the transition to socialism. In this beginning step, all countries, like our country, suffer hardships and difficult circumstances. Some other countries have experienced even more suffering. They have, however, finally overcome those sufferings and have achieved success in building prosperous socialism. It is natural that we -- who are in the first stage of the transition to socialism -- would still be suffering some hardships and difficult circumstances. To make our life better and more prosperous, we have to advance to the second stage. To make our country genuinely prosperous and to allow it to advance to socialism, we have to advance into the third stage.

We are still suffering such difficulties because our enemies have not yet abandoned their psywar schemes to create disturbances by using guerrilla and economic as well as cultural warfare. They have spread groundless news reports with the intention of deceiving and misleading our people into losing confidence in the line and policies of the party and government. They have instigated our people of various ra ionalities and tribes to hate one another, thus undermining our solidarity. They have carried out deceitful propaganda saying a war will occur in our country, thus threatening our people.

This propaganda is aimed at making our people pay no attention to earning a living. The enemies have mobilized bandits to create disturbances in different areas in Laos, and then to use this as their tool to threaten the people, saying anybody who refuses to abide by them would be plundered by exiled reactionaries. They have also used money to buy off to serve as their lackeys those who are greedy and who think only of profit. They have also used money to buy goods in our country at exorbitant prices in order to raise commodity prices here. Additionally, they have bought commodities from our country and sold them in Thailand with the aim of causing a shortage of food and staple items in our country. They have then propagandized that the new system in our country is a system which does not bring any happiness to the people.

In the cultural area, they have waged propaganda through radio and television programs motivating the people to pursue pleasure and to be intoxicated with lotteries, consequently forcing them not to think about the national construction task. Sometimes, they have waged propaganda misleading the Lao people into crossing the border to watch sports games, to enjoy song and dance performances, or to attend various festivals organized on different occasions. Their aim is to make the Lao people discontinent with earning a living, but to pursue pleasure in the festive activities they have organized for this propaganda purpose.

This propaganda campaign has led the Lao people (?astray). They have also used songs and dramas to mislead the Lao people into thinking that Lao territory is part of Thailand. They have tried to encourage our people to sing Thai songs and to dance Thai steps with a view to doing away with Lao identity. Such is a psywar tactic they have relentlessly employed against our people.

At times they have coerced and deceived the Lao people into fleeing to Thailand and other countries. Of course, some of these Lao citizens have come back after experiencing severe hardships in those countries. Nowadays, fewer and fewer people are trying to flee the country while more and more of them are returning home. While I was in France to attend the French Communist Party Congress I met several hundred Lao refugees who asked me to guarantee their security because they wanted to come back home. I told them that when they came to France no one gave them any guarantee about their security. Therefore, they need no guarantee about their security if they want to return home. If they come back home to earn an honest living as other Lao citizens, they can still retain their Lao citizenship.

If they come back to serve the enemy scheme in creating disturbances for other people, however, no one can guarantee their security. They will be punished. Even those persons who still remain in Laos will be punished if they serve the enemy scheme.

Some of us fail to adhere strictly to the class principle and do not know how to tell friends from foes. They easily fall for the enemy's propaganda campaign. They do not know what the enemy propaganda campaign is like. They cannot tell the difference between the enemy propaganda and the statements made by the party and state. They still fall for any deceitful propaganda campaigns made by the enemy. Such a weak point has brought difficulties to our people.

Another weak point experienced by our people deals with the tasks on national defense and public security among the masses. We fail to carry out these tasks in certain areas effectively. Only armymen carry out national defense tasks, while only policemen do the latter. Most people fail to cooperate actively with these authorities to carry out their tasks.

Another problem deals with the setting up of agricultural cooperatives and settlements. Several provinces have encountered difficulties in carrying out this task. Some provinces have failed to follow cooperative regulations correctly in setting up these enterprises. Some people have no faith in this system, thus refusing to participate actively in cooperative activities. Additionally, they lack experience in operating these enterprises. After setting up these cooperatives, they neglect to apply modern technology and science to their operation. In fact, all cooperative members must pay close attention to running them efficiently. If they fail to operate these cooperatives effectively, they must seek ways to consolidate them. This is because an agricultural cooperative is a correct production form in advancing toward socialism.

Only by correctly operating this production form will we be able to increase our agricultural production. We can now see that several agricultural cooperatives have been effectively operated, thus enabling them to score better harvests. Most of our surplus grain for consumption comes from agricultural cooperatives. We also give assistance to private farmers to carry out their farming. Their harvests are not as productive, however, as those of agricultural cooperatives. For example, in the 1981 production year an agricultural cooperative in the southern region was able to give a dividend of over one ton of rice to each member in the past harvest season. Such a dividend does not include the harvest of dry season rice farming. Several cooperatives in the northern region, such as Muang Hiam and Sam Neua, could give a dividend of over 800 kilos of paddy to each member while the private farming sector could produce only 600 kilos per person. The private sector fails to produce sufficient rice for consumption. As a result, more and more people have now applied for membership in agricultural cooperatives. They have come to understand that by becoming members of agricultural cooperatives, they are joining in the efforts to fight natural calamities, for example, by building dams to irrigate farm land and using organic and inorganic fertilizers or planting green peas as cash crop to nourish the soil for rice farming. Nevertheless, an average cooperative in our country is able to produce only 600 kilos of rice per hectare so far, while in several other countries a similar enterprise is able to produce over 10 tons per hectare. We must strive to increase the harvest output per hectare in the future to three, four, five, six, seven, eight or nine tons. By then, we will be able to improve the living conditions of our people effectively.

Another thing is that we have not yet fully carried out the tasks on the literacy campaign and cultural development. Illiteracy may be stamped out in certain areas. People in some areas fail to carry out this work continuously. Even though illiteracy has been stamped out, the cultural standard of the people still remains low. This is another weak point we must get rid of.

Moreover, our people fail to extensively, profoundly and thoroughly resist the enemy's psywar tactics. Some of them easily fall for enemy propaganda campaigns.

As a result, they have some doubts in the line and policies of the party Central Committee and the government. Our people must be convinced to understand profoundly the situation and the line and policies of the party and state regarding the enemy's psywar tactics. Only by doing this will we be able to take our country toward socialism step by step, thus bringing prosperity and well-being to our people.

Faced with such a situation, I am of the view that we must continue to carry out our duties as follows:

1. We must further strengthen the unity among our people of all nationalities and tribes.

2. We must further heighten vigilance so that the enemy will not be able to deceive us any longer with his psywar tactics. The enemy may not be able to deceive us directly; however, he still tries to employ such tactics with our children and relatives, and we sometimes fall for them. For example, he may use young girls or old people to deceive us. Therefore, we must heighten our vigilance so as to thwart the enemy's psywar tactics both directly and indirectly. We must try to convince those elements unknowingly serving the enemy psywar campaigns.

3. We must unite to resist all decietful psywar tactics, spy activities, commando operations, and economic and cultural maneuvers of the enemy in all respects. We must never allow the enemy to deceive our people with these activities.

4. We must unite to develop and expand agricultural cooperatives and settlements, and handicraft work, including textile weaving, pottery, and bamboo wickerware. We must develop small industry by installing mechanized tools in this kind of production. We must develop light industry by using more machines than manpower. Subsequently, we can transform light industry into fully meachnized heavy industry. As a result, our factories will be expanded and production increased. Then our people will be supplied with adequate necessities in accordance with their needs. With efficient management in carrying out heavy industry, we will be able to increase work efficiency, reduce production cost, efficiently utilize raw materials, and save time and labor with maximal production. This is because these things are the foundations of the socialist economy. Without these foundations, we will not be able to build socialism. If we fail to build socialism, our people will continue to suffer shortages and hardships as before. Only by taking our country along the path of socialism will we be able to employ mechanization in production to produce more goods for our people as in other socialist countries.

5. We must continue to carry out literacy campaigns to stamp out illiteracy among our people and to raise the cultural standard of the people to the grade-4 level as well as the secondary and senior high school education levels. We must set up child care centers to take care of infants so that their parents will be able to engage fully in production. We must set up more kindergartens and primary, secondary and senior high schools. We must expand technical and vocationsl schools to train more technicians and specialists to take our country along the path of socialism.

6. We must consolidate our special solidarity with the Vietnamese and Kampuchea peoples. This is because Vietnam and Kampuchea are the two neighboring countries which have fought the common enemies with us for several decades. We are now simultaneously marching along the path of socialism. We have rendered unconditional assistance to one another in the past, and now the common enemies are threatening us. If we fail to unite closely to consolidate our strength to fight these enemies, we will not be able to safeguard our national independence. Only by uniting the three countries as fraternal neighbors will we be able to have enough strength to fight internal and external enemies. The special solidarity among the three countries does not mean that we will unify them into a single country. The enemies have accused us of setting up the so-called Indochinese federation with Vietnam as leader.

Vietnam is a country with its own independence. Laos is also a country with its own independence, and so is Kampuchea. We cooperate with one another in building and defending our countries and assist one another in accordance with our capabilities. This is the character of our special solidarity.

7. We must consolidate our solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. This is because these countries had rendered assistance to us in our national liberation struggles in the past and are rendering assistance to us in our socialist construction at present. By accepting this assistance and cooperation, it does not mean that we are a satellite or colony of the Soviet Union or of any particular socialist countries. It means that they will give assistance to us in whatever field we need. We will do likewise with them. We help one another by selling goods to each other at prices lower than the international market. For example, we buy fuel oil from the Soviet Union and other socialist countries at the prices lower than we pay to the Shell company in Thailand. It is in no way dangerous to our country. If the enemies (?step up) their activities in our country to a higher degree, the Soviet Union and the socialist countries will help us defeat them to safeguard our national independence.

8. We must support, help and cooperate with the peoples in all countries in the world struggling for peace, national independence, democracy, justice and social progress. Several countries in the world are now struggling to liberate themselves so as to advance toward socialism. They need support from us. We must oppose imperialism, and render support and assistance to the peoples struggling against it.

While giving support and assistance to other countries, we must realize that we are still faced with certain internal and external difficulties. The enemies have not yet abandoned their schemes of aggression and intervention through psywar tactics, commando operations, economic and cultural maneuvers. They will continue to employ these tactics until they come to realize that they have become futile. Therefore we must be patient in fighting their schemes. We must fight until we can defeat the enemies. As for the internal difficulties we must know that we are advancing toward socialism as a small and young country with small-scale production, limited resources and widespread private interests. Our country has backward agriculture which relies only on natural developments. We lack experience in socialist construction, economic construction and cultural development. All these are internal difficulties.

Nevertheless, we are still blessed with several favorable conditions as follows:

1. The line and policies of the LPRP are always correct. Our party adopted appropriate lines and policies to fight the U.S. imperialists and French colonialists in the past 3 decades.

2. Our people of all nationalities and tribes are uniting more closely around the party and government.

3. All cadres, armymen, policemen and people have learned their lessons in the 30 years of natinal liberat_on struggle and the 6 years of socialist construction.

4. Our country is rich in natural resources. If our country enjoys peace, we will be able to exploit such resources for national construction, thus improving the living conditions of our people.

5. We enjoy special relations with the Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples. We also enjoy increasing cooperation and close solidarity with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries.

6. The peoples struggling for national independence, peace, democracy, justice and social progress in all continents consistently support our struggle. This support constitutes a strong force in resisting the aggressive policy of the imperialists.

7. If we remain united closely, maintain full faith in the party and state, are fully confident in the party line and policies, and strive to overcome all difficulties, we will certainly win final victory.

Beloved participants of the conference, I am very happy to meet you compatriots here. I will have to say goodbye to you because I will return to Vientiane today. I would like to express my sincere thanks to you for according me a warm welcome. I wish the party committees and administrative committees at all levels in this province, cadres, armymen, policemen, guerrillas, youths, women, workers, clergymen and intellectuals good health. I hope you will be united even more closely to fulfill all our noble tasks. I hope to come back to see you again. I would like to end my speech now. I wish you happiness. Thank you.

INSURGENTS BLOW UP AMMUNITION DEPOT IN SOUTH

AFP Report

BK091426 Hong Kong AFP in English 1325 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] Bangkok, 9 Mar (AFP) -- An anti-government Laotian commando [group] has blown up an ammunition depot in southern Laos, Sunday night, it was learned from non-communist Cambodian sources here today. The depot, situated some 12 km (7.5 miles) from the border city of Savannakhet, was along the Mekong River and facing Thailand.

The same sources said the commander belonged to the "National United Front for Liberation of Laotian People" (NUFLLP), an anti-government resistance group formed on 15 September, 1980, grouped the right-wingers, the mountain peoples, the neutralists and some Laotian associations abroad.

There are currently some 40,000 Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea, according to informed sources.

Reports from Thai border region opposite to the site indicated that loud explosion sound was heard from across the Laotian border on Sunday night. But no details were given by Thai authorities concerning the explosion.

The NUFLLP, whose strength is not fully known, called for an international conference to discuss Laotian question in order to obtain withdrawal of Vietnamese troops and restoration of neutrality in Laos.

Bangkok POST Report

BK100246 Bangkok POST in English 10 Mar 82 p 3

[Text] Lao resistance forces blew up a large fuel dump near Savannakhet last Sunday and then fled into the jungle, fighting off pursuing Pathet Lao troops. Sources close to the resistance said that one member of the small rebel group was killed in the retreat from the petrol and oil storage depot across the Mekong River from Mukdahan District of Nakhon Phanom. The force of the explosions was felt in Mukdahan, and debris was scattered across the river into Thailand, local residents said.

The sources said the rebels charged at the depot, throwing hand grenades into the storage area, setting off large explosions and starting fires. Pathet Lao troops, at first taken by surprise, opened fire on the guerrillas as they withdrew, and chased them a short distance into the countryside around the Savannakhet provincial capital.

It was not known what casualties were suffered by the Pathet Lao, the sources said. They described the fighting as intense but fairly short-lived. The incident was one of the first successes claimed by southern Lao resistance forces so close to a major city.

The extent of the insurgency in Laos is still largely unknown. Troops are known to operate in organised units of various sizes in northern Laos, in the south opposite northeastern Thailand, and in central Laos, where the Vientiane government has claimed success in trying to break the back of a Mong-led revolt. Several journalists who have traveled with the southern-based guerrillas have quoted resistance leaders as saying that they are slowly building an army, and have avoided large-scale contacts with Pathet Lao or Vietnamese troops.

THAI TRADE DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR TALKS

BK091107 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 9 Mar 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 8 March, Nousai Sitthisai, acting minister of industry and trade, received a trade delegation of the Kingdom of Thailand led by Phatchara Itsarasena, director general of the Foreign Trade Department attached to the Commerce Ministry. On this occasion, the guests and the host held talks in a good atmosphere. They discussed ways and means to develop and consolidate further the trade between the two countries.

The Thai trade delegation arrived in Vientiane, the capital, that afternoon to hold discussions and reach an agreement with the Lao side on the scope of trade for 1982. They will also discuss a settlement of remaining problems, for example, the problem of the 273 types of goods under the control of the Thai Government, permission for the transit of goods to Laos via Thailand, and other problems related to the trade between the two countries.

POST: SRV SHELLING KILLS 16 KHMER REFUGEES

[Text] Sixteen Kampuchean refugees were killed and 43 wounded when three artillery shells fired by Vietnamese-led forces slammed into a Khmer Serei border camp, it was reported yesterday. Lt-Gen Som Kattaphan, spokesman of the Supreme Command, said 12 Khmers were killed when the 130-mm shells hit the camp, opposite the Thai village of Nong Chan in Ta Phraya District, Prachin Buri, on Wednesday [10 March]. Thai troops and relief workers took the wounded to a field hospital in Khao-I Dang holding centre and a district hospital in Ta Phraya. Three refugees who were slightly wounded were given medical treatment on the spot and released, Gen Som said. Later reports said four of the wounded died in hospital.

Lt-Gen Som said no food was distributed to the refugees by international agencies on Wednesday afternoon, but many refugees were gathered there during the shelling.

Refugee sources said one of the shells slammed right into the market area of the encampment, killing and injuring refugees, most of them children and women. They said the casualty toll was the highest among civilians from a single shelling there. The two other shells hit the periphery of the camp, which straddles the frontier, but caused no casualties, the sources said. The camp, which is controlled by Khmer Serei guerrillas, shelters over 45,000 Kampuchean refugees, most of whom live in makeshift huts. The camp, which is often called Nong Chan after the Thai village just across the border, has been periodically shelled by Vietnamese gunners during clashes with Khmer Serei guerrillas. It was previously the scene of internecine fighting between rival guerrilla factions.

In other developments, Lt-Gen Som said fighting had subsided somewhat inside Kampuchea, as Vietnam was busy adjusting its force for renewed attacks on the Khmer Rouge. He said that no shells landed on the Thai side of the border yesterday.

OFFICIAL EXPLAINS REMARKS ON KAMPUCHEAN REFUGEES

BK120225 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 12 Mar 82 p 6

[Text] Col Sanan Khachonklam of the Supreme Command's Joint Operations Centre said yesterday that border encampments along the Thai-Kampuchean border will be "gradually" reorganized and moved into the Khmer territory with the cooperation of UN authorities. "We will not re-mark the demarcation line as had been suggested in some foreign reports," the colonel told the NATION yesterday. He was referring to a recent report in the Hong Kong-based FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW which said that Thai authorities were redrawing the demarcation line on the Thai-Kampuchean border to place certain border encampments including Nong Chan in the Kampuchean territory.

"We are not doing that. We know where the borderline is. What we will be doing is to slowly move the Kampucheans in the encampments back to Kampuchean territory with the cooperation of UN officials. For example, in the future, vegetable seeds distributed to displaced Kampucheans may be given to those in the encampments to be planted in Kampuchean soil," the colonel explained. The senior military officer in charge of the refugee problem made the clarification to avoid misunderstandings over the new move. "We are not changing the borderline. We will, step by step, move the Kampucheans in the encampments on the Kampuchean side of the border."

Col Sanan told a luncheon of the Rotary Club of Phrakhanong at the Ambassador Hotel on Wednesday that border encampments along the Thai-Kampuchean border will be "reorganized" so that all displaced Khmers, estimated at about 288,000 at the last count, would in effect be residing in the Kampuchean territory.

VNA REJECTS PRC REPORT ON CAPTURE OF SRV BOAT

["Chinese Fabrication Rejected" -- VNA headline]

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 11 -- As reported by XINHUA yesterday, Chinese forces illegally stationed on the Vietnamese archipelago of Hoang Sa on March 4 captured a Vietnamese craft which they called "spy vessel."

This was a customary slander made by the Chinese authorities to hoodwink public opinion and cover up the fact that they had many times seized Vietnamese fishing boats and kidnapped Vietnamese fishermen operating on Vietnamese waters. This was also designed to divert public attention from the fact that dozens of Chinese armed vessels on March 3 were caught in the act of conducting spying and provocative activities far into Vietnamese waters in Binh Tri Thien Province.

VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to completely reject this slanderous fabrication. We demand that the Chinese authorities release all the Vietnamese fishing boats and crewmen they have captured and stop sending their vessels into Vietnamese waters. The Chinese authorities must answer for their criminal actions.

KYODO REPORTS LE DUAN MAY BECOME NEW PRESIDENT

OW120427 Tokyo KYODO in English 0312 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Text] Bangkok, March 12 (KYODO) -- The Vietnam Communist Party may name party Secretary General Le Duan president of the country at its congress due to open March 27, diplomatic sources here have said.

The top government post has been vacant since the death of party leader Ho Chi Minh in 1969.

The sources noted that Le Duan, 73, has recently been addressed with more honorifics than ever before.

If Le Duan is promoted to the presidency, they said, he is most likely to be succeeded within the party by Politburo member Le Duc Tho. Le Duc Tho has already surrendered his post as chief of the party's organization affairs to Central Committee member Nguyen Duc Tham, the sources said.

They said a changeover of the key party posts will possibly lead to a reshuffle of the aging Politburo as many of its 17 members are now over 70.

Results of the party congress, the first since December 1976 and called mainly to discuss the country's 1981-85 economic development plan, will be significant not only to Vietnam but also to Indochina as a whole, the sources added.

Laos, Vietnam's neighbor and close ally, plans to hold a similar congress of the People's Revolutionary Party, the first in 10 years.

The Vietnam-backed Communist Party in Kampuchea held a national session last year.

ARMY PAPER REVIEWS MILITARY SUPPORT TASKS

BK111200 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 21 Feb 82 pp 1, 4

[Text] The rear services general department recently held an all-army rear service conference to review the results of the implementation of the 1981 rear service plan and to discuss operational measures for 1982. Attending the conference were heads of the rear services of the military subsistence, uniform, POL, transport, and medical departments and of various military regions, army corps and armed branches in the entire army. Lt Gen Bui Phung, member of the party Central Committee and vice minister of national defense, also attended and addressed the conference.

Last year, despite numerous difficulties, the army rear services sector exerted great efforts and adopted many effective measures to help ensure combat readiness, care for the daily activities of the soldiers and maintain their living standards. In many localities, as a result of the movement to increase production, the soldiers' food rations have been stabilized. Thanks to the intensive adoption of prophylactic measures and effective medical care, the rate of physical fitness among the soldiers has been maintained as required and malaria, skin diseases and other epidemics have been prevented or stamped out quickly. Meanwhile, the distribution of non-combat, combat and winter uniforms to soldiers has been basically conducted. Many units have intensified their managerial work and equipped themselves with additional sewing machines and thread and cloth to ensure that soldiers are fully and properly clad. Implementing the motto that the higher and lower echelons work together, and making the fullest use of all locally available construction materials, various units have been able to overcome difficulties in quickly providing living quarters and beds for the soldiers and depots for vehicles and military equipment in accordance with technical requirements. While gradual changes have been made in activities involving transportation and the use of oil and gasoline, difficulties concerning fuel and transport facilities have been minimized, thus contributing to the fulfillment of the plan in support of training and combat activities and the effort to maintain combat readiness. In addition, good results have been obtained in assisting other units.

The army rear services sector has determined its guidelines and tasks for 1982 which involve concentrating efforts on ensuring the fulfillment of all assignments to support combat activites and help maintain combat readiness and improve the people's livelihood; performing its internationalist duty satisfactorily; striving to step up production and practice thrift in order to stabilize and further improve the soldiers' lives; and building itself into a regular and modern army unit.

To implement these guidelines and tasks, in 1982 it is necessary for the army rear services sector to further develop its initiative and creativeness and resolutely overcome the practice of relying on the higher echelons while promoting the right to collective mastery of the masses and seeking every possible measure to fulfill its operational plan satisfactorily.

SUZUKI: SOVIET MORATORIUM IS 'BARGAINING TACTIC'

OW170613 Tokyo KYODO in English 0558 GMT 17 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 17 (KYODO) -- Japan's Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Wednesday the Soviet moratorium on the deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in European Russia could be Soviet bargaining tactics.

Suzuki told reporters the United States and the Soviet Union suspect each other. There would be no effective means of verifying the Soviet moratorium, he said.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, speaking at a trade union congress in Moscow Tuesday, said the Soviet Union is "freezing...armaments of this kind already stationed and suspending the replacement of old missiles...by newer SS-20 missiles."

SAKURAUCHI, FRENCH MINISTER JOBERT HOLD TALKS

OW170501 Tokyo KYODO in English 0447 GMT 17 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 17 (KYODO) -- French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert Wednesday urged Japan to show a positive stance to alleviate the dollar 1 billion imbalance in bilateral trade now running in its favor. Meeting Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, Jobert proposed more Japanese imports of French products such as aircraft and farm products.

He indicated a political solution was needed to trade problems, by saying preparations for French President Francois Mitterrand's visit to Japan next month were not yet enough, Japanese officials said.

Sakurauchi was quoted as replying that he is convinced the problem of the trade imbalance and Japan's efforts to increase its imports should be looked at from a long-range perspective. The foreign minister cited the results of the bilateral trade talks held in Tokyo earlier this week and added that it is important to set the things on the right rail.

Government sources said the French delegation called, among other things, for a cut in the tariff on French brandy and a reduction in Japan's liquor tax. However, the Japanese rejected the request, drawing strong dissatisfaction from the French side, the sources said.

The Japanese pointed out the movement in France to curb the imports of Japanese television sets and motorbikes, urging an immediate improvement in the situation. The French stressed France's big trade deficit with Japan, the sources said.

DFRF DENIES NORTH INVOLVED IN ASSASSINATION PLOT

SK170701 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2300 GMT 16 Mar 82

[Statement by the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland, dated 16 March -- read by announcer]

[Text] Recently the South Korean fascist clique fabricated the so-called case of an international assassination plot and is perpetrating vicious and heinous schemes slandering and defaming us -- linking it with us -- and framing and persecuting overseas democratic forces -- linking it with them.

As has been already reported, on 6 March the South Korean puppets waged a riotous rally and demonstration in Canada, mobilizing their anticommunist hooligans, and kicked up a row slandering and calling for the expulsion of Mr Choe Hong-hui, who has nothing to do with this case. While trying to link the case with that man yesterday and with this man today, the South Korean puppets are unreasonably scheming to link the case even with Mr Choe Tok-sin, who is residing in the United States, thereby trying to expand the case throughout the American continent.

This frantic racket by the Chon Tu-hwan ring is a calculated reactionary offensive designed to damage the international prestige of our republic and to obliterate the movement against fascism and for democracy rapidly growing among overseas Korean compatriots and their aspiration for the peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

The Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland [DFRF] sternly condemns this indiscreet slanderous racket by the South Korean puppet clique with surging national indignation, recognizing that it is another clumsy drama to escape their situation of isolation and rejection at home and abroad. It is a hackneyed tactic of the South Korean fascist clique to fabricate a preposterous plot, to slander and defame us and to suppress and persecute overseas democratic forces by linking them with us.

In the 1960's the South Korean puppets fabricated the so-called East Berlin case, linking it with us and illegally kidnapped overseas Korean compatriots in West Germany, including intellectuals and students there, to Seoul. Finding that there was no evidence, the South Korean puppets had to release them. When they abducted from Japan Kim Tae-chung, a democratic figure of South Korea, who was staging an overseas democratic movement in the early 1970's, the South Korean puppets also clamored about his connection with the North in an attempt to conceal their international terrorism. When they played such a drama as the 15 August shooting case, they linked it with us and Chongnyon and perpetrated dastardly, slanderous acts of suppressing the Korean compatriots in Japan.

In particular, entering the 1980's, the Chon Tu-hwan clique directed the spearhead of its fascist attack to the continent of America and frantically tried to terrorize Korean personages residing in the United States and Canada.

When Mr Choe Hong-hui went to Argentina to participate in the international taekwondo championship held there, they also tried to assassinate him. They even kicked up a signature campaign to expel Mr Choe Tok-sin and other influential Korean figures from the United States. The South Korean puppets' dastardly acts are vividly exposed by the fact that they arrested and detained Hong Song-kil, a Korean compatriot from the United States who was visiting South Korea to meet his relatives, for his having visited the republic.

No matter how frantically they may run wild to persecute overseas compatriots, linking them with us, and to obliterate the overseas democratic movement, the South Korean fascist clique cannot block the trend of the Koreans abroad longing for the republic and advancing along the road of democracy and reunification.

The chief aim of the recent case of an international assassination plot is to create a greater shock and thus block the visit of overseas compatriots to the fatherland and completely obliterate the overseas democratic movement at any cost.

However, no matter how frantically those who specialize in terrorism may eradicate overseas democratic forces by linking them with us, they can gain nothing from it. Terrorism against individuals has nothing wwith our republic. We have consistently opposed it. The current incident has nothing to do with us. We do not know about the Canadian people who were reportedly arrested by the Canadian police. We know nothing about compatriot Choe Chung-hwa, who was allegedly involved in this incident, except the fact that he visited the republic in 1980 together with some 10 taekwondo instructors and held an exhibition match. Thus, foreign news reports have fairly stated that they could not find any evidence proving North's involvement.

The majority of compatriots in Canada and other countries are deriding the rackets of the South Korean ruling faction, regarding them as unconvincing slander. The South Korean authorities are attempting to deliberately connect the case with us. However, they have failed to present any material to convince the people of the world. Despite this fact, the South Korean puppets and slandering and caluminating us by linking Mr Choe Hong-hui and other democratic overseas figures with us. This can neither be justified nor tolerated.

In fact, terrorism and assassination are the monopoly of the South Korean ruling faction. Terrorism and assassination have been historically perpetrated within the South Korean ruling circles. The Chon Tu-hwan fascist regime itself is none other than the product of a most vicious terrorist act. The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist regime is a most barbarous, murderous and fascist-terrorist regime fabricated on political ruins after massacring tens of thousands of fellow countrymen and eliminating all political rivals. Within this wicked murderers' group, secret feuds and struggles for power are constantly being waged. If there were a plot to assassinate the traitor Chon Tu-hwan as advertized by the South Korean puppets, it must be a plot hatched within the present South Korean ruling quarters, like the case of assassination of the former dictator.

Black cannot be converted into white. The South Korean fascist elements should realize that the killer of others would become the killer himself. The more maliciously the South Korean puppets slander us and persecute overseas compatriots, clinging to the foolish anticommunist intrigues, the graver their crimes will become and the more bitter the public denunciation they will invite at home and abroad.

The South Korean rulers must discontinue the criminal anticommunist burlesque and stop at once their suppression of overseas democratic figures. Overseas compatriots should, by no means, get involved in the slanderous anticommunist maneuvers of the Chon Tu-hwan clique, creating antagonism and distrust among the same people. They should courageously advance along the road of true patriotism, democracy and reunification against the fascist clique.

The DFRF Central Committee, as in the past, will safeguard the democratic national rights of overseas compatriots and will tenaciously support and encourage their patriotic movement for democracy and the peaceful reunification.

VRPR HITS U.S. MOVE TO EXPLOIT KOREAN OILFIELDS

SK160448 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 15 Mar 82

[Commentary: "U.S. Moves To Exploit Oil Deposits Around Korean Peninsula," from "Hour for the Armed Forces" program]

[Text] As you know, the United States has tried and is trying to use the Korean Peninsula not only as a military base for aggression, but also as a source of raw materials. According to reports in U.S. newspapers and magazines, in the west sea of our country an oil belt extends from southwest of the Korean Peninsula to northeast China and the Soviet Union, and there is another vast oil belt extending south toward Indonesia.

Of course, this is not a new fact. In the Vietnam war period, U.S. oil companies, in collusion with the Pentagon, dispatched technicians on a nuclear submarine of the 7th Fleet and investigated oil deposits in these areas. Later they also secretly investigated oil and natural gas deposits around the Korean Peninsula, utilizing a satellite and spy planes. After the investigation, a high-ranking U.S. oil company official disclosed that prospects for oil and natural gas exploitation in these areas are very bright, with deposits larger than those in the U.S. state of Louisiana.

The Reagan administration is trying to secure oil belts around the Korean Peninsula by establishing a so-called oil zone security system. The United States has reportedly taken political measures in a bid to secure these rich oil belts.

The focus of U.S. policy toward the Korean Peninsula in the 1980's is to formulate a new policy to meet a newly developing reality pursued by the Rockefeller group. In other words, the focus of U.S. policy toward the Korean Peninsula is to realize domination over the entire peninsula to secure new oil resources. Political domination of this area can be realized only through a big-stick policy backed by military force. Military domination over the Korean Peninsula is a shortcut to secure oilfields. This is the very touchstone of the policy toward the Korean Peninsula pursued by the Reagan regime and the U.S. oil monopoly companies.

Officers and men of the South Korean Army: What we should understand from the intent of U.S. policy to secure oil deposits around the Korean Peninsula is the fact that the true color of the U.S. imperialists has not been changed and that they are today trying to dominate the entire Korean Peninsula, as in the past. You can easily understand that the South Korea-U.S. joint exercise code-named "Team Spirit 1982," which is being staged by the United States throughout South Korea, is not a mere military exercise but a preliminary war conducted in anticipation of a northward invasion and a test war closely related to the U.S. policy of military domination over the Korean Peninsula in a bid to secure oil deposits.

If a war breaks out on the Korean Peninsula, those who will suffer wartime disasters are our fellow countrymen, including officers and men of the South Korean Army. Therefore, you must not be dragged into an unjustifiable war as hired mercenary troops of the United States. Also, you must not be deprived of your precious youth.

KOREA TIMES VIEWS NORTH'S 'AGGRESSIVE POSTURE'

[Editorial: "Underground Tunnels"]

[Text] World attention seems to have been drawn again to the scene on the Korean Peninsula, where the communist regime in Pyongyang is far from ready to show any sincerity in response to our repeated calls for resuming dialogue for peaceful unification. Rather, we are gravely concerned about the strengthened war preparedness of North Korea as exposed by the United Nations Command in detailed statistics at the latest Military Armistice Commission meeting, giving a stern warning against the ever-aggressive posture of Pyongyang.

Particularly, it was the first time that the U.N. Command had officially confirmed in a MAC meeting that "there are more than a dozen underground tunnels currently being constructed from the northern side of the Demilitarized Zone into South Korea," aside from the three tunnels dug under the military demarcation line by the North which have been located by the UNC side.

The revelation was made by UNC senior delegate Rear Adm. James G. Storms III, during the 411th Military Armistice Commission meeting Tuesday, which was called by the North Korean side. In the meeting, the U.N. Command retorted to the North Korean claim that "Team Spirit 1982" was a "provocative exercise" designed to start a war in Korea.

Pyongyang's claim can hardly be justified since North Korea has shown no favorable response to an earlier UNC invitation to the communist components of the Military Armistice Commission to observe the annual training exercise being undertaken by combined Korea-U.S. armed forces. The UNC invitation was also extended to the senior members of the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission, as we recall, so that the genuinely defensive nature of the military exercise could be confirmed.

Instead of making any verbal protest against the South on this matter, the Pyongyang authorities should even now decide to accept the UNC overture for on-the-spot observation of the "Team Sprit" operations. Since the U.N. Command is willing to welcome this, the communist side will obtain a good answer to its question posed at the MAC meeting.

It is crystal clear that the Pyongyang authorities are trying to cover up their flagrant war preparations against the South by renewing their propaganda blasts at the truce meeting, while distorting even the hard facts about the "Team Spirit" war games now going on here.

The UNC senior delegate specifically pointed out that North Korea maintained a military force of 800,000, the sixth largest in the world today, while it ranked 40th in the world in terms of total population, dedicating 20 percent of its gross national product to military expenditures. The peace-loving people in the world community nowadays can hardly overlook these tangible facts about the warlike venture of the Pyongyang regime, which is desperate to beef up its offensive combat capabilities against the republic in the South.

The annual undertaking of the "Team Spirit" maneuvers on the part of the combined Korea-U.S. armed forces is nothing but our efforts to maintain the power balance with the communist regime in the North, in preparation for an eventuality that may take place in this part of Asia. Our defense strategists are immediately concerned about the possibility that Pyongyang may miscalculate the war potentiality of South Korea, as is often pointed out.

The "Team Spirit" maneuvers are construed as showing U.S. readiness to provide prompt and effective assistance to South Korea in the face of a contingency provoked by the North, in accordance with the Korea-U.S. mutual security treaty.

HANGUK ILBO WARNS JAPAN AGAINST TIES WITH NORTH

[Editorial: "Will Japan Be Duplicitous Again?"]

[Excerpts] Preparations for a ROK-Japan summit are being made, raising the hope that the pending issue between the two countries -- the ROK's request for a Japanese loan amounting to $6 billion -- will be settled at an early date.

A major Tokyo daily has reported that Prime Minister Suzuki will visit Seoul by May at the latest and settle the loan issue. This, said the newspaper, will be followed by a Japanese Government's decision to allow the entry into Japan of a North Korean fishery delegation led by Hyon Chun-kuk. If so, we cannot but feel betrayed by Japan's demonstration of duplicity.

Last June, Hyon went to Japan leading a delegation, ostensibly to discuss with the Japan-Korea Friendship League matters related to the establishment of a North Korean trade mission in Japan. However, what he did while staying in Japan was to engage in anti-ROK propaganda activities, thus raising suspicion about the intent of his visit.

Now the Japanese Government is said to allow his entry into Japan after resolving the pending issue between the ROK and Japan. What does this imply? We cannot but view this as an indication of Japan showing duplicity diplomatically.

Speaking at a joint Diet session on 25 January this year, Prime Minister Suzuki, on the subject of ROK-Japan relations, stressed mutual understanding and hoped for a smooth settlement of the loan issue. On the same occasion, Foreign Minister Sakurauchi disclosed Japan's intent to promote exchanges with North Korea in the trade, economic and cultural sectors.

When this and other facts are considered, we come to the conclusion that Japanese authorities are, for the time being, interested in double-dealing diplomacy toward both North and South Korea with the latter given more weight, and in the long run, they aim at equidistant diplomacy toward both sides of Korea.

However, such a Japanese attitude, taking advantage of Korea's division to seek profits, deserves criticism for it not only runs counter to international trust but also hinders Korea's peaceful unification and puts in jeopardy the security of Japan and the interests of the international community as well. This is because, violating the spirit of the ROK-Japan treaty, it results in encouraging North Korea'a ambitions for communizing the South.

If Japan expects the ROK's connivance at Pyongyang's approach to Japan in return for Japan's loan to the ROK, this is a grave miscalculation. The "North Korean card" of Japan does no service to the national interests of the two countries or to the good-neighbor relations between them.

San Yu's Opening Session Speech

BK160746 Rangoon Domestic Service in Burmese 1330 GMT 15 Mar 82

[Speech by President U San Yu delivered on the opening day of the second meeting of the third People's Assembly at the central conference room in the presidential compound, Rangoon, on 15 March -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Passage on review of background of current world economic crisis and problems omitted] The current world economic situation is difficult and unstable. It has repercussions for our country to a certain extent. However, our country has sufficient basic necessities like food, clothing and shelter, according to our standards, besides being able to produce sufficient food for domestic consumption we were able to export [food] abroad. Regarding energy, at present, there is considerable production of oil inside the country and various kinds of fuels have been produced and consumed.

Compared to other nonoil producing countries, our country's situation is relatively good. According to surveys carried out by experts, there are oil and natural gas in the central and southern parts of our country. Oil and natural gas have been found in areas previously thought not to have reserves when test wells have been sunk. We still have to carry out further tests to determine production capacity. Furthermore, we are in a situation where we are increasingly able to meet social needs such as in education, health, indigenous and foreign medicines. Burma has reached the stage at present when it can meet the needs for food, clothing and shelter. In other words, we are fortunate. However, we should not depend on fortune alone; it is necessary for us to work hard.

At this point, I would like to point out that goods have been produced at reasonable rates to raise the standard of living of the people according to the economic principles being practiced in the country. In producing goods for the people, efforts are being made to improve the quality and quantity of goods at a reasonable cost of production. By doing so, we are striving to stabilize commodity prices and to relieve consumers. Efforts were made to increase the production rate of agricultural goods and to produce industrial goods economically so as to enable prescription of fair prices for the consumers.

Instead of giving priority to profit, the state and cooperative sectors give their priority to consumers' welfare and recovery of capital and expenses in producing goods. We are striving to serve the interests of peasants for their income and consumers for their welfare.

Next, I would like to speak on improving the country's economy, or improving the people's living standard in accordance with the economic principles being practiced in our country. In managing economic enterprises, it is necessary to balance income and expenses and to strive for income to exceed expenses when possible. Insofar as economic enterprises are able to find ways to increase income and minimize expenses, they will be able to expand their investments in economic programs with their available capital resources. While they are still not self-sufficient in their capital resources, they will have to work with loans from abroad. In doing so, it is necessary to select and invest in enterprises which support export expansion; these enterprises also have to be the most economical, beneficial and least time consuming. As far as we can carry out these works, the state economic enterprises, which are owned by the people, will be able to serve the people's interest more. It is also necessary for the state economic enterprises to expand economically viable enterprises based on locally available raw materials. If the economic enterprises are based on imported materials, they face uncertainties in their operations in the long run. Such enterprises should be set up only if it is unavoidable. If the enterprises are set up with external loans, it is necessary that they are economically viable and are able to repay the loans, both the capital and interest, regularly within the prescribed time. If we are unable to pay back the loans, economic and political situation can become unstable as we become more indebted. We must take special care to avoid such situations.

The indigenous working people are to make continued efforts to improve their living standard regularly and steadfastly. Toward this objective, we have laid down short and long-term plans and guidelines and are working accordingly. In accordance with these guidelines, all of the indigenous working people participate in drawing up plan targets. They will gradually be able to achieve their objective of meeting the requirements in food, clothing and shelter if they work jointly and successfully and with the conviction that these plans can be successfully implemented under any given conditions.

Burma is in a situation in which it can work toward steady economic development according to plan. However, in the present world, countries cannot live in isolation. They are connected by trade or other economic ties and are dependent upon one another. According to a Burmese proverb, unpleasantness in the front of the house brings unhappiness to the back of the house. Similarly, economic problems and difficulties confronting developing countries can have direct or indirect economic and political impact on the developed countries. When there are problems and difficulties in the world economy, both the developed and developing countries have to face the negative economic effects. Instead of criticizing and blaming each other, the so-called countries of the north and south -- the rich and poor countries -- should work jointly with genuine good will to find a solution to improve the existing world situation.

The declining world economic situation which I mentioned earlier could further deteriorate into a chaotic state to the level of the economic depression of the 1930's or worse. I conclude here by urging the working people to be prepared for such an eventuality by being certain there will be enough food and an adequate standard of living in our country. [applause]

REPORTS ON SOVIET BASE AT REAM CALLED 'CALUMNIES'

BK170409 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1442 GMT 16 Mar 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 16 Mar (SPK) -- Recently Beijing radio, VOA and BBC echoed false statements, originating from Thai military sources, that the Soviet Union is expanding the port of Ream (south of Kompong Som Municipality) in order to deploy its strategy in the region and Vietnam is building an airfield at Khao Din near the Thai border.

To present such calumnies is to favor the expansionist policy of Beijing and the ambition of the U.S. imperialists who want to return to Southeast Asia. These statements, which are groundless, are aimed at duping public opinion and diverting attention from the almost daily Thai military provocations against the PRK and at disguising Thailand's conspiring with the Pol Pot criminals and the reactionary bands of Sihanouk and Son Sann.

No one can ignore that it is Thailand which gives refuge to remnants of the Pol Pot army chased out of the country by the Kampuchea people in close coordination with the Vietnamese armed forces. It is Thailand which provides all facilities for the transfer of weapons and foodstuffs from the Chinese, Americans and others to the bloody Pol Pot monsters and other Khmer reactionaries in order to give them the wherewithal to survive and commit new crimes against the Kampuchean people, causing insecurity and tension at the Kampuchean-Thai border. It is Thailand which violates the territorial integrity and sovereignty of the PRK by shelling its territory to cover infiltrations by Pol Pot terrorists and their company. It was Thailand which fired toxic chemical shells against Kampuchean civilians last 11 and 14 February and fired on a Kampuchean boat in the PRK's territorial waters and arrested its crew. It is Bangkok which was chosen as the meeting place for Khmer reactionaires in order to foster subversive acts against the legal government and to undermine the peaceful life of the Kampuchea people. It is Thailand which facilitated the U.S. military's return to the region by permitting them to use the Utaphao airbase again in return for new weapons, among which are Redeye missiles, in order to increase their stocks of arms and threaten the peace of the Indochinese countries.

Thai hostility toward the Kampuchean people did not start today but many centuries ago. At present, enamoured of peace and desirous of maintaining good relations with its neighbors, the Kampuchean people, through the voice of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, expressed their good will to live peacefully with Thailand.

It proposed, among other things, the creation of a demilitarized zone under international control aimed at ensuring security along the Khmer-Thai border. Recently, the conference of foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries held in Vientiane indicated that Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos are ready to discuss with Thailand all problems of common concern -- directly or indirectly, bilaterally or multilaterally -- without asking for diplomatic recognition.

The will for peace is evident. Far from responding to this, Thai authorities are increasing their calumnies, joining the chorus of the expansionist and imperialist circles. Such a policy is detrimental to the long term interests of the Thai people and other peoples in the region.

Consenting to talks without outside interference is a wisely reasonable policy which conforms to the interests and the aspirations of the 350 million people in Southeast Asia for a region of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation.

KAMPUCHEA DENOUNCES THAI USE OF CHEMICAL SHELLS

BK170203 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0423 GMT 16 Mar 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 15 Mar (SPK) -- In a commentary, the paper KAMPUCHEA denounced the recent premeditated use of chemical shells by the Thai army at the Kampuchea-Thailand border. According to the PRK Ministry of Foreign Affairs, on 11 and 14 February the Thai army fired many chemical shells into the Phnum Malai area inside Kampuchean territory, causing many victims among the civilian population.

It was a premeditated crime, the paper affirmed, because the Thai authorities had ordered the evacuation of the Thai inhabitants from the adjacent area and had equipped their troops with gas masks. It was a crime committed under the direction of the U.S. imperialist circles which have in vain conducted a slanderous campaign against the Soviet Union and Vietnam, observed the paper which likened the U.S.-Thai scheme to that of a thief crying "Stop thief!"

The Americans, the paper went on, do not need to go farther to look for the culprit. Some 60,000 veteran U.S. soldiers in the war of aggression against Vietnam are now suffering from the consequences of Agent Orange sprayed by tens of thousands of tons in Indochina. To belie U.S. slanders, the paper cited the INDOCHINA ISSUES published in Washington, according to which U.S. scientists have revealed that the proof supplied by the State Department to accuse Vietnam and the Soviet Union turned out to be false and lacking any scientific basis.

According to TASS, on 24 February the Thai minister of public health, Sem Phringphuangkaeo, officially declared that Thai specialists found no evidence of the use by Vietnam of the chemical weapons called yellow rain.

THAI MILITARY ACTIVITIES IN EARLY MARCH REPORTED

BK170248 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1436 GMT 16 Mar 82

["Thai Army Provocations Against Kampuchea" -- SPK headline]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 16 Mar (SPK) -- During the first 10 days of March, 15 Thai aircraft including F-5's, L-19's and UH helicopters overflew Kampuchean territory near the Thai border, especially at Phnum Malai, O Da, Poipet and Pailin, Battambang Province. Some of them penetrated as far as 4 km inside Kampuchea.

During this period, ground artillery from Thailand, namely, 105-mm guns, 120-mm mortars and recoilless guns, pounded Kampuchean territory 61 times, 7 of which were intended to cover infiltrations by Pol Pot terrorists from Thailand. On 9 March alone, an area was bombarded 3 times by 105-mm guns. The Preah Vihear-Siem Reap region suffered 9 bombardments, 4 of which were against Trapeang Kol and the Preah Vihear ruins. It was reported that in western Battambang, 14 Thai aircraft spotted for artillery fire 32 times, especially in Poipet, O Da, Kamrieng and Pailin.

On 6 and 7 March, the Pol Pot terrorists penetrated Kampuchean territory north of O Da under the cover of heavy Thai artillery. Intercepted by the combatants of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army, the intruders withdrew, leaving behind many corpses. The Koh Kong-Pursat border region suffered artillery fire from Thailand 20 times; Hill 336 alone was the target of eight bombardments. In particular, on 8 March the Kampuchean combatants put out of action 19 Pol Pot men before they could carry out their activities in the areas north, west, southwest and south of Smat Deng. The Kampuchean combatants destroyed 3 weapons, seized 8 others and more than 100 kg of explosives. The survivors took flight to Thailand.

At present, the report said, Battambang has 110,000 head of cattle -- an increase of 5,300 over last year -- 29,550 pigs and 315,900 fowl. During the main rainy season planting this year Battambang Province plans to put 306,000 hectares into production, including 281,500 hectares of rice, 1,800 hectares of subsidiary crops, 1,000 hectares of jute, 200 hectares of cotton and 1,000 hectares of sugarcane. Phnom Penh SPK at 0402 GMT on 10 March reported that 15 rice purchasing centers have been opened in Mongkolborie District, Battambang Province, and that 8,000 tons of paddy have been purchased from the people.

Kompong Thom: By the end of February, 11,307.5 tons of paddy had been sold to the state, according to Phnom Penh radio at 1200 GMT on 12 March, which added that by mid-February, 366 hectares of dry-season rice had been transplanted and 2,700 hectares of flood-receding rice sown, out of 4,000 hectares planned. In Santuk District, by 22 February, 280 hectares of rice had been transplanted, the radio said at 0400 on 9 March, noting that there are more than 7,800 oxen and buffalo in the dis ·ict.

Kratie: SPK at 1430 GMT on 12 March noted that the Kratie provincial trade service has bought more than 1,500 tons of paddy of the 5,000-ton target. Last year, Kratie Province purchased 4,000 tons.

Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchy: Phnom Penh radio at 0400 GMT on 13 March reported that by the beginning of March, peasants in the province had sold over 5,000 tons of paddy to the state. With this amount sold, peasants have fulfilled the plan, but they are continuing to sell more paddy to the state.

situation and highly appraised the satisfactory outcome achieved in the 1981 agricultural production by comparing it to that made in 1980.

In conclusion, the comrade expressed firm confidence in the party leadership, the people's consciousness and the spirit of proletarian internationalism of the fraternal and friendly socialist countries, particularly the cooperation and assistance of the Indochinese countries -- Vietnam and Laos -- and the Soviet Union, which will enable Kampuchea to achieve brilliant success in its cause of rehabilitating the economy. KYODO: POL POT SUFFERING FROM HYPERTENSION

[Text] Bangkok, March 17, KYODO -- Kampuchean guerrilla leader Pol Pot has been suffering seriously from malaria and hypertension these two months and his deputy, Chhit Choeun, is virtually leading guerrilla activities against Vietnam, according to Thai military sources. Pol Pot, commander in chief of the Kampuchean Front for National Construction (KFNC), is receiving medical care in Kampuchea near the Thai border, the sources said.

Chhit Choeun, alias Ta Mok, chief of the front's general staff, is acting for the ailing Pol Pot, they said, suggesting the Democratic Kampuchean Government leadership may soon be reshuffled, leaving some effects on its anti-Vietnam guerrilla operations.

Pol Pot, not seen publicly after his appearance before Japanese reporters in Kampuchean territory in December 1979, 11 months after the Vietnamese troops invaded Kampuchea, has been rumored to be suffering from overweight caused by arthritis medicine he took. Democratic Kampuchean sources in Bangkok denied press reports that Pol Pot was hospitalized in the Thai capital.

SON SANN SAID TO WANT IDEAS FROM KHMER ROUGE

[By Jacques Bekaert]

[Text] Paris -- Former Kampuchean Premier Son Sann has called on the Khmer Rouge "to come up with new ideas" to break the stalemate over the efforts to form anti-Vietnamese coalition among the three major Kampuchean resistance forces. He told the NATION in a recent interview here that since the Khmer Rouge are the ones who rejected the last proposal to form the coalition, it is now their responsibility to offer a breakthrough. "It is time for them to show if they are real patriots, as they claim, or if they are only interested in regaining power for themselves -- as their behaviour seems to indicate, he said.

Son Sann, the president of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), emphasized that any coalition with the Khmer Rouge would only last "the time needed to liberate the country from foreign troops." "It should be very clear that any alliance with the Khmer Rouge is limited to that crucial goal," he added.

While Son Sann was talking to the NATION, Khmer Rouge Premier Khieu Samphan and former Kampuchean head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk met in Beijing and basically agreed to the formation of a loose coalition. "I'm ready to go to Beijing anytime. I'm willing to meet Prince Sihanouk and Mr Khieu Samphan separately, and if they come up with reasonable proposals another Khmer summit could be organized in China or in any other country," the 72-year-old leader of KPNLF said.

But Son Sann never made it to Beijing when he was needed most there. Apparently angered by his "dilly-dallying," China recently began cutting off aid to his resistance group which operates on the Thai-Kampuchean border, according to an authoritative diplomatic source.

During the past three months, Son Sann has been travelling extensively in North America and Western Europe, drumming up support for his resistance group. But so far no countries have made public their intention to supply military aid to Son Sann. West Germany was the first country to have announced that it was giving non-military aid to KPNLF.

However, the aging KPNLF leader expressed satisfaction at the support he had received from several countries he visited. "We need it very badly. We need food and medicine," he said. He claimed that more than 140,000 people live in the area controlled by his resistance force. "We also need weapons to protect our people. We are worried that one day the Vietnamese might decide to attack our camps and our villages," he said.

Like Sihanouk, Son Sann said he believes in a political solution to the Kampuchean problem. "It is very important to keep the pressure on Vietnam and important not to give the impression that we are giving up to the fait accompli of the military occupation," he said.

According to Son Sann, the military strength of the KPNLF is now 9,000 armed men. He said KPNLF training schools have prepared enough cadres and officers to lead 20,000 men.

If the efforts to bring together the three main resistance groups failed Son Sann indicated that he is ready to try "a nationalist alternative" which would include Prince Sihanouk. "Prince Sihanouk has always been very clear in expressing his support for me and said many times he would back me as a prime minister while I support him as chief of state," he said. Differences remain though since the KPNLF has so far been reluctant to recognize Sihanouk's FUNCINPEC [National United front for an Independent Neutral Peaceful and Cooperative Kampuchea] as a partner.

AFP: PARIS KHMER GROUP SAYS SRV USING TOXIC GAS

NC161841 Paris AFP in English 1811 GMT 16 Mar 82

[Text] Paris, 16 Mar (AFP) -- The National Front for the Liberation of the Khmer People charged here today that several Cambodian villages had recently been bombed with "projectiles containing poison gas and yellow substances." A communique published here by the organization, which is headed by former Cambodian Premier Son Sann, specified that as a result of these bombings, which took place last March 7 and 11, "numerous civilians suffered from vertigo, nausea, diarrhea, vomiting and skin irritations."

Mr Sann's organization is involved in insurgency against the Vietnamese-supported Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh. The communique declared that "this time Vietnam will not be able to deny the use of chemical arms by its forces." The organization said it had invited several international committees to investigate its charges.

INTERVIEW WITH FOREIGN MINISTER NGUYEN CO THACH

PM111521 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 6 Mar 82 Saturday Supplement p 9

[Jose Van der Sman Hanoi interview with Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach: "I Am the Only Foreign Minister Who Has To Borrow a Suit From His Government" -- interview granted on the third day of the Tet festival]

[Text] In his ministry opposite the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum in Hanoi Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach was already waiting for me with a cup of tea. The interview took place on the third day of the Tet festival, the Vietnamese New Year which is traditionally celebrated in the bosom of the family. He pleasantly dismissed my apologies that I was making him work on this day. For, Mr Co Thach said, information is important. Too many people have too long been the victims of lies and propaganda; the truth cannot be told often enough. And friendship is also important. The Netherlands has done much for Vietnam and this is greatly appreciated. Therefore Mr Co Thach has all the time in the world.

[Question] Mr Co Thach, let us get to the heart of the matter immediately. Vietnam needs all its resources for its reconstruction. Why then does it maintain such an enormous army?

[Answer] We have had to wage war for 35 years. Not because it was our hobby, but because we were condemned to do so. First came the French, who said that they wanted to halt communism in Asia. Then came Johnson, who claimed that an end had to be made to the Russian and Chinese expansion in the region. And now it is the Chinese, who justify their aggression against Vietnam with the argument that Soviet expansionism must be countered. We have been fighting for independence and freedom. But there is no independence and freedom if you cannot sleep peacefully at night. The Americans want us to bleed to death. The Chinese have given warnings of a second invasion. A sword of Damocles is hanging over our head. China has 3.5 million soldiers. It would be able to deploy 1 million men against us without any problems. And you ask why we have such a large army? Well, it is because our enemies are many.

Do you understand how high a price we have had to pay for our independence? It is something every Vietnamese knows. Perhaps you cannot know. You have not been involved in a war, not seen destruction. Your generation is protesting against the neutron bomb and the like, but for you these are theoretical questions. We have waged three wars, and peace is more important than anything else.

[Question] Thus you have a large army to be able to make a stand against the Chinese. But why should China want to behave so aggressively toward Vietnam? Once China was an important ally....

[Answer] That is a good question. To be able to judge your friends you must look at how they treat their own family and friends. Look at the Great Cultural Revolution in China. It had nothing to do with culture. It was a destructive civil war, a bloodbath. They behaved like barbarians in their own country. Look at the power changeovers in Beijing. Deng Xiaoping climbed to the top, was reviled and then climbed again. That could only happen in China. Look at relations with the Soviet Union. Once it was China's greatest ally, now it is its greatest enemy.

I tell you, the Chinese change their friends and enemies as often as they change their underwear. In Bangkok the other day I gave the Thai foreign minister a good piece of advice. He told me that China would intervene if ever a Vietnamese soldier set foot on Thai soil. Apart from telling him that that would never happen and that it has never happened in the past, I answered as follows: You must, of course, decide yourselves which friends you choose, but do not be so stupid about history. The Chinese are totally unreliable as allies; they are traitors.

Once our relations with China were better than relations between Bangkok and Beijing are now, and nevertheless they betrayed us during the war with the Americans. After Nixon's visit to China Mao Zedong told Prime Minister Pham Van Dong that his broom was not long enough to sweep Taiwan clean and that ours was not long enough to get the Americans out of South Vietnam. He wanted to halt reunification and force us to recognize the puppet regime in the south. He had sacrificed Vietnam for the sake of ties with the United States. When the Americans began to bomb Hanoi our defense pact with China suddenly turned out to be worthless. No Chinese antiaircraft defense came. Mao had simply torn up our agreement.

[Question] But Mao is dead and a different regime is in power....

[Answer] Nothing has changed. The Chinese are the most stupid people in the world. They only work from their own interests. They consider that it is in their interest that chaos is created in the world. Everywhere they try to sow unrest, everywhere they interfere. There is a Chinese saying: Sit quietly on the mountain and watch the tigers fight each other in the valley. They set NATO against the Warsaw Pact, the ASEAN nations against Vietnam, the United States against the Soviet Union. Their basic philosophy is that as much chaos as possible should be created in the world so that they themselves will have the chance to catch up in the economic and military fields and become the greatest power in the world. It is incredible that the Americans could be so naive about China as to help it modernize its army.

[Question] Your view of the future is fairly pessimistic. Will there never be a time when it will be necessary to talk with the Chinese?

[Answer] Certainly. But this accords well with my pessimism. We have high hopes that we will be able to live in peace with China sooner or later. This continuing state of war is not in their interest either. It also causes suffering for them in the long term. If things continue as they are at present not much can come of their four modernizations plan. This is something that they will have to realize themselves.

[Question] The fact remains that the Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea worries them enormously. Should this problem not be removed first?

[Answer] The Chinese are forever saying that they intend to punish us because of the invasion of Kampuchea. But they do not add that this is the third time in 35 years that Vietnamese troops have been in Kampuchea. The first two times we simply left, and we will do so again this time. I guarantee that all Vietnamese troops will be withdrawn from Kampuchea.

[Question] All troops?

[Answer[I repeat -- all troops.

[Question] The question is: When?

[Answer] But, Madam, the date has already been fixed. We will withdraw our troops from Kampuchea the day after the Chinese threat ceases to exist.

[Question] You mean if the Chinese-supported Khmer Rouge resistance is eliminated?

[Answer] China must stop threatening us. Then we would withdraw immediately. In this much we are even less ambiguous than the Americans are toward Europe. You have U.S. soldiers in Europe. Have they ever told you when they will withdraw them? Really, sometimes the West's hypocrisy is incredible. If Vietnam is the country concerned, different yardsticks are always used.

[Question] In Europe it is a question of democracy and thus of a choice. The Europeans have the feeling that they have some say in the U.S. presence. But how are things with the Kampucheans?

[Answer] Indeed? We have a different experience of the Americans. But there have been elections in Kampuchea. You must know that?

[Question] And so the Kampucheans have been able to choose?

[Answer] You are leaving for Kampuchea tomorrow. Just ask them if they want Pol Pot back.... Anyway, what is democracy? Is there only one definition if it? Every Vietnamese farmer here has a rifle to get out of his closet if the Chinese invade again. He could use that rifle to overthrow the present government, but that does not happen. That is also democracy.

[Question] Let us stay with Kampuchea then. Explain again the reasons for the Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea.

[Answer] First, Pol Pot wanted to invade Vietnam; there was a border war which lasted for years. Now you will naturally ask how a little country like Kampuchea could take it into its head to want to conquer a large country like Vietnam. Well, they knew that they were assured of Chinese support. Moreover, Pol Pot was mad, that much at least should be clear to you. He was murdering his own people. When the people rebelled against this we supported them. That is our right, a right that is even enshrined in the UN Charter. We have the right to help people to eliminate such criminals. In addition we also had the right to defend ourselves. Did we therefore have to march through to Phnom Penh? Indeed we did, just as the Americans, British and Russians had to penetrate to Berlin to eliminate Hitler, and they are still there.

But there is something else I would like to explain about Kampuchea. The despotic rulers of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea have always seen these three countries as an indivisible whole. Our fates have always been linked, because we formed one and the same battlefield. We waged a common war against a common enemy on a common battlefield. In the past there was solidarity and cooperation. This solidarity was of crucial importance in our struggle for independence. It cannot be broken off just like that. Fate has welded Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea together.

[Question] Up to now Vietnam has paid something of a high price for this solidarity. Has this price not perhaps been too high, bearing in mind the wretched situation in which the country finds itself?

[Answer] It is a very high price. For instance, we cannot now save our energies for our own reconstruction, and you have seen yourself how poor we are. This suit that I am wearing specially for you is not my own, for I could not afford one. I am the only foreign minister in the world who has to borrow a suit from his government. But you are referring to the policy of bleeding to death. I can say this. Things are bad for us, very bad. But things are better than they were. And I mean this literally. The farmers in Vietnam may be poor, but not as poor as they were. Before they had nothing, at most a reed hut. Now they often have a stone house and a bicycle and a piece of land. And when you ask a farmer what he will do if the Chinese come, he answers that he will fight. Do you understand? He will fight to defend his stone house and his bicycle and his piece of land.

[Question] And in the south?

[Answer] In the south, too.

[Question] And in Ho Chi Minh City?

[Answer] Ah, that is another question. Our reform measures after liberation led to a fall in the living standards of many of the inhabitants of Ho Chi Minh City. I am not talking about the workers here, for the same is true of them as is true of the farmers. I am talking about the middle class and the intellectuals. They chose to leave the country. Alas, I tell you, how this hurts Vietnam. The problem of the boat people was very painful for us in particular because we lost our intelligentsia and our fishing fleet.

But we let them go because they could not be held back, unless through the use of terror. This goes hand in hand with corruption; that is unavoidable in Vietnam. But there is one difference between us and the countries around us -- we have no corruption at the top of the state apparatus. And this, we hope, will make it possible to master this problem in the long term. We have agreed to the legal departure of around 1,000 Vietnamese every month. Corruption, bureaucracy and the like are disrupting this program, but our intentions are good.

[Question] The Netherlands Government is one of those governments which doubt this. I could give you the names of people who have already been waiting for years to be reunited with their families in The Netherlands but who cannot get an exit visa.

[Answer] Yes, that is possible. I have repeatedly explained to your government that there are four criteria under which people are not allowed to leave -- when they are in the army, if they have a criminal record, if they possibly know state secrets or if they have what is for us an important profession, such as medicine or education.

[Question] That is a broad spectrum....

[Answer] We cannot take any risks and we need no further blood-letting. But we do what we can, for you must not think that we are totally insensitive to the humanitarian aspects of these questions.

[Question] Let us return to the price Vietnam has paid, especially in the international political arena. The initial good will which your country enjoyed has since been lost....

[Answer] What do you mean by good will? Everyone says that we are now isolated, but just take a look at the past. As a boy I had to bow to the French and could get a kick from the French police. Now the same French police must escort me when I ride in a limousine through Paris. As a boy I had to learn that my forefathers were French and that Vietnam had not existed. Now we have a flag and a seat in the United Nations. During the war with the Americans, they -- the criminals -- had a seat in the United Nations and we -- the victims -- were not admitted. I can now stand up in New York and throw down the Americans' crimes against humanity at their feet. Madam, we now have respect, a name, a passport and a place on the map!

The world has learned to respect Vietnam, even though we are poor and have great difficulties. But the difficulties are small in comparison with the past and they will be overcome. We can see the light at the end of the tunnel. Difficulties have never been a reason for Vietnam to bow its head. Ho Chi Minh taught us that if you intend to win then you will have enough wisdom to reach that goal.

But if you want to lose there are many ways of taking to your heels. It is not in our nature to choose to take to our heels, that must have become obvious over the last 20 years.

The Americans never understood that and they still do not understand it. They still do not understand why they lost the war. In New York journalists have asked me if I was not impressed by the riches and power of the United States? And I answered: U.S. riches are dazzling. Rockefeller earns more than our whole country. But your poverty is also dazzling; in the Bronx, in Harlem, who is talking about power here? I can only see U.S. weakness.

[Question] Strong words, Mr Co Thach, but let us return to the other great powers in this world. Has Vietnam not been so busy keeping the tiger from its front door that it has not noticed the bear which is slipping in by the backdoor?

[Answer] Aha, we are talking about the polar bear. I understand what you want to get at. It is claimed that we have always succeeded in keeping a balance in our relations with the major powers, but that we have now lost it. Rubbish. The principle of balance has never been a dogma in our foreign policy.

It would mean that we consciously leaned on others, and that has never been our intention. Our independence is based on our own energies. We won the war ourselves, and we are now striving to solve our problems ourselves. For instance, by motivating people to produce more food, so that we need to knock at other people's doors as little as possible.

[Question] But we were talking about the polar bear.... You won't deny that you need him?

[Answer] Certainly we need help; history has taught us that the Russians are our most loyal friends. They have never left us in the lurch, not even when Nixon visited Moscow and tried to come to some sort of arrangement. You can read about that in the Kissinger memoirs. But that is not to say that we would simply sell our independence which we have had to pay for in blood. Our friends know this very well. We are economically dependent on them, but we will change that. Moreover, we will pay back every ruble.

[Question] But how will you pay back the Russians? That is the question. As a socialist you must have learned that economic dependence can degenerate only too quickly into political dependence.

[Answer] Yes, yes, I always learned my lessons well.

[Question] How are things going with the Soviet Union's request for its own military base in Vietnam?

[Answer] The Russian Navy has harbor rights in Vietnam. The Americans and Chinese are screaming blue murder about this. But do they have a monopoly over land and sea in East Asia? They have only misused their rights to bomb and blockade us. The same cannot be said of the Russians. But up to now we have not given the Russians permission for a base in Vietnam.

[Question] Up to now?

[Answer] Not up to now, but that does not mean that it will never happen.

[Question] When would Vietnam give its permission then?

[Answer] If the Chinese persist in their attempts to destroy our country, we would perhaps in the long run have no other choice.

[Question] Mr Co Thach, many thanks for this interview.

[Answer] Madam, it was an honor. When you are back in The Netherlands and have anything more to ask, then you must write to me. Correct information is the only guarantee of peace in this world.

[Question] There are people who say that Vietnam did not win the war with weapons but with words...

[Answer] No, Vietnam won the war because it had patience. The Americans think in terms of 2 years, the Europeans of 10 years, but we think in terms of 30 years.

[Question] And China?

[Answer] China? Sometimes I ask myself whether the Chinese really think at all.

COMMUNIQUE WELCOMES EMULATION MOVEMENT RESULTS

OW151056 Hanoi VNA in English 0711 GMT 15 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 15 -- The Central Emulation Board, in a communique issued here today, warmly welcomed the initial results of the patriotic socialist emulation movement launched throughout the country last year in honour of the Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of Vietnam.

The communique reviews new achievements in all branches of the economy, with particular stress on agriculture. It says that so far almost 1.6 million hectares have been put under rice, the acreage under soya-bean is 2.5 times as large as this time last year, millions more of trees have been planted during the recent Spring Arbor Festival and more than 28,000 have left the delta areas to take part in building new economic zones. The aquatic-product industry, along with stepping up fisheries, in the first two months of this year achieved 90 percent of the export plan for the first quarter.

Industrial branches have continusouly broadened their initiative in production and business transactions, under the slogan: "Produce more and better even with as much and less equipment and materials than before". As a result, the quantity of certain consumer goods produced in this quarter increases over the same period of last year, the output of electricity is up to target, the coal mines maintain the rate of extraction of the dry season. Many new possibilities have emerged. The Bim Son cement plant has produced more than 30,000 tonnes after completion of the first production system and is trying to meet its quarterly plan of 50,000 tonnes. The Vinh Phu paper mill, which has also completed the first production system, turned out from 70 to 100 tonnes of product on certain days. Workers at various construction sites have completed on schedule new installations they had chosen as "projects in honour of the party congress".

New factors have also appeared in other economic and social fields. The changes in the managerial structure and the step by step perfection of the piece-rate system and of the systems of wages and incentives have had a healthy impact on the development of production.

The communique stresses that with these new achievements, the emulation movement in honour of the party congress has created a good beginning for 1982 and favourable conditions for all levels and branches of activity to overcome their immediate difficulties and further boost production and thrift to fulfill the state plan.

[Text] Sen Gen Vo Nguyen Giap, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and concurrently chairman of the Central Committee for Zoning Economic Areas, recently worked with this Committee and the Central Institute for Zoning and Planning [vieenj phaan vungh quy hoachj trung wowng]. Attending this working session were among others, representatives from the State Planning Commission and the Office of the Council of Ministers.

Nguyen Van Bien, member of the Standing Body of the Central Committee for Zoning Economic Areas and director of the Central Institute for Zoning and Planning, delivered a report on the past year's tasks and guidelines and tasks for 1982 and subsequent years concerning zoning, planning and distribution of the production force.

The vice chairman of the Council of Ministers praised cadres and personnel of the Central Committee for Zoning Economic Areas and the Central Institute for Zoning and Planning for overcoming difficulties and scoring notable achievements.

Over the past years, the committee and the institute have coordinated with various central and local sectors to initiate many new tasks and score many achievements, thereby contributing positively to formulating various plans to improve economic and social management. Noteworthy were tasks concerning the formulation of a general state plan for developing vast and key areas, such as the Mekong River Delta area and various specialized cultivation areas.

The committee and the institute also participated in various projects aimed at solving a number of the state's objectives in dealing with problems concerning food and grain, labor distribution, the building of models for developing districts, the selection of key and grain-rich districts and so forth. The committee and the institute are accelerating tasks on the establishment of a general chart for distribution of the production force, a key scientific and technical research project of the state.

Vo Nguyen Giap added: Due to shortcomings in the organization and development of scientific branches, tasks concerning the distribution of the production force, zoning and planning have not yet met essential scientific standards,nor have they satisfactorily and promptly met the requirements for perfecting planning and improving social and managerial organization.

Dealing with guidelines and tasks for 1982 and subsequent years, the vice chairman of the Council of Ministers stressed that cadres and personnel of the Central Committee for Zoning Economic Areas and the Central Institute for Zoning and Planning must fully realize the profound importance of the tasks concerning zoning, planning and distribution of the production force in the political, economic and social domains. They must strive to build strong and comprehensive scientific branches in order to supervise party and state organs effectively.

The committee and the institute must closely coordinate with the State Planning Commission, the State Science and Technology Commission, the State Capital Construction Commission and sectors and localities to develop more effectively the establishment of a general plan for the distribution of the production force up to the year 2000. They must also improve the formulation of the state general plan for developing key economic areas and plans for developing provinces and districts. They must combine these tasks and tasks concerning the establishment of state economic and social development strategy with all tasks concerning national economic planning. They must place emphasis on participating in the building of scientific bases for the Third 5-Year Plan and contribute to satisfactory and rational distribution of the production force now and in the future. They must strengthen international cooperation by satisfactorily receiving and utilizing various types of Soviet assistance given to the tasks of establishing our nation's first general plan for distribution of the production force.

Comrade Vo Nguyen Giap specifically urged various echelons of the party committees and leadership cadres to pay attention to consolidating the organization and system of various scientific research organs, building and improving the managerial system and organizing and satisfactorily exploiting the available contingent of cadres while training and fostering research and managerial cadres. They must also pay attention to gradually building up the contingent of scientific cadres for the zoning of economic areas and strengthening the production force to meet new economic and social requirements ad the requirements set forth by the VCP congress on tasks concerning the establishment of long-term economic, scientific and technological strategies of our nation.

ARMY DAILY REPORTS ON OIL SECTOR CONFERENCE

[Do Van Nha report]

[Text] The Gasoline and Oil Department of the General Rear Services Department has recently held a conference of the all-army gasoline and oil sector to discuss measures aimed at using, managing and saving gasoline and oil in the current situation. Numerous delegates from various military regions, army corps, armed branches and services, institutes and schools and units currently performing internaitonal duties attended.

The conference was unanimous in its assessment that, thanks to the attention and direct guidance of the comrade commanders at all echelons in achieving a balance among different tasks, many units have saved tens of thousands of liters of gasoline and oil without compromising their building, training, combat readiness and combat duties.

These units included the 1st Military Region, the 5th Military Region, Quyet Thang Corps, Huong Giang Corps, the armored command, the engineers command, the artillery command, the air defense force, the air force, the 52d Trucking Battalion of the General Rear Services Department, and the 32d Regiment of the General Technical Department. Losses resulting from gasoline and oil management and transportation have been reduced from 18 percent to 6 percent.

Recently, however, more than a few units have not only failed to economize in using and managing gasoline and oil, but have also caused serious wastage in many tasks. In particular, there has not been harmonious cooperation between upper and lower specialized organs in carrying out plans for gasoline and oil delivery and receipt.

The delegates suggested that numerous measures be applied in the gasoline and oil saving movement. First of all, importance must be attached to the formulation of gasoline and oil consumption plans. The key measure in saving gasoline and oil is to make precise calculations in any task. At the same time, this measure must be coordinated with other gasoline and oil saving measures in many aspects of the operations of various types of mechanized vehicles and engines.... However, all technical requirements regarding the operations of these mechanical vehicles must be met.

The conference devoted much time to discussing measures aimed at using, managing and saving gasoline and oil on the basis of seriously implementing various regulations, systems and norms regarding gasoline and oil consumption. The conference also discussed measures designed to save gasoline and oil in using technical equipment on land, in the air and on the sea. At the same time, these measures are aimed at reducing fuel losses during the process of transport by land, by sea and by field pipelines, including losses occuring during storage.

The comrade deputy chief of the General Rear Services Department thoroughly explained the directive of the Council of Ministers, the resolution of the VCP Central Committee Military Commission and guidelines of the Ministry of Defense regarding the use, management and saving of gasoline and oil. All people must be motivated to consider the saving of each ounce of fuel, raw material and supplies and each dong to be both a responsibility and a manifestation of revolutionary ethics and quality. Wherever there are gasoline and oil depots and pipelines, we must work in close coordination with the local administration and people to protect them and to prevent losses and illegal use of gasoline and oil.

NORTHERN PROVINCES GRAIN PROCUREMENT REPORTED

BK150928 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 14 Mar 82

[Text] According to the Ministry of Food, as of 28 February the northern provinces and cities had delivered to state granaries a volume of grain equivalent to nearly 70 percent of the total grain collection norm for the 1981 10th-month crop season, with 92 percent of the grain procurement completed, 90 percent of the agricultural tax plan completed and 94 percent of the surplus purchases plan completed. [figures as heard]

Eight provinces and one city in the north have overfulfilled their grain obligation norms. They are Ha Nam Ninh, Ha Son Binh, Thanh Hoa, Ha Bac, Nghe Tinh, Hai Hung, Thai Binh, Son La and Haiphong. Son La, which takes the lead, has overfulfilled its grain obligation norm by 11 percent. Meanwhile, Vinh Phu Province and Hanoi have been able to fulfill only 80 percent of their plan norms.

As many as 92 districts and 2,980 agricultural cooperatives in the north have also fulfilled their grain obligation norms. In Ha Bac, Nghe Tinh and Thanh Hoa Provinces, the movement to encourage the peasants to deliver grain to the state on an exchange or loan basis has produced good initial results.

Grain procurement -- particularly the collection of subsidiary crops, only 33.5 percent of the plan completed -- remains a tremendous task for these provinces. The Ministry of Food, therefore, requests that all localities concentrate guidance and efforts in order to further accelerate this task.

SAKURAUCHI SAYS SOVIET MISSILE FREEZE 'DOUBTFUL'

OW180355 Tokyo KYODO in English 0336 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 18 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi expressed doubt Thursday about a Soviet proposal for a freeze on medium-range missiles in Europe announced by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Tuesday.

Replying to a Socialist questioner at the upper house Budget Committee, the minister said it is doubtful whether the Brezhnev proposal could live up to a wish for the reduction of existing missiles. While citing the high capability of Soviet SS-20 missiles, Sakurauchi said that, even if missile number should be frozen as proposed by Moscow and the Soviets continue to deploy medium-range missiles in its Ural area, Western Europe would still be under the threat of Soviet missiles.

FOREIGN MINISTRY PREVIEWS SAKURAUCHI'S U.S. TRIP

[By Masaru Imai]

[Text] Tokyo, March 18 (KYODO) -- Japan's Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will lay greater emphasis on international problems than bilateral affairs when he meets with U.S. leaders in Washington next week, according to Foreign Ministry officials here. The officials say that Poland, aid to the troubled Caribbean region and strained U.S.-China relations will be high on the agenda for the talks, which precede the seven-nation Paris summit in June and the U.N. Special Session on Disarmament. However, the foreign minister will hardly be able to avoid the bilateral trade and defense issues during his five-day stay in Washington.

Leaving Saturday on his first foreign tour since becoming foreign minister last November, Sakurauchi is due to meet with Secretary of State Alexander Haig and President Ronald Reagan early next week. A breakfast meeting with U.S. Cabinet officials in charge of economic affairs and a separate discussion with congressmen concerned with trade issues with Japan are also scheduled.

Amid growing U.S. frustration over Japan's dollar 18 billion trade surplus last year and increasing unemployment in the United States, the Americans will press the foreign minister to take more drastic steps to alleviate the trade imbalance. Japan has introduced measures to cut tariffs and ease or lift 67 nontariff barriers, and has set up an Office of Trade Ombudsman to deal with grievances raised by American and European businessmen. Japan and the United States have also agreed to start working-level negotiations in Washington next month on expanding Japan's import of farm products.

Sakurauchi is unlikely to present any additional concrete liberalization measures but will explain that Japanese officials are working hard on further market-opening measures on a step-by-step basis. According to the ministry officials, Sakurauchi is expected to discuss security problems with Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci "from a general point of view."

A more detailed discussion on the security issue will be made when Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger visits Tokyo later this month, they added. They said that the U.S. officials calling for greater military efforts by Japan are appreciative of the 7.75 percent increase in Japan's defense spending in the fiscal 1982 budget, which outpaced the overall budget expansion of 6.2 percent.

In regard to international affairs, Sakurauchi is expected to emphasize the need for a uniform stance by Western bloc nations against the Soviet Union and Poland. The foreign minister will endorse President Reagan's plan to promote economic development in Central America.

He is also expected to express Japan's concern over the future of U.S.-China relations mired by Washington's decision to sell spare fighter aircraft parts to Taiwan. The officials said the foreign minister will stress that good U.S.-China relations are important for stability and security in Asia.

FRANCE'S JOBERT WARNS OF EUROPEAN PROTECTIONISM

OW180737 Tokyo KYODO in English 0720 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 18 (KYODO) -- French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert warned Thursday that unless steps are taken to reduce Europe's dollar 10 billion trade deficit with Japan, protectionist measures could be introduced in Europe within six months. "I would be willing to bet on this," Jobert told a luncheon at the Foreign Correspondent's Club here.

Winding up four days of talks with Japanese leaders prior to French President Francois Mitterrand's state visit here next month, Jobert said one of Mitterrand's goals would be to make Japan aware of the urgency of this problem and the need to find good solutions. "The resources of protectionism are infinite," Jobert said and called for breaking down the barriers which "some countries hide behind in order to bombard other countries which are more open." His words were a veiled reference to difficulties faced by European exporters in the Japanese market whereas Japanese exports to Europe in recent years have soared.

French and Japanese officials failed to agree in trade talks here this week on ways to reduce France's dollar 1 billion deficit with Japan by improving its sales of brandy, leather goods, foodstuffs and other items in the Japanese market. "But it's not just a question of brandy," Jobert said. "It's much more a question of balance -- economic, trade and monetary balance, and also political balance in the world."

He said Mitterrand's coming visit and the summit conference of the seven major industrialized nations in Versailles in June would be important in coordinating views between Japan and the industrialized nations. "The basic issue is not who is more or less protectionist," Jobert said, but what he called "organized free trade" -- how to reconcile free trade with balanced trade and with maintaining the standard of living in less favorable endowed nations.

Describing Mitterrand as "a man with a sense of history," Jobert said the French president was determined to make his visit to Japan meaningful, not just one of protocol or routine.

SUZUKI DISCUSSES ROK'S REQUEST FOR ECONOMIC AID

OW171247 Tokyo KYODO in English 1210 GMT 17 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 17 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday revealed his intention to make the final decision on South Korea's pending request for a dollar 6 billion loan from Japan.

Suzuki made his intention known during a meeting with Ken Yasui, chairman of the Dietmen's League for Japan-South Korea Friendship, at the prime minister's office in the Diet building. He was replying to Yasui's request that the government settle the issue before early way.

The government originally planned to send Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi to South Korea to hold high-level talks with the Seoul regime on the economic assistance issue. But at the Wednesday meeting with Yasui Suzuki said he would make a personal effort to settle the issue at an appropriate time. His remark was taken to mean that a political decision would be made on the issue at the final stage of bilateral negotiations in order to break the deadlock in the talks.

KIM HUI-CHUN SPEECH AT RALLY HITS 'TEAM SPIRIT'

SK160657 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1200 GMT 15 Mar 82

[Speech by Kim Hui-chun, chairman of the Kangwon Provincial People's Committee at 14 March mass rally in Wonsan -- recorded]

[Text] Comrades: A grave situation in which a new war can break out at any moment is being created today in the southern part of our fatherland due to fanatic war provocation maneuvers by the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their lackeys, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique.

The U.S. imperialists have been staging large-scale war exercise rackets codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" for nearly a month since 13 February, making our republic a target of their attack. Mobilized in these exercises, which will last until 26 April, are forces numbering 161,600 including U.S. troops occupying South Korea, U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine units from various military bases on the U.S. mainland and the Pacific including Okinawa, Hawaii, Guam and the Philippines, as well as the South Korean puppet army, and a large quantity of combat equipment. The U.S. imperialists also mobilized the military personnel of various divisions belonging to the Rapid Deployment Force, combat equipment, large airplanes and transport ships and other warships in this operation.

What is noteworthy about these military exercises is that the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys are preparing in earnest a nuclear war in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists are massively hurling into the military exercises U.S. Air Force units, Marines specialized in nuclear war and special service personnel.

What is also noteworthy about the current exercises is that they are aggressive war exercises presupposing an all-out attack on our republic. Following airlift and deployment operations in the first stage of the military exercises, which will be staged in three steps, the U.S. imperialists are planning to stage a full-scale joint operation between U.S. troops and the South Korean puppet army from 26 March to 2 April. Making our republic a target of their attack from land, sea and air, the rascals are going to wage an all-out offensive operation including landing, airlift and close support operations, thus making it a highlight of their exercises.

All facts show that the current "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise rackets, unlike the previous exercises which continued for nearly 7 years since 1976, are a test war and a preparatory war to invade our republic at a desired time by completing the preparations for nuclear war in Korea.

At a time when our party and the government of our republic are making every effort to achieve peace and peaceful reunification of our country and voices demanding early realization of the plan for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Korea and an early convocation of the 100-man joint conference are growing louder among all compatriots at home and abroad with each passing day, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascist clique are leading the situation to the brink of war by staging reckless war exercise rackets.

We sternly denounce their criminal war provocation maneuvers in the name of this meeting with surging national indignation, branding them as a premeditated provocation to trigger a nuclear war in Korea and a grave criminal act disturbing peace in the Far East and the world. [shouts of "The U.S. imperialist aggressors should immediately stop the 'Team Spirit 1982' war rackets!"]

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their aggressive policy are the cause of all misfortunes of our people, a basic obstacle to the reunification of our country and a catalyst of war in Korea. From the first day of their occupation of South Korea, the U.S. imperialists have pursued the wicked goal of keeping South Korea as their colony, invading Korea and dominating the entire world by utilizing South Korea as their military stronghold. They have turned the southern part into a powder keg and military beachhead.

The U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war against Korea reached a more grave stage recently. Stressing the strategic importance of the Korean Peninsula, the U.S. imperialists increased the offensive capability of U.S. troops occupying South Korea and the puppet army and are modernizing their equipment.

The U.S. imperialists are intensifying military aid to the South Korean puppets. They are even dragging the Japanese reactionaries into implementation of their policy of aggressive war. The alleged emergency in the Far East, stepped up recently by U.S. and Japanese reactionaries, is a plot to drag Japanese aggressive troops into the war of aggression against Korea by forming the U.S.-Japan-South Korea tripartite military alliance. Responding to the U.S. imperialists' instigation, the Japanese reactionaries are attempting to gain a chance to invade Korea, raving about joint security between Japan and South Korea. They are supporting on a large-scale the South Korean defense industry while intensifying military collusion with the South Korean puppets.

The new war provocation maneuvers, which have increased in South Korea, are reaching a more dangerous stage by the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique. Babbling about all-out security and promotion of national strength, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is reinforcing the puppet army and building new military bases. It is running amok with modernization of equipment of the South Korean Army and promotion of the defense industry. The Chon Tu-hwan clique, begging for the permanent occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialist aggressors, committed an intolerable crime by offering all areas of South Korea to the aggressors as a training site for nuclear war, following the U.S. imperialists' policy of war.

The bellicose elements, turning all of South Korea into a training site for nuclear war, raved about peaceful reunification, putting forward a so-called reunification proposal, pilot projects and so forth. This is intolerable deceit and nonsense. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is the murderer who brutally massacred countless numbers of his fellow countrymen demanding democratization and peaceful reunification of the country. Thus he has already lost any political and moral qualification to attend a table of negotiations. While staging a deceitful commutation farce recently with some political prisoners, including Kim Tae-chung, the Chon Tu-hwan clique massively arrested many patriots and imprisoned them. It is slandering us by fabricating the so-called international assassination conspiracy incident and running wild with anticommunist racket. All the criminal maneuvers committed today by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique clearly show that they do not want dialogue and peaceful reunification in Korea and that they only advance along the road of confrontation and war.

The U.S. imperialists should immediately stop their grave playing with fire, disturbing peace in Korea and the world under a deceitful signboard, give up their ambition for aggression on our country and withdraw at once taking along all lethal weapons, including nuclear weapons, that they have introduced into South Korea.

The Japanese reactionaries should not follow the U.S. imperialists' policy of war aggravating tension on the Korean Peninsula. They should stop encouraging the South Korean puppets.

The Chon Tu-hwan group, engrossed in a frantic war clamor for murdering fellow countrymen hand in glove with outside forces, must stop at once the criminal war exercises, give up fascist repression and step down from power without delay.

Workers, farmers, students and intellectuals and other people from all walks of life in South Korea should courageously rise in a nationwide struggle to drive out the U.S. imperialists and to eliminate the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique -- a most vicious nation seller and fascist hangman.

Today, all people in the province are confronted with grave and glorious tasks to step up socialist construction while reliably safeguarding the socialist cause and the revolutionary gains against the fanatic war provocation maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys.

All workers should remain faithful to the chuche revolutionary cause to the end in rock-firm unity around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. We should step up the chuche-orientation of the entire society and the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture, by upholding the programmatic report by the great leader at the Sixth KWP Congress and the militant tasks put forward in his new year's message.

We should effect a great revolutionary upsurge on all fronts of socialist construction so as to greet the 70th birthday of the great leader as the greatest national festival, and a grand political celebration. We, directly facing the enemies, should make full preparations and heighten revolutionary vigilance so that we can smash the enemies at one blow if they dare attack us.

Let us all vigorously advance to achieve the complete victory of socialism and the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland in firm unity around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, peerless patriot and national hero. [Shouts of "The U.S. imperialist aggressors should immeidately stop the 'Team Sprit 1982' war rackets!"]

REINFORCEMENT OF U.S. 'TEAM SPIRIT' FORCES NOTED

SK180455 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0332 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 18 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors on March 16 hurled the Okinawa-based U.S. Marine Air Support Unit into the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, according to a report. These air pirates will reportedly participate in the provocative landing operation exercise in a simulated attack on the northern half of the DPRK.

The U.S. imperialists are mobilizing a total of over 160 military aircraft in this frantic landing operation rehearsal. Earlier, they dispatched military airplanes from the Clark air base, the Philippines, to participate in the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises. They are whipping up a war atmosphere, announcing that more than 300 military aircraft would be moved and deployed in South Korea till the end of this month.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES U.S. CENTRAL AMERICA POLICY

SK180529 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0428 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 18 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today demands that the U.S. imperialists should withdraw their hands of aggression and interference from El Salvador and discontinue their aggressive manoeuvres against Cuba and Nicaragua. Under the title "U.S. Imperialists Must Withdraw Their Hands of Interference From Central American Region," a signed commentary of the paper says:

Painting a distorted picture of the situation with the allegation that the anti-dictatorship struggle of the Salvadoran people is engineered and assisted by someone, the U.S. ruling circles even let loose the outburst that a U.S. military intervention is needed in the solution of the Salvadoran question. This is an insult to the just cause of the Salvadoran people. And this reveals the brigandish intention of U.S. imperialism to prolong the remaining days of the Salvadoran dictators by strength.

Noting that the U.S. imperialists are increasing "military aid" to the Salvadoran dictators and going to stage a "referendum" farce in El Salvador on March 28 to put the garb of "legitimacy" on the fascist dictatorial regime, the commentary says: Facts prove that the U.S. imperialists are the very ones who are standing in the way of the struggle of the Salvadoran people for genuine freedom and progress and the root cause of the aggravation of the Salvadoran situation.

In an effort to mislead world opinion and justify their military intervention in El Salvador, however, the U.S. imperialists are stringing out the preposterous sophism that the Salvadoran situation has become complicated because of the supply of arms and troops by Cuba and Nicaragua.

Cuba and Nicaragua are making every possible effort for peace and security in this region and share common interest in the independent development of the Caribbean area. It is none other than these countries that are suffering aggression and threat of U.S. imperialism.

The real purpose of U.S. imperialism in its anti-Cuba and anti-Nicaragua campaign is to suppress with strength the struggle of the Central American people for independence against imperialism and find a pretext for aggression and interference in this region. The U.S. imperialists hate those countries taking the road of anti-imperialism and independence as a thorn in their flesh; they are desperately trying to check the revolutionary struggle of the people which is daily growing with a chain reaction. Part of these machinations is the NATO military exercises of unprecedented scale launched by the U.S. imperialists in the Caribbean area and massive provocative military exercises dubbed "Ocean Venture-82" scheduled from mid-April.

If the U.S. imperialists think that they can check with strength the struggle of the Central American people against dictatorship and for democracy, it is an anachronistic dream. The just cause of the peoples of Cuba, Nicaragua, El Salvador and other Central American countries is enjoying active support of progressive people of the world including our people.

The U.S. imperialists must withdraw their hands of aggression and intervention from El Salvador and give up their aggressive manoeuvres against Cuba and Nicaragua.

NODONG SINMUN FLAYS CHON FOR REMARKS AT KWANGJU

SK180513 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0408 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 18 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today hits hard at the outcry for "control on population growth" let out by traitor Chon Tu-hwan when he showed up in Kwangju, the city of bloodbath, in his "local inspection." On March 16, traitor Chon Tu-hwan asked the puppet South Cholla provincial "governor" how many people died in the uprising in Kwangju in May the year before last year. Hearing the answer that "many mobs died," he drivelled that the population "grows explosively" every year in South Korea and this "must be cured at any cost."

This gabble of traitor Chon Tu-hwan revealed his thirst for the blood of compatriots; it meant that the killing of thousands of people in the Kwangju uprising did not matter when the population "is growing explosively" and that he would reinforce the sanguinary military fascist dictatorship and suppress and murder without mercy the South Korean people opposed to it in the future.

The author of the commentary continues: Traitor Chon Tu-hwan's trash about "control on population growth" that day only revealed his true colour as a truculent fascist tyrant. He is the murderer who, already when he was holding the post of security commander of the puppet army, cried that "the anti-institutional elements must be exterminated" for "national security," even if "the South Korean population must be reduced by millions," and, at the time of the Kwangju uprising in May 1980, hurled a huge armed force more than 70,000 strong into a massacre operation in a peacetime, not a wartime, blaring: "You must murder them in a wholesale manner, if you must murder them. Kwangju is a proper place to show our will to kill 10 million people."

It is ridiculous and disgusting, indeed, for the traitor for all ages, who should have faced a stern judgement by the nation and hanged a hundred times for his atrocious crimes in plunging Kwangju into a sea of blood and killing tens of thousands of compatriots, to try to conceal his blood-stained body, impudently coming out with the theory of "control on population growth."

At the very place where he had massacred fellow countrymen yesterday, traitor Chon Tu-hwan let out today a string of rubbish, claiming that he was "regulating prices," in an effort to win public favor. However hoarsely he may cry about "population," "prices," and the like, he only smells of blood for his treachery to and murder of fellow countrymen.

The South Korean people who have tasted enough the murderous nature of traitor Chon Tu-hwan and the consequences of the military fascist rule, will pass a stern judgement on the truculent murderer in the name of history, concludes the commentary.

NODONG SINMUN ON KIM IL-SONG'S 'BENEVOLENT LOVE'

SK162314 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1538 GMT 16 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 16 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN carried in two instalments [on 12 and 14 March], each occupying one whole page, an article headlined "Noble Revolutionary Sense of Duty" under the fixed title "70 Years of Benevolent Love."

Saying that the seventy years of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song lauded by all peoples today are great beyond comparison for his immortal idea and leadership and for his noblest love and sense of duty, the paper continues: The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who enjoys highest praises and deepest respect and trust among all peoples of the world as the personifier of the sense of human duty and noble paragon of revolutionary who cherishes the revolutionary sense of duty as his innate disposition and brings it into beautiful flowers on the road of revolution. The tight bonds of duty he has established with his revolutionary soldiers and the people are blood ties which are unbreakable by any force but become tighter and stronger in storms and tests.

The paper recounts the emotional story that, in the first period of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, when Comrade Chang Yong-san, a courageous company commander, was arrested and facing death, falling a victim to the intrigues of the enemy and dastardly perfidy of the factional flunkeyists, the great leader, informed of this, went to him with deep trust in him, not minding the danger to his own safety, and saved him by throwing a light on truth.

The paper continues: The revolutionary sense of duty of the great leader run through with unparalleled love and trust represents the strength and rays and a new world of noblest virtues that have purified on the loftiest height and added new shine to the relations between the leader and the soldiers who share the same idea and creed and the same destiny and the comradely relations and love among the communists.

After recalling that the great leader, shortly after the liberation, had the Mangyongdae Revolutionary School built, saying that the children of the comrades-in-arms who had fallen in action before seeing the liberation of the fatherland must be cared for, and embraced the bereaved families of the fallen revolutionaries in his broad bosom with fatherly affection, the paper goes on: So, his soldiers plunge themselves into the hailstorm of shells and bullets and readily step onto the gallows, true to their constancy, entrusting to the respected leader the future of their children, together with their own destinies. And their sons and daughters grow in his bosom to be the successors to the revolution, seeing in his smiles the smiles of their parents which they had forgotten.

It is thanks to the immortal history of the respected leader building a new world of noblest revolutionary sense of duty with his great heart that the never changing revolutionary blood ties between the leader and the soldiers have become as solid as a rock today in the Korean revolution and they are being steadfastly carried forward pure and clean from generation to generation through tests of storms.

After touching upon the deep love of the great leader with which he found out and cared for not only the bereaved families of the fallen revolutionary fighters but also those linked with the road of national liberation even by a slim tie and all the people of national conscience who had laid a single paver on the road of national liberation, the paper continues: People acquire acquaintances and associate with many people in the course of their life. Especially the leader is acquainted with hundreds of thousands of people and establishes relations with them on the road of revolution. Among them there are comrades and soldiers who have shared will and destiny with him, people who, though professing themselves to be patriotic-minded, had virtually estranged themselves from communism and his childhood friends.

But, was there in any age a history of noble duty, a history of a leader who cared for all the people of all strata through all these associates and looked after them and led them to the end along the road of revolution, taking upon himself the destiny of them all?

This canvas adding shine to the 70 year long history of the benevolent love of the respected leader is a new world of human life opened up by him. The paper recalls the emotional stories that the great leader highly praised the work of an ordinary farmer attending a national meeting of front-ranking farmers who had reaped rich harvest held in January 1952 and in the later period showed him loving care many a time and, after his death, visited his home and looked after it with utmost care and that when the daughter-in-law of a village old woman whom he met in August 1957, a grim period of the revolution, was speaking on the rostrum of a national agricultural congress in January 1975, as the chairman of the management board of a cooperative farm, the great leader recognized her and highly praised her family.

The paper stresses: Time is eternal and space is infinite, they say. But the love and sense of duty of the respected leader for our people cannot be erased or barred by the flow of time or by infinite space.

Indeed, it is thanks to the respected leader, the personifier of the revolutionary sense of duty, that our people enjoy a worthy life and soldiers who trust and follow the party and the leader with a single heart are born endlessly on this land to form a torrential flow of a big river and record a great history.

PREMIER VIEWS ECONOMIC, SECURITY TIES WITH U.S.

[Text] Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun, describing Korea-U.S. relations as an alliance forged in blood, said yesterday it is more important than ever for the two countries to expand cooperation in economy and trade as well as security in Northeast Asia.

Speaking on Seoul-Washington ties at a Korean-American Association meeting, Yu said Korea has grown into a strong nation of great capabilities and that it might be useful to explore various areas of further cooperation, as bilateral relations mature into a more equal partnership.

Turning to security cooperation, the prime minister said the two countries are playing a critically important role in advancing peace in the Asian-Pacific region. The Soviet military buildup in the Far East threatens to upset the balance of power in this part of the world, and communist North Korea's war preparations increases the danger of a renewed outbreak of armed conflict on the Korean Peninsula, he said.

The meeting was held at the Hyatt Hotel in Seoul and was designed to mark the 100th anniversary of the signing of diplomatic relations between the two countries. U.S. Amb. Richard L. Walker was one of the distinguished guests on hand.

"It is impossible to overemphasize that adequate deterrence is indispensable to preventing the recurrence of war and reducing tensions on the Korean Peninsula. This is precisely why the United States stations its ground combat troops on Korean soil," he said. Yu said, "Furthermore, the U.S. military presence in Korea provides an effective counterbalance against Soviet military expansion in Northeast Asia. In view of the vital role played by the U.S. Armed Forces, they should remain on Korean soil until tension is eased and peace secured in this region."

"We must renew the realization that close Korean-American cooperation and concerted efforts to achieve lasting peace on the Korean Peninsula are essential not only to the safety of our two nations but also to the peace of the Asian-Pacific region and the world at large," he said.

Noting the tragic reality gripping the Korean people can be resolved only through dialogue, he said, "We will continue knocking on North Korea's tightly shut door with patience."

Referring to economic and trade cooperation, he said Korea has very close and important economic relations with the United States. He pointed out that Korea's exports to America accounted for 26.5 percent of its total foreign sales last year and that Korea's imports from America at the same time represented 23.2 percent of total foreign purchases. "It is my belief that Korea and America should develop even closer economic ties through further advancement of the American policy of freer trade with Korea. One favorable trend was represented by Washington's decision last year to abolish restrictions on the import of nonrubber footwear from Korea," he said. The foundations for Korean-American economic cooperation were reinforced in June last year as a result of consultations in Seoul between representatives of the two governments, he recalled.

Korea and the United States, he said, should continue to approach each other with understanding and trust, while preserving their own heritages. "We should also work toward ever broader cultural exchanges. I am convinced that such an approach is basic to developing a more mature Korean-American partnership during the 1980's," he said.

The coming 100 years will be even more significant than the past century for the development of Korean-American relations, he said. "In America, a new spirit of pride is rising, and a renewed resolve to uphold liberty and advance economic prosperity. For its part, Korea is increasing its capabilities of sharing with many other developing countries its rich experience in various aspects of development," he noted.

"Furthermore, we share a vital mission of ensuring peace and stability necessary to the freedom and prosperity of the Asian-Pacific region. I am confident that by jointly tackling this challenging task, our two nations will mold the coming century into a new era of friendship and cooperation," he said.

MP, NAVAL SOURCE CRITICIZE U.S. MILITARY AID

BK161316 Bangkok MATUPHUM in Thai 16 Mar 82 pp 1, 12

[Text] Amnuai Suwannakhiri, assistant secretary to the interior minister, in his capacity as a member of the House of Representatives' Military Affairs Committee, said U.S. aid to Thailand for economic, military, security and rural development in 1982 is much too little. The chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee said the $100 million in aid, is not enough for economic and military aid. It should instead be at least $1 billion, since each year Thailand buys about 20,000 million baht worth of weapons from the United States. The U.S. aid for rural development is also small, at $5 million only, he said.

The chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee said that Thailand, as a free world country, should not restrict itself to receiving aid only from the United States, but the government should leave itself open to aid from other Free World countries like Australia, Japan, the Arab countries and other countries, in order to make Thailand really self-reliant.

Mr Amnuai said Thailand should welcome aid from other countries, since Thailand is a frontline state of the Free World. If Thailand falls, the Australian Continent as well as other Free World countries would be exposed to danger. On the contrary, if Thailand receives only U.S. aid, the other bloc countries will be suspicious of that assistance.

Meanwhile, a high level source in the Royal Thai Navy noted that Thailand should base its consideration of foreign assistance on the following three factors: a common policy, assistance which is aimed at making Thailand self-reliant, and assistance which is not aimed at propaganda. The source noted that the United States wants Thailand to be a member of the Free World and is keeping Thailand dependent on its assistance. The U.S. aid is propaganda and economic assistance from a weapons exporter. "Through its assistance, the United States is showing us the path to walk, as if we are a beggar. We have no say. The army, the navy and the air force is each trying its best to get aid from the United States and they are, therefore, competing to see which would be best at begging," the source said.

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- Hundreds of Vietnamese-led troops and Khmer Rouge guerrillas were killed and wounded during fierce fighting near the Thai border last month, Maj Gen Somkit Chongphayuha, commander of the Ninth Army Division, said yesterday.

He said Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops on the frontline are experiencing more difficulty in obtaining food and logistics supplies as truck convoys have frequently been ambushed by the guerrillas. He added that because of the effective guerrilla attacks, the daily rice ration for each Vietnamese trooper had been reduced.

NATION: THANAT RESIGNS AS DEMOCRAT PARTY CHIEF

[Text] Deputy Prime Minister Thanat Khoman yesterday handed in his resignation as leader of the Democratic Party, a post he had held for the past three years. In his resignation letter, handed to the party's Secretary General Marut Bunnak, Thanat said he would not contest in the race for the party's top post next month.

Thanat's resignation, a subject of widespread rumours since talks of election of a new party leader began several months ago, came in the wake of reports that former deputy party leader Phichai Rattakun, his arch-rival, had garnered sufficient support to win the Democrat Party's top post in the upcoming election on April 3.

Justice Minister Marut, who is the secretary general of the party, said he received Thanat's resignation letter yesterday morning. "He said in the letter that he wants to resign to display his spirit by paving the way for the election of the new leader," Marut told the NATION last night.

Thanat, who became the leader of the Democrat Party shortly after he won the April 22 general elections in 1979, had made it clear over the past several months that he was prepared to relinquish the party's top post. Marut quoted him as saying in the letter that he will refrain from vying for the post of the leader of the party when it holds its caucus on April 3.

According to the party's rules, the first deputy leader of the party will become acting leader. In this case, it is Agriculture Minister Chuan Likphai who will be interim leader. Chuan was said to be one of the contenders for the top post, but his secretary, Suthep Thuaksuban, has announced that Chuan will give way to Phichai Rattakun, who appears to be most likely to succeed Thanat.

Marut said he will report Thanat's resignation to the meeting of the Central Committee of the party at 3 pm today. However, deputy spokeswoman of the Democratic Party Miss Suphatra Matdit (Nakhon Si Thammarat) said last night she was not aware of the resignation of the party leader. "But there had been rumours to that effect," she said.

Thanat has apparently been in a political dilemma in the past several months after the Democrat Party joined the Prem III government. He was under fire from a faction of dissident members of the party who tried to nullify his decision for the party to take part in the coalition. The incident prompted Thanat to make a verbal resignation as deputy premier with Premier Prem Tinsulanon, but Prem withheld his resignation.

But his verbal resignation drew strong criticisms from several quarters of lawmakers. The government finally asked the Juridical Council to interpret Thanat's action and the ruling was that the verbal resignation was considered effective. But the government later insisted that Thanat continued to be deputy premier. Apparently dissatisfied with the ruling, Thanat and a number of his supporters tried to ask the constitution tribunal to reinterpret the issue, but his request was turned down.

A senior member of the Democrat Central Committee, Chaloemphan Siwikon, confirmed last night that Dr Thanat had tendered his resignation. "He has said many times that he would like to quit because he wants to take some rest," Chaloemphan said. He said that Dr Thanat might continue to lead the party until a new party leader is elected in two weeks' time.

Chaloemphan added that the most likely winner in the election of the new party leader is Phichai. Chaloemphan was said to have been upset when he was excluded from the latest coalition lineup.

TAP CHI CONG SAN EDITORIAL VIEWS PARTY STRENGTH

BK161020 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese February 1982, pp 1-6, 44

[Editorial: "Increase the Fighting Strength of the Contingent of Party Cadres Members" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] When a party possesses a correct political line, the strength of its cadres and members decides all successes.

Our party has applied the general Marxist-Leninist principles creatively to the circumstances of our country, devised a correct revolutionary line and constantly perfected it.

To carry out its revolutionary line successfully, our party has paid great attention to building its contingent of cadres and members. Many directives and resolutions issued by the party Central Committee have promptly illuminated problems involving tasks related to party cadres and members. In particular, the party Central Committee Political Bureau and the party Central Committee Secretariat recently issued two resolutions on organizational and ideological tasks. These resolutions basically devised guidelines and measures for building the force of party cadres and members in the new stage.

Due to the party's efforts, our body of party cadres and members has constantly grown strong. Since the fourth party congress, the number of party cadres and members has increased by 330,000 and most of them are outstanding elements in production, combat and other tasks. At present, our party has about 1.7 million members operating in more than 35,000 party organizations and establishments. More than a million members have graduated from political and dialectical refresher courses where different programs were taught. Nearly 500,000 members have attained the general education high school level, and more than 200,000 others are college and vocational high school graduates. The issurance of party membership cards, which has taken place for the first time in our country, has positively helped to purify the ranks of party members a step further.

Our party highly evaluates the revolutionary character of its members. Party Central Committee General Secretary Le Duan has affirmed: "A great number of party members are absolutely loyal to the cause of the party, have made sacrifices and worked with dedication for the fatherland and people and are, therefore, trusted and loved by the people. Party members have always been present where the struggle is fiercest, where things are most difficult and on the hardest jobs. Many of them have been in the vanguard with their exemplary acts and have led and attracted the masses into movements for production and fighting and for the construction and defense of the country. (TAP CHI CONG SAN footnote: Le Duan: "Under the Party's Banner, Take the Country to the Height of the Epoch" -- speech delivered at the grand ceremony to mark the VCP's 50th founding anniversary, 3 February 1930-3 February 1980) The contingent of party cadres has also grown strong. Besides the force of scientific and technical cadres and economic managerial cadres, whose number has risen to as many as hundreds of thousands and is continuing to increase speedily, the body of leading cadres at all levels and in all sectors has been strengthened quantitatively. Many of them are seasoned and experienced. Others who have been chosen over the past years are outstanding elements emerging from the realities of the socialist revolution, the building of socialism and the defense of the fatherland.

Besides these good aspects, party cadres and members are still beset by weaknesses and shortcomings. We have not had much experience in building socialism, and our leadership and economic managerial abilities are still limited as compared to the requirements of tasks. Moreover, a number of party members are still incompetent. Because they are reluctant to study and lack the determination to progress, their general knowledge and ability are very limited. They are present in the party but cannot be of any help to its leadership. As for qualities, the fighting willpower of part of the party membership is on the decline; yet they demand enjoyment and rest and care only for their own interests, paying no attention to the lives of the masses.

A small number of party members are degenerate and have committed serious mistakes. They have taken advantage of the masses' confidence in the party and of the tasks assigned to them to steal public property, accept bribes, oppress the people and collude with dishonest elements in engaging in illegal business. This has damaged the party's reputation and eroded the relationship between the party and the masses. In addition, the fact that a number of leading cadres are conservative and bureaucratic, have violated the principle of democratic centralism within the party and the people's right to collective mastery, and are declining seriously in terms of fighting willpower and revolutionary ethics has further aggravated the negative factors in the party.

The weaknesses and shortcomings of these party cadres and members in the spheres of ability and revolutionary qualities and ethics have hampered greatly the organization of the implementation of the party's line, resulted in bad political and economic consequences and adversely affected the people's lives. Our enemy is striving to exploit these weaknesses and shortcomings in order to incite the masses and impair the party's prestige among the masses.

History entrusts our party with very glorious but also very weighty responsibilities. The party must lead our people in carrying out two strategic tasks simultaneously:

FIRSTLY, to build socialism successfully.

SECONDLY, to strengthen national defense, to firmly maintain political security and public order and safety, and to stand ready to fight and fight victoriously in defense of the fatherland.

Moreover, these tasks must be carried out during the bitter and complex struggle between the socialist and capitalist roads to settle the question "who will whip whom." The Beijing expansionists and hegmonists, in collusion with the warmongering forces of U.S.-led imperialism, are continuing to step up their activities aimed at opposing and undermining our country in all fields, and are waiting for the opportunity to launch a large-scale war of aggression to annex our homeland. Our people's enemies of all stripes are directing their spearhead at our party to sabotage it ideologically and organizationally.

The situation of the party, the historic tasks which it has to shoulder and the new conditions of its struggle necessitates a call for an INCREASE IN THE FIGHTING STRENGTH OF THE CONTINGENT OF PARTY CADRES AND MEMBERS.

Generally speaking, this means that the quality and capability of cadres and party members must be improved and that all basic conditions must be provided so that everyone may fulfill the tasks entrusted to him, thereby "proving themselves worthy of being the people's leaders and utterly faithful servants," as President Ho often instructed them.

All party committee echelons and party organizations should apply themselves to educating party cadres and members and creating all the necessary conditions for them to raise ceaselessly their Marxist-Leninist theoretical levels; hold fast to the party's line, positions and policies; and enhance their cultural standard and scientific, technical and professional knowledge, especially economic knowledge. It is necessary to organize cadres, especially leading cadres, to study economic theories, policies, organization and management, thereby creating a movement for the entire party to learn how to carry out economic work.

Along with educating party cadres and members and enhancing their consciousness and their ideological and educational levels, we must constantly attach importance to education, with the aim of improving their revolutionary ethics and quality. Under the conditions wherein the party leads the administration, belittling the requirements regarding the quality of the party cadres and members creates conditions for bureaucratism, individualism, opportunism and other negative manifestations to spring up, develop and gradually erode the party.

An extremely important requirement of the education and qualitative development of party cadres and members is TO HEIGHTEN THEIR UNDERSTANDING OF THE COMMUNIST IDEAL. This is the most important quality of a communist.

At present, a party cadre's or party member's understanding of the communist ideal is reflected specifically by his positive recognition that our nation's direct and dangerous enemy is the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, and his full understanding of their schemes and acts of aggression and sabotage against our country. On the basis of such recognition and understanding, party cadres and members must constantly sharpen their revolutionary vigilance and their hatred for the enemy and stand ready to fight and fight victoriously.

Party cadres' and party members' understanding of the communist ideal is also reflected in their efforts to gain a profound understanding of the general socialist revolutionary line and the line of socialist economic construction, and in their resolve to implement these lines with the greatest zeal. Their understanding of the communist ideal also finds expression in the will to constantly improve their revolutionary quality, to oppose any form of individualism and opportunism, and to resolutely overcome all decline in revolutionary quality. To satisfactorily enhance party cadres' and members' understanding of the communist ideal, the party's ideological work must be improved even more forcefully in both form and substance and in method and organization. First of all, the scientific and militant character of this work must be enhanced. The theoretical and practical bases of the party's line must be proven by scientific arguments and vivid realities. On this basis, we must raise the level of consciousness of party cadres and members, increase their reasoning ability, overcome all manifestations of dogmatism, empiricism, and so forth. We must severely criticize all viewpoints which are at variance with the party's line, promptly struggle against negative manifestations in the process of implementing party directives and resolutions, and intensify self-criticism and criticism at all echelons and in all sectors. We must resolutely frustrate all enemy schemes and acts of psychological warfare.

The implementation of the efforts to improve the quality of party cadres and members depends not only on political and ideological indoctrination but also on the ORGANIZATIONAL BUILDING OF THE CONTINGENT OF PARTY CADRES AND MEMBERS.

We must devote much effort to BUILDING THE CONTINGENT OF CADRES and consider it the key measure in raising the capacity of the party and the state for leadership and organization of implementation. This contingent must have sufficient political quality, knowledge and capacity for work to meet the requirements of its tasks. On the economic front, it must be capable of implementing the party's economic line, building a new economic structure, fruitfully applying the new mode of economic management and successfully achieving the socioeconomic targets to be set by the fifth party congress.

We must satisfactorily carry out the selection and appointment of cadres, especially the key cadres of various echelons and sectors. For this purpose, we must have a thorough understanding of various party Central Committee and Political Bureau resolutions on cadre work since th is will help us acquire a correct viewpoint of the evaluation of cadres, and it will help us overcome the tendency to rate them mainly on the basis of their work records, their class origins, or their degrees, academic achievements, and so forth. We must distinctly define the specific qualities and abilities essential for each position in the party and state apparatuses, and must clearly understand the standards of each post. In these standards, we must also distinguish what is basic and indispensable from what it not and which can thus be waived. This is the best basis for us to CHOOSE THE RIGHT MAN FOR THE RIGHT JOB AND TO GIVE THE RIGHT JOB TO THE RIGHT MAN.

At present, in the contingent of leading cadres at various levels and in various sectors, there are comrades who, for many reasons, are no longer capable of meeting the requirements of their work. At the same time, highly promising cadres with sound qualities and capabilities have appeared in the movement. We must overcome manifestations of narrowmindedness and hesitancy and promptly and boldly promote to worthy positions in organs of party and state leadership those cadres who, in practical work and fighting, have shown that they possess real quality and capabilities, especially young cadres, women cadres; cadres from ethnic minority groups, and so forth.

To satisfactorily bring into play the strength and talents of the contingent of cadres in general and the contingent of leading cadres in particular, aside from the personal efforts of each cadre and stepping up the training of cadres in all respects, we must urgently IMPROVE THE ORGANIZATIONAL AND MANAGERIAL MECHANISM AND IMPROVE THE PARTY AND STATE APPARATUSES. Irrationalities in organization, policies, systems and work procedures have hindered and continue to hinder to no small extent the development of cadres' talents and initiative. No cadre, however capable he may be, can avoid being confused when functions and duties are not clearly spelled out, work is not rationally divided, work standards and the system of responsiblity are not distinctly established, and relations of coordination in work are not defined.

We must attach importance to training leading party cadres at all levels. On the basis of bringing cadre training methods up to date, we must quickly formulate plans for cadre work to meet the immediate requirements and to prepare for long-term tasks simultaneously. Along with strengthening existing leading cadres, we must satisfactorily carry out the selection of reserve cadres, give them the proper knowledge, and suitable work as a way of training and testing them, thereby helping them to develop quickly.

The quality of the party depends decisively on the QUALITY OF THE CONTINGENT OF PARTY MEMBERS. "If the party is strong, it is because its chapters are good. If a party chapter is good, it is because all its members are good." (Footnote: Ho Chi Minh: "On Party Building", Su That Publishing House, Hanoi, 1970, p 149). If each party member possesses all the necessary qualities and capabilities, is really a revolutionary militant and wholeheartedly fights in the interests of the socialist fatherland and for the people's happiness, the party will surely be stable and strong, will fulfill any task satisfactorily, and will be trusted and loved more and more by the masses.

The resolution of the fourth national party congress has spelled out five requirements concerning the qualifications of a party member. The party Central Committee has also issued documents concretely defining each of these requirements to suit the demands of the present situation and tasks. We must base ourselves on these requirements to improve various tasks in building the contingent of party members. On the one hand, we must persistently educate party cadres and members so as to raise their level of consciousness and improve their quality and ethics. On the other hand, we must resolutely and really purify the party by expelling unhesitatingly and without delay all those who are corrupt, practice bribery and exploit and bully the masses; those who exercise opportunism; and those whose revolutionary will is crippled and who have become indifferent and morally debilitated. At the same time, we must consider expelling from the party those whose level of consciousness is too low, who have made no progress after being educated by party organizations, and who are no longer capable of leading the masses. Over the past 5 years our party has expelled more than 86,000 persons, most of them depraved and degenerate party members. This move was correct and necessary, but is still not enough. In not a few party organizations, there still are persons who are obviously not worthy of party membership. We must oppose all manifestations of being sympathetic, indulgent and protective and the "live-and-let-live" practice, and must continue to expel from the party those who are not qualified for membership.

The task of increasing the party's membership must be carefully guided. The party's ranks must be continuously broadened, especially where the number of party members is too small, such as in the southern provinces. We must pay more attention to admitting into the party people of the working class. We must, however, always attach importance to quality and oppose the tendency to pursue quantity only, because this will lead to a drop in the standards of party members. We must allow absolutely no unqualified person to gain party membership and must make every effort to prevent opportunistic elements from worming their way into the party.

To satisfactorily improve the quality and capabilities of party members, we must SATISFACTORILY CONSOLIDATE PARTY CHAPTERS. Party chapters are the cells of the party. They are the party's lowest-level units directly in charge of educating, training and admitting people into the party and sifting party members. In carrying out party building work we must pay sufficient and specific attention to the role of party chapters. Each party chapter should adopt concrete measures to educate and train its members and must resolutely struggle against all manifestations of negativism within the party.

In building the contingent of party cadres and members, we must attach importance to BUILDING AND STRENGTHENING PARTY COMMITTEE ECHELONS. Party committee echelons must be really strong and capable of leading all fields of work in their localities and units. Their strength is reflected first of all in their thorough understanding of the party's line and their ability to lay down correct and effective policies, to correctly resolve problems posed by life, and to successfully organize the implementation of the party's line. The strength of party committee echelons is also reflected in their ability to successfully promote the people's collective mastery, to satisfactorily bring into play the role of state organs and mass organizations, and to create vigorous revolutionary movements.

A party committee echelon must have a rational organizational structure to ensure the party's leadership in all fields of activity of social life. However, the question of structure must not be used as an excuse to lower the requirements vis-a-vis a party committee echelon, turning it into an organization of mixed character. Each comrade of a party committee echelon must fulfill set criteria on qualities and leadership ability, must be absolutely loyal to the revolution and the party's line and must have the ability, together with the echelon collective, to discuss and decide policies and organize their successful implementation. The abilities of each comrade in committee echelon must be developed through practical and rational division of labor, through an effective system of party activity and through the scrupulous implementaton of the system of democratic centralism and the system of collective leadership and individual responsibility.

Through party congresses at all levels, it is necessary to constantly innovate certain sections of a committee echelon and attract new, outstanding forces symbolizing the growth of the revolutionary movement.

A party committee echelon must adopt a revolutionary and scientific work system. To this end, it is necessary to carry out the following tasks harmoniously: Improving information work within the party; assessing information accurately in order to understand the actual situation correctly; applying a method of working according to plan; preparing and approving decisions in a scientific manner; promptly correcting shortcomings in organizing the implementation of decisions; and achieving consistency of action from top to bottom.

A precious tradition of our party and, at the same time, a source of strength of the contingent of party cadres and members is UNITY AND UNIFICATION.

For more than the past half centruy, in all the turning points in the revolution and faced with all dangerous ordeals, our party cadres and members have consistently maintained unity and unification within the party.

Since the fourth party congress, faced with the new ordeals of the revolutionary struggle and with the Chinese hegemonist expansionists' schemes and tricks aiming at sabotaging and sowing dissention within our party, all our party cadres and members have closed their ranks and maintained unity and unification of willpower and actions. Today, faced with new difficulties and ordeals of the cause of building socialism and defending the country, we, the Communists, must further develop the party's tradition of unity and unification. We must forever bear in mind President Ho's teaching: UNITY is an extremely precious tradition of our party and people. The comrades from the central level down to party chapters must maintain unity and unanimity within the party as they maintain the pupil of their eyes" (footnote -- President Ho's Testament).

To continue to strengthen the party's tradition of unity and unification at all levels, we must always understand the party's line and policies thoroughly, evaluate the actual situation correctly, maintain the practice of criticism and self-criticism in all party committees and chapters and improve the work system of all echelons.

Increasing the fighting strength of the contingent of party cadres and members is not an exclusive task of party committees and party organizations at all levels, but, first of all, a personal responsibility of each party cadre and member. All the care and assistance of a collective will be effective only when each person makes due efforts.

At present, our party is about to hold its fifth national congress. With the collective intellect of the entire party, the congress will adopt correct resolutions, thereby opening up a new era of development for the Vietnamese revolution. Increasing the strength of the contingent of party cadres and members is to provide a firm guarantee for the successful implementation of the resolutions of this congress.

Given this paramount significance, all our party cadres and members are resolved to overcome all difficulties and obstacles, to strive to improve their qualities and capability and to advance toward fulfilling successfully their noble mission in the new situation.

REVIEW OF MARCH ISSUE OF TAP CHI CONG SAN

OW170215 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 14 Mar 82

[Review of the March issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN]

[Text] The March 1982 issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN has been published.

Solemnly featured on the first pages of the journal is an article by Comrade Truong Chinh entitled: "The Vietnamese People Are Determined To Frustrate All Aggressive Schemes of Chinese Expansionism and Hegemonism." The article is written to mark the third anniversary of the victory over the Chinese aggressors, March 1979-March 1982.

In this issue, the journal carries an article by (Dao Duy Tung) entitled: "On the Subject of the Three Economic Interests." The article clearly points out: Under the socialist system, economic interests are manifested in the form of the interests of society, of the collective and of the individual laborer. Only by catering to these interests so as to gradually satisfy the needs of laborers can the latter's collective mastery become a reality. Therefore, under the socialist system, the combining of the three interests with the interests of laborers is an aim of collective mastery. Although each of the three interests has its own special characteristic, they are basically united on the basis of the system of public ownership of the means of production. These interests are closely related, interwoven and overlapping. Of the three, the interests of society play the leading role; denying or belittling society's interests will inevitably lead to thoughts and acts which erode the economic foundation of socialism.

However, when we say that society's interests play the leading role, we absolutely do not mean to belittle the interests of the collective and the individual laborer. Belittling any of the three interests will not only harm that particular interest but will also basically hurt the interests to which importance is attached.

The problem is that the three interests must be harmoniously combined. The process of achieving a harmonious combination of the three economic interests is essentially a process of settling contradictions. Promptly detecting contradictions, taking the initiative in achieving unity right from the stage of plan formulation, and devising correct measures to implement plans so as to attain both immediate and long-term economic objectives are a sophisticated art in the harmonious combination of the three economic interests.

The three interests are part of a whole, but each of them has its own relatively independent character. For this reason, each interest also carries in itself a characteristic moving force. The characteristic moving forces of the three interests, however, are always blended with one another in a harmonious combination of the three economic interests and form an aggregate moving force to stimulate production.

Considering economic interests as a very important moving force to spur laborers to work actively does not mean that these interests are regarded as the sole moving force. There also are other factors, such as psychology, habit, tradition, the sense of responsibility, organization and discipline, and so forth, which have no small effect on the attitude toward labor. For this reason, in leading economic work, we must attach utmost importance to economic measures; however, the economic measures must be closely combined with administrative, educational and ideological measures.

The article then points out: The economic interests have not only a class character but also a historical character. When considering and resolving the problem of the three interests under the socialist system, we must place it in a specific timeframe of the period of transition from capitalist to socialism. The method of settling the relationship among the three interests in the period of transition to socialism cannot be identical to the method used in the period of developed socialism. The economic situation in the initial stage of the transitional period poses many complex problems in resolving the question of interests. The smooth combination of the three interests must be centered on the strategic objectives set forth by our party. Such combination cannot be separated from a radical modification of the system of subsidized bureaucratic management and from the implementation of the system of socialist business management, using the plan as the center and linking it to economic accounting.

Next is Vu Huu Ngoan's article dealing with economic interests during the period of transition to socialism in our country and Xuan Kieu's article on the position and relationship among the three economic interests in socialism.

The journal also carries Trinh Binh's article "Contracting Our Products to Collectives According to the Final Results of Production." Regarding the question of paying the collectives, the article points out that what is new is that being paid, the collectives are concerned with end products and final results of their production. Once an end product is determined, a collective, team, group, sector or plant becomes responsible for its production from beginning to end in accordance with internal regulations. When we look at such a production and labor organization, we can see that the end product will be achieved.

The article also deals with the question of pay on the basis of overall labor norms and rational wages and the question of reward and punishment related to the final results of production in accordance with fixed plans.

Next is Nhuan Vu's article "The Country's Position." Reviewing our historical traditions, the article says that, in their wars for national defense or national liberation, our forefathers paid special attention to fully utilizing our country's position, considering it as the basic factor that determined success and the secret and source of Vietnam's strength.

The country's position includes that of the land and people, in which appears, in bold relief, the central -- leadership -- factor that determines the common effectiveness of the country's position. Our country's present position has been qualitatively rejuvenated. In the light of Marxism-Leninism, our party has brought our country's position to a new apex, a position built on the premise that nothing is more precious than independence and freedom, on the principle of the working people's right of collective mastery and on the socialist base. Vietnam's position is also built on the basis of all-round cooperation between Vietnam, the Soviet Union, Laos, Kampuchea and other fraternal socialist countries and on the tempestuous offensive of the three revolutionary currents of our era. By nurturing and fully utilizing our country's invincible strength, we will certainly overcome all trials, smash all the enemy's plots and maneuvers, successfully build and firmly defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

The journal carries Prof Nguyen Ngoc Minh's article "Complaints and Denunciations, an Important Right of Collective Mastery of Our People." The article points out that the proclamation of the order stipulating the consideration and settlement of citizens' complaints and denunciations responded to our people's long-felt desire. It points to the superiority of the socialist regime and our party's and state's concern for ensuring the people's right of collective mastery and strengthens the relationship between the party, the state and the people. After analyzing a number of essential issues in the aforementioned order, the article says: First and foremost, we must act in such a manner as to make the right of complaint and denunciation respected. The person who exercises it must do so seriously. The agency or person responsible for resolving the issue must do so fairly, in good time and without delay.

However, what is more important is to look for, and resolve, the root causes of complaint and denunciation. In the present situation, the struggle against violations of the people's right of mastery, the encroachments on the interests of the state and the collective, the deviations from party policies and the state's laws and other negative phenomena must be carried out uniformly and intensively by motivating the masses to participate and by applying administrative, economic and educational measures. In this struggle, we should uphold the strictness of the law. The more this struggle is successful, the less the complaints and denunciations become.

The journal also carries an article entitled: "The Soviet Union, bastion of peace and reliable support of the world revolution." The article says: An extremely fierce class struggle is taking place worldwide on issues of revolution and counterrevolution, peace and war, between the three revolutionary currents, whose core is the Soviet Union and the community of socialist countries, on the one hand, and imperialism, led by U.S. imperialism in collusion with Beijing hegemonic expansionism and all other types of reaction, on the other. In this struggle, one's attitude towards the Soviet Union is the litmus test of his viewpoint on revolution and proletarian internationalism.

The class enemy is seeking all means to slander and assail the Soviet Union, fabricate all sorts of stories to denigrate the splendid achievements of realistic socialism in the Soviet Union and sully the position and role of its foreign policy in the world. Particularly, they are taking advantage of the Polish situation to make a ballyhoo about the struggle for freedom in Poland and about "Soviet intervention." They are raving mad because they failed bitterly in their plot to overthrow the socialist regime in Poland and, from this, to wreck the socialist community and create a springboard for carrying out attacks and aggression against the Soviet Union and torpedoing peace in Europe and the rest of the world.

What is regrettable is that there are a number of people in the international communist and workers' movement who disregard the obvious truth and voice viewpoints that run counter to the Polish people's interests and are harmful to the cause of revolution and peace in Europe and the rest of the world.

In Western Europe, a number of people, in the name of communist parties, have noisily attacked the Polish United Workers' Party and state for adopting resolute measures, in defense of the fruits of the revolution and the socialist regime, against subversive activities undertaken by reactionaries, lackeys of imperialism. They have also loudly attacked the Soviet Union for what they call intervention in Poland's internal affairs. From the Polish issue, they draw extremely erroneous conclusions about realistic socialism and about the prospects for scientific socialism. These erroneous allegations are very harmful to the cause of revolution and peace, and beneficial to imperialism and reaction.

The article then heightens the Soviet Union's positive role in the world, and the brilliant achievements of realistic socialism in the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community, while unmasking the dark designs of imperialism and international reaction.

The journal also carries Prof Dao Van Tap's article "Characteristics and Trends of the Present World Economy." The article shows that an important turning point occurred in the world economy in the 1970's characterized chiefly by the 3 crises in the capitalist economic system in 1970-71, 1973-75 and 1979-80, of which the 1973-75 crisis was the deepest, most comprehensive and prolonged. This was not an ordinary crisis. It was special, and originated, not only from internal economic causes in each capitalist country, but was connected with the deep, general crisis of capitalism under the impact of the three revolutionary currents and linked to the post-Vietnam world situation. In this situation, the most direct effect was exercised by the struggle for the right to control natural resources by countries newly liberated from the colonialist yoke. Ironically, the United States was at the center of all these crises.

The article then goes on to analyze a number of main economic problems characterized mainly by uniformity, contradictions and rivalry in the world economy.

USSR ATTACHE VIEWS RELATIONS ON ARMY ANNIVERSARY

BK150130 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 23 Feb 82 pp 2, 4

[Article by Sen Col V.A. Davydov, Naval, army and air force attache to the Soviet Embassy in Vietnam: "Ready To Defend Socialism and International Security" -- marking the 64th anniversary of the Soviet Army and Navy Day]

[Excerpt] True to its international duty, the Soviet Union assists and supports nations struggling for freedom and national independence. It always strives to strengthen cooperation among various communist and workers parties throughout the world in the struggle against imperialism, and to promote contacts and unity of action with all democratic and progressive forces so as to check the danger of war.

At present, Soviet-Vietnamese relations, with the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two countries serving as their basis, are characterized by their being constantly enriched and improved. The CPSU and the VCP are doing everything they can to consolidate their cooperation and mutual assistance in the interests of the Soviet and Vietnamese peoples, and for the cause of peace, freedom and the security of nations in Asia and the rest of the world.

We Soviets take pride in the fact that the CPSU and our great fatherland always discharged their international duty to the Vietnamese people during the heroic struggles against the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing expansionists, as well as during the years of peaceful building of socialism. Solidarity with Vietnam is always an inseparable part of social life in the Soviet Union. The internationalism and fraternal sentiments of the Soviets toward Vietnam are reflected in the assistance given by the Soviet Union to Vietnam in building or restoring nearly 100 projects, including the biggest ones in Southeast Asia such as the Hoa Binh hydroelectric power plant on the Da River, the Pha Lai thermoelectric power plant, the Bim Son cement plant, the Thang Long Bridge on the Red River, and so forth.

One of the most important fields of cooperation between the Soviet Union and Vietnam involved Soviet assistance in training the contingent of Vietnamese cadres. After undergoing training in the Soviet Union, hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese youths have returned to work for national construction.

The meeting in the Kremlin in September 1981 between L.I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium; and Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee, was a new glorious page in Soviet-Vietnamese relations. This meeting, which affirmed the unity of views between our two parties and countries on all the basic issues of our time, was a brilliant symbol of Soviet-Vietnamese solidarity, a new encouragement and a contribution to further consolidating and developing the fraternal relations between our two parties and countries.

The recent visit to Vietnam of Marshal of the Soviet Union, Nikolay Vasilyevich Ogarkov, first deputy defense minister and chief of the Soviet Armed Forces General Staff, was a new and brilliant manifestation of the fraternal friendship and militant alliance between our two nations and armed forces.

On the occasion of the founding anniversary of the Soviet army and navy, we would like to extend our fraternal greetings to all the combatants, noncommissioned officers and generals of the heroic Vietnam People's Army. We wish you many new achievements in increasing fighting skills, mastering complex military equipment, strengthening discipline and further enhancing the defense capabilities of your fatherland, the outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia.

Leaders' Message

OW121958 Hanoi VNA in English 1457 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 12 -- Truong Chinh, president of the Council of State, and Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers, today sent a joint message to Prime Minister Maurice Bishop of the Grenadian People's Revolutionary Government on the occasion of the 3rd anniversary of the Grenadian revolution's victory. The message said: "The victory of the March revolution has opened up a new era in the history of Grenada, an era in which the Grenadian people have become real masters of their destiny and are building their country into a prosperous one. This victory has strongly encouraged the Latin America and other peoples in their struggle for peace, national independence, democracy, and social progress.

"In the last 3 years, in spite of the enemy's frenzied opposition and sabotage, under the leadership of the New Jewel Movement and the people's revolutionary government headed by you, the Grenadian people have recorded important successes in building a new life and defending their fatherland.

Today, confronted with the U.S. imperialists' policy of hostility and threat of aggression, the heroic Grenadian people are closely consolidating their ranks, resolutely defending their country and their gains, and continuing to take their revolution forward.

"As a close comrade-in-arms of the Grenadian people, the Vietnamese people greatly rejoice at the Grenadian people's splendid achievements, on this occasion we would like to reaffirm the full support of the Vietnamese people and government for the just cause of the Grenadian people.

"We wish the fraternal people of Grenada still greater successes in their national construction and defence. "May the militant solidarity and friendship between Vietnam and Grenada consolidate and develop with every passing day."

On this occasion, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has also sent a message of greetings to Grenadian Foreign Minister Unison Whiteman.

NHAN DAN Editorial

OW130725 Hanoi VNA in English 0702 GMT 13 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 13 -- NHAN DAN today exalts the achievements of Grenada on its third anniversary. In its editorial, the paper hails Grenada's domestic and foreign policy which, it says, has made an active contribution to the common struggle of nations for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

"Under the leadership of the People's Revolutionary Government headed by Prime Minister Maurice Bishop," the paper points out, "the Grenadan people are building and defending their country. The revolutionary administration has been strengthened. New economic and social measures have been taken to protect the people's interests."

The paper goes on: "Grenada has pursued a foreign policy of joining other non-aligned countries in the resolute struggle against imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism. It is one of those countries having extended early recognition to the Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea and supporting the Vietnamese people's just struggle against the Beijing expansionists."

"The United States has blockaded Grenada by sea and boycotted the country economically. It has also repeatedly attempted to assassinate Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and to overthrow the revolutionary government. U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces conducted a military exercise codenamed "Ocean Venture-81" to pressure Grenada and other countries in the region. However crafty its designs and acts may be, U.S. imperialism can never subdue the heroic Grenadan people," NHAN DAN affirms.

SUZUKI QUESTIONS 'NEW TOKYO ROUND' ON TRADE

OW181257 Tokyo KYODO in English 1232 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 18 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday questioned the advisability of Japan taking the initiative in proposing a "new Tokyo round" of multilateral negotiations in a bid to resolve its trade friction with other countries, especially the U.S. and West European nations. Although he made it clear that he is basically in support of a new round, he cautioned that the economic conditions of Japan, the U.S. and Western Europe, and possible reactions of developing countries should be fully weighed first.

Informed sources disclosed this after the prime minister discussed ways of coping with the trade friction at a meeting with Nobuo Matsunaga, deputy foreign minister in charge of economic affairs, and Hiromu Fukada, director general of the Foreign Ministry's Economic Affairs Bureau. The two officials briefed him on the results of trade talks held between Japan and the U.S. on March 9 and 10, and between Japan and France on Monday and Tuesday this week.

A "new Tokyo round" was recently proposed by Susumu Nikaido, secretary general of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, as well as Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi. In an apparent attempt to dispel any misunderstanding, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa told reporters that the prime minister's remarks Thursday did not necessarily represent objection to the suggestions by Nikaido and Sakurauchi.

The original "Tokyo round" of multilateral trade talks among 99 countries was designed to promote free international trade by lowering tariff and nontariff barriers. The talks continued off and on over seven years and came to a close in 1979.

Because of the cautious stance expressed by the prime minister Thursday, Foreign Minister Sakurauchi probably will not bring up the issue when he confers with U.S. officials in Washington next Monday and Tuesday, the sources said. Sakurauchi leaves for the U.S. this Saturday. The sources, however, did not rule out the possibility of the matter coming up during Sakurauchi's Washington talks. They noted U.S. Trade Representative William Brock had earlier broached the somewhat similar idea of holding a "Reagan round" of multilateral talks as a means of settling crucial trade problems affecting that country.

At his meeting with the two Foreign Ministry officials, Prime Minister Suzuki expressed doubt whether a Japanese initiative in calling for a new round of multilateral negotiations would be appreciated by other nations. In this context, he pointed out that Japan's economic performance is regarded abroad as one of the best in the world. He said that the initiative might better come from the U.S. or Western Europe and suggested it would be advisable for Japan to limit itself to "seconding" the idea, the informants said.

Suzuki said, however, that the ministerial session of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), scheduled for November, will prove important for Japan. Japan is currently under heavy fire from the U.S. and the Common Market for its massive trade surpluses with those areas.

SAKURAUCHI ANALYZES JAPAN-U.S. TRADE IMBALANCE

OW190855 Tokyo KYODO in English 0810 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 19 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Friday that massive Japanese exports to the United States may be responsible for that country's high unemployment rate now standing at 8.8 percent. The comparable figure for Japan is 2.3 percent.

Speaking at a House of Representatives committee meeting, Sakurauchi said: "I agree, to a certain degree, to the U.S. view that the export of Japanese industrial products means export of unemployment to the United States."

"I will listen, without prejudice, to what the Americans have to say (about the current U.S. huge trade deficit with Japan)" he said on the eve of his departure for Washington on a five-day trip to the United States.

But Sakurauchi said he will say "no" to a U.S. request for full liberalization of Japanese import of U.S. agricultural products at least for the time being. The U.S. Government will be advised to take "dramatic measures" such as the lifting of the Alaskan crude oil embargo it it wants to reduce its trade deficit with Japan, Sakurauchi added. The United States chalked up a dollar 13.4 billion deficit in the bilateral trade last year, according to Japanese statistics.

SAKURAUCHI CITES DECISION ON 'AFGHANISTAN DAY'

OW190525 Tokyo KYODO in English 0512 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 19 (KYODO) -- Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Friday welcomed a European Parliament decision to observe March 21 as "Afghanistan Day" to condemn the more than two-year-old Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Sakurauchi said in a statement that the Soviet Union should immediately withdraw its troops from the country and the Afghan people's right of self-determination should promptly be restored. He said Japan will continue its active support for relief of the Afghan refugees.

FRANCE'S JOBERT CONFERS WITH SUZUKI, DEPARTS

OW181301 Tokyo KYODO in English 1245 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 18 KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki wants to confer with French President Francois Mitterand on Franco-Japanese cooperation in the sphere of high technology and science when the French leader visits this country April 14-18. He voiced the hope Thursday at his meeting with French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert, who arrived here last Monday to prepare the ground for the French president's visit.

Suzuki said he is looking forward to conferring with Mitterand prior to the eighth economic summit of industrial democracies, scheduled for early June in Paris. Among the topics he wants to take up with the president are the strengthening of solidarity between Japan, the U.S. and Western Europe, the three pillars of the Western camp, and revitalization of the world economy, the prime minister told the French minister. He also expressed the hope that an import promoting mission, to be dispatched to France in May this year, will serve to develop relations between the two nations further.

Jobert promised to convey the prime minister's wishes to President Mitterand, adding that it is important for the top leaders of the two nations to entertain a common perception regarding the international situation. The trade minister called on Suzuki at his official residence before departing for home Thursday evening.

SOUTH PYONGAN RALLY DENOUNCES 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982'

SK180915 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0802 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Excerpt] Pyongyang, March 18 (KCNA) -- Working people in South Pyongan Province held a mass meeting on March 16 in Pyongsong at which they denounced the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises in South Korea as dangerous military action to complete preparations for starting a nuclear war in Korea and invade the northern half of our republic at any moment.

Kang Hyon-su Speech at Rally

SK180551 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1200 GMT 17 Mar 82

[Speech by Kang Hyon-su, chairman of the People's Committee of South Pyongan Province, at 16 March mass rally of South Pyongan Province -- recorded]

[Text] At present due to the frenzied maneuvers to provoke a war by the U.S. imperialists and their stooge, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique, a very serious situation, which can ignite a new war at any time, is being created in the southern part of Korea.

For a month now, since 13 February, the U.S. imperialists have been staging a large-scale war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982," with our republic as its target. What attracts our attention in this military exercise is that the U.S. imperialists and their stooges are genuinely preparing for a nuclear war in South Korea. Another fact that attracts our attention in this war exercise is that it is an aggressive war exercise simulating an all-out attack on our republic.

According to foreign news reports, even U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger will fly into powder-reeking South Korea (?during March) under the pretext of attending a meeting of a joint military committee. We must point out that this ill-boding trip to South Korea by those bellicose elements who plan and execute the aggressive war policy of the U.S. imperialists closely resembles that of the notorious Dulles, who sneaked into South Korea on the eve of the 25 June war and checked the final stage of preparations for a northward war of invasion along the 38th parallel.

Judging from all indications, the current war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" is not a repetition of the usual exercises which were staged consecutively for the past 7 years since 1976 but a test war and preliminary nuclear war to complete preparations for a nuclear war in Korea and to invade our republic at any time they please. At a time when we are doing everything possible for peace and peaceful reunification of the fatherland and when the voices calling for enactment of the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and convocation of the 100-man joint conference are heard loudly among the Korean compatriots at home and abroad, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military hooligans are leading the situation to the brink of a war by staging a reckless war exercise racket. This is an intolerable criminal act which is incompatible with peace and peaceful reunification of Korea.

Unable to suppress national indignation over the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique, who are unabashedly committing criminal maneuvers to provoke a war against us by staging the adventurous military exercise called "Team Spirit 1982," I, on behalf of those attending this rally, sternly denounce the war exercise, regarding it as a premeditated provocative act to ignite a nuclear war in Korea and a serious criminal act disturbing and threatening peace in the Far East and in the world at large. [indistinct shouts]

"Team Spirit 1982," a military exercise being staged by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, is not a simple military exercise but a direct product of the Korea policy of the U.S. imperialists who are trying to maintain South Korea as their colony and military base and to annex the whole of Korea.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The forcible occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists and their policy of aggression are the source of all our national misery, the fundamental obstacle to our national reunification and a catalyst of war in Korea. Since they sneaked into South Korea, the U.S. imperialists, while pursuing a wicked goal of keeping South Korea as their colony and dominating Korea and the world by utilizing South Korea as a strategic position, have turned the southern part into a powder keg and a military beachhead.

Repealing the formal troop withdrawal plan in order to achieve their aggressive goals, the U.S. imperialists, with a plan to strengthen the offensive capability of the U.S. troops occupying South Korea and the puppet army, are following the road of stepping up the armed forces and modernizing their equipment in all aspects. The U.S. imperialists are even dragging the Japanese reactionaries into implementation of their aggressive war policy. The alleged emergency in the Far East seen by the U.S. and Japanese reactionaries is a plot to drag the Japanese armed forces of aggression into a new war against Korea by establishing a tripartite military alliance system of the United States, Japan and South Korea.

The maneuvers for a new war by the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique in South Korea have entered a more dangerous stage. Clamoring about nurturing national strength, the Chon Tu-hwan clique today is desperately trying to increase the military strength of the puppet army, build more military bases, accelerate modernization of the South Korean army and strengthen the war industry. The Chon Tu-hwan clique is increasing not only the military strength of the puppet army but also the military strength of the reservist forces. It has bound all people in South Korea, ranging from teenagers and women to aged people nearing their 80's, under military organizations and forced them to receive military training. Thus, it has mobilized all available human and material resources for war preparations.

For the South Korean bellicose elements, who have reduced South Korea to a ground of powder-reeking war exercises, to talk about peaceful reunification, model projects and so forth is an intolerable deception. All these criminal maneuvers waged by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique in South Korea today clearly prove that they do not want dialogue and peaceful reunification in Korea and only advance along the road of confrontation and war.

The fact that the U.S. imperialists and their stooges are crying out about the threat of a southward invasion and an equality of strength is a clumsy drama aimed at covering up their criminal maneuvers, increasing the danger of northward invasion while frenziedly preparing war in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists must promptly stop their grave war gamble, which is being carried out hidden behind a signboard and is threatening peace in Korea and the world. They must give up their aggressive designs on our country and get out without delay, taking along the nuclear weapons and other weapons of destruction shipped into South Korea. [indistinct shouts of slogans]

Workers, peasants, students, intellectuals and other people from all walks of life in South Korea should courageously rise in a nationwide anti-U.S. and anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle to drive out from South Korea the U.S. imperialist aggressors -- the mortal enemy causing various misfortunes and calamities by instigating such a murderer as the Chon Tu-hwan clique after sneaking into South Korea wearing the mask of supporter -- and to crush the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, filthy national traitor, fascist hangman, warmonger and national splittist.

Today, all the people in the northern half of the republic are faced with grave and glorious tasks to step up socialist construction while reliably safeguarding the socialist fatherland and the revolutionary gains against the fanatic new war provocation maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys.

All workers in the province should register brilliant labor exploits on all fronts of socialist construction so as to greet the 70th birthday of the great leader as the greatest national festival and a grand political celebration. They should make full preparations and heighten revolutionary vigilance so that we can smash the enemies at one blow if the aggressors dare trigger a war against us. Only victory and glory await us as we advance upholding the great leader.

NODONG SINMUN HITS DJP HANDLING OF 'RICE SCANDAL'

SK171108 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1054 GMT 17 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 17 (KCNA) -- Papers here today hit at the arbitrariness of the "Democratic Justice Party," [DJP] the private political party of Chon Tu-hwan, in unilaterally vetoing at the "National Assembly" a motion of "national assemblymen" from some political parties to form a "special committee" to probe into a scandal surrounding rice import from the United States.

In a commentary titled "Disguised Marionette Tool," NODONG SINMUN says: The veto against the motion was a vivid indication that the "Democratic Justice Party" regards other political parties merely as its waiting maids. The author of the commentary further says: If the bribery were "groundless," as it claims, it should not have barred the formation of a fact-finding "committee" at least to make this clear. And it is what a "National Assembly" should do to accept such motion and clarify truth.

By unilaterally killing the motion pointblank with a single word which can convince no one, the "Democratic Justice Party" made it plain that the "National Assembly" framed up by the Chon Tu-hwan group is nothing but a disguised marionette tool for embellishing the fascist dictatorship. What is the use of having different parties in the "National Assembly," if the ruling party is to play a solo in everything?

The Chon Tu-hwan group stated that it would form a "small committee" headed by an " ssemblyman from the Democratic Justice Party" to "investigate" into the case within the limits permitted by "law." This is an artifice for misleading public opinion and burying the truth of the case in oblivion.

When knocking into shape the puppet National Assembly, traitor Chon Tu-hwan made free with phraseology about "a new policy," "new looks of the National Assembly," "parliamentary government," and what not. But, what he does is not different from what was done when the defunct dictator and the "Republican Party" had everything their way. What sort of "new policy" and "parliamentary government" are there?

The scandal surrounding rice import from the United States was a well-planned swindle which traitor Chon Tu-hwan practised in league with a U.S. rice dealer by manipulating his lackeys to misappropriate the national funds and take bribes. A report says that the men who took the bribe from the U.S. rice dealer in the illicit dealing were officials of the procurement agency.

They committed the irregularity, presenting no small portion of the bribe to traitor Chon Tu-hwan. Suffice it to recall that puppet Chon Tu-hwan sent his lackeys to the United States to start a vehement clandestine operation for silencing U.S. congressmen when the rice scandal became a topic in the U.S. political circles.

If a new policy free from fascism and corruption is to be pursued in South Korea, the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist rule must be destroyed and the society be democratised.

YI CHONG-OK, NICARAGUAN LEADERS SPEAK AT BANQUET

SK190412 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0345 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 19 (KCNA) -- The Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of Nicaragua arranged a banquet on March 15 in honor of the party and government delegation of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea headed by Comrade Yi Chong-ok, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and premier of the Administration Council, on a visit to Nicaragua, according to a report. Invited to the banquet were the members of the delegation and diplomatic envoys of various countries in Nicaragua.

Present there were Daniel Ortega Saavedra, coordinator of the Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of Nicaragua; Rafael Cordova Rivas and Sergio Ramirez Mercado, members of the council; Tomas Borge Martinez, member of the national leadership of the Sandinist National Liberation Front and minister of the interior; the minister of foreign affairs, the minister of education, the minister of commerce, the minister of tourism, the minister of construction, the director of the Secretariat of the State Council and other personages concerned.

Daniel Ortega Saavedra spoke first at the banquet. He said: The supreme leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song and the Workers Party of Korea, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the courageous Korean people expressed solidarity with our Nicaraguan revolution already before its victory. The Korean people had never supported the Somoza clique. The Korean people expressed firm solidarity only with our Sandinist National Liberation Front and our Nicaraguan revolution from before its victory. The relations between our two countries have such a long history.

We take this opportunity to extend our sincere thanks, through Comrade Yi Chong-ok, the envoy of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, to the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song and to the Workers Party of Korea, the Government of the DPRK and the Korean people. The Nicaraguan and Korean peoples were, are and will be brothers. We reassure you of our firm solidarity with the Korean people in the struggle for the country's reunification.

Comrade Yi Chong-ok spoke next at the banquet. He said: The friendship and unity between the Korean and Nicaraguan peoples are indestructible as they have been cemented in the common struggle against imperialism and for independence. The Korean people sincerely rejoice as over their own over the successes achieved by the Nicaraguan people in the struggle for reconstructing the country in accordance with Sandinism. Our people wholeheartedly hope that the fraternal Nicaraguan people, closely united around the Sandinist National Liberation Front, will register greater successes in their future struggle for defending the country as firm as a rock from the aggression and intervention of the imperialists and building a rich and powerful, independent and new Nicaragua.

We highly appraise the active support and encouragement the Republic of Nicaragua is extending to the just struggle of the Salvadorian people and other Latin American peoples for freedom and liberation, pursuing the non-aligned policy in external relations, and express firm solidarity with it. The Korean people are now waging a vigorous struggle for modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea and accelerating the historic cause of national reunification under the guidance of the glorious party centre, upholding the programmatic tasks advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea.

The Korean people deem it a great pride to have such a staunch people with a strong sense of justice as the heroic Nicaraguan people as their comrades-in-arms in Latin America and will advance as ever shoulder to shoulder with you in the struggle against imperialism and for independence.

Tomas Borge Martinez, member of the National Leadership of the Sandinist National Liberation Front and minister of the interior, also made a speech at the banquet. He said: The Nicaraguan and Korean peoples are real brothers who have been linked by the bonds of friendship from long ago. The Korean people have achieved dazzling successes in politics, economy, defence, social welfare and all other domains under the wise guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. In the Democratic People's Republic of Korea the entire people cherish deep feelings of respect, reverence and trust for the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The Nicaraguan and Korean poeples have the common enemy. The common enemy of our people and the world people is occupying the southern half of Korea. The Nicaraguan people cleared Nicaragua of the common enemy of the two peoples and have made Nicaragua her people's own. Our enemy is trying to invade our country. We are fully ready to defend our fatherland.

Reaffirming that the Sandinist National Liberation Front of Nicaragua and its people voice firm solidarity with the Korean people in the struggle for national reunification, I take this opportunity to ask Comrade Premier Yi Chong-ok to convey this to Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader and an intimate friend. Our people will always stand firm on the side of the heroic Korean people.

The banquet proceeded in an amicable and friendly atmosphere.

Present there were Hadzi Hadzi Vasilev, vice-president of the Assembly of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia; Vlado Janzic, executive secretary of the Presidency of the Central Committee of the League of Communists of Yugoslavia; Dusan Ilijevic, member of the Federal Executive Council; and other personages concerned.

Josip Vrhovec and Ho Tam spoke at the party. Josip Vrhovec said: The basis of our friendship, respect and cooperation was provided by President Kim Il-song and President Josep Broz Tito. Yugoslavia highly estimates the independent and non-aligned policy of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and her efforts for the socialist construction of the country. We welcome your efforts and initiatives for the peaceful reunification of the country. We believe that these initiatives are an expression of the legitimate aspiration of the entire Korean people and their realisation will consolidate peace and security in this part of the world.

Noting that Yugoslavia would support in the future, too, the principled stands of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country and her positive initiatives for reunification, he said: We are convinced that the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the ten-point policy of the unified state advanced by President Kim Il-song and the recent initiative of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea for convening the joint conference of North, South and overseas Korean politicians for the reunification of the country constitute a wide-range basis for reunifying the country peacefully free from outside interference.

He said: To develop the friendly and cooperative relations between the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia constitutes a major factor for strengthening the unity of the Non-aligned Movement and an important contribution to further confirming the non-aligned policy. Concluding my speech, I propose to drink a toast to the good health and long life of Comrade Kim Il-song and to the good health and long life of Comrade Kim Chong-il.

Speaking next, Ho Tam said that the friendly relations between Korea and Yugoslavia were all the more precious and solid because they were personally provided by the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song and the outstanding leader of the Yugoslav people Comrade Josip Broz Tito.

Ho Tam went on: Today the Yugoslav people are firmly defending the sovereignty of the country with their united and concerted efforts and making a big advance in the socialist construction based on self-management, carrying forward the cause of Comrade Josip Broz Tito. In its external relations the Yugoslav Government is making a contribution to the development of international relations by actively pursuing the non-aligned policy.

Ho Tam continued: The prevailing situation demands more urgently than ever before that the non-aligned countries hold higher the banner of non-alignment, the banner of independence. In firm unity with the Yugoslav people and all other progressive peoples of the world advocating independence, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people will energetically strive as ever to build a peaceful, new world free from domination and subjugation.

He proposed a toast to the good health of Comrade Sergej Kraigher, Comrade Dusan Dragosavac and other leading cadres of the party and state of Yugoslavia and to the good health and long life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The party proceeded in a friendly atmosphere. Ho Tam, vice-premier and foreign minister, left Belgrade on March 16 after winding up his visit to Yugoslavia.

CHON VIEWS NORTH-SOUTH TALKS, OTHER ISSUES

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan said yesterday the nation stands a good chance of talking with communist countries, as the international tendency to put interests before ideologies is intensifying and communist nations are seeking new interests.

The new unification formula (proposed Jan. 22) is reasonable and practicable, and the solid foundation for international support for it may serve as a potential pressure to North Korean authorities, Chon said. In an impromptu speech at the end of a three-day training session for the lawmakers of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), he predicted North Korea will have no choice but to accept the formula in time.

"The situation in North Korea is more complicated than we imagine. The communist regime cannot help accepting the new formula in time. We should make full preparations for this," he said. Chon, who concurrently heads the ruling DJP, stressed, "We should be ideologically prepared for the day when the deadlocked inter-Korea talks will be resumed."

Describing the 1968 Asian and 1988 Seoul Olympic games as a political "masterstroke in our history," he said the games will provide the nation with crucial turning points. It depends on how the nation uses the occasions that will determine whether Korea will join the ranks of advanced countries or retreat backward, he said. The nation will have to reform its psychological makeup and mount a campaign for social order to become a first-rate people, he noted.

"Now is the time to curb price rises and attempt to begin a second economic takeoff. I am convinced that economic growth can be achieved on the basis of stability without a hitch this year," he said.

Touching on the ongoing campaign to eliminate the three major negative psychological elements, he said the nation can never survive or become rich and powerful if corruption and indifferent attitudes prevail. The nation must be willing to suffer "any sacrifice and difficulty" to eradicate all traces of corruption and irregularity and create a corruption-free society this year, he observed.

Referring to the renovation of the political climate, he stressed all lawmakers should work as if they were serving a single term. The chief executive said it is anachronistic to regard lawmaking primarily as a means of livelihood, and that it would be a tragedy for themselves and to the development of democratic politics, if lawmakers attempt to use their position illegally. In the past, political corruption led to corruption everywhere, and if the old irregularities are revived, it would ruin the country, he observed.

When an issue involving a foreign country arises in the National Assembly, all political parties should show solidarity to serve the best national interests in handling it, he noted. Political and social stability is called for more keenly than ever before, because difficulty is expected in terms of national security and diplomacy, he said. The DJP should make every effort to inspire cooperation in the other parties to achieve national harmony, he said.

In the meantime, the 152 DJP lawmakers adopted a three-point resolution, pledging to assume a leading role towards peaceful national unification. In the resolution, the DJP lawmakers also vowed to make concentrated efforts to create a clean political milieu through rectitude, service and sacrifice.

CCNUK URGES NORTH'S 'SINCERITY' ON REUNIFICATION

SK190959 Seoul YONHAP in English 0745 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 19 (YONHAP) -- The Central Committee for National Unification of Korea (CCNUK) Friday adopted a resolution at the conclusion of its 1982 conference in Seoul, urging North Korea to be sensitive to the aspirations of Koreans for the unification of their fatherland. CCNUK is a pan-national body spearheading private movements for peaceful national unification whose members are banned from launching poliitical activities.

The resolution suggested that Pyongyang should show the willingness "to commit themselves to the earliest possible realization of a peaceful unification of the divided country by responding immediately to Seoul's repeated proposals for national reconciliation and democratic unification formula."

CCNUK pointed out that despite the South's sincere efforts for national reconcilation, including an intra-Korean dialogue between the leaders of the two Koreas, Pyongyang has been repeating only propaganda-oriented proposals such as the "Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo" and a "mass rally for the promotion of the unification."

Friday's meeting, presided over by CCNUK Chairman Chon Kwan-wu, was attended by 140 representatives from each province and city under the direct control of the government. Addressing the gathering, Unification Board Minister Son Chae-sik said that "the realization of fatherland unification will be much nearer when the Koreans, wherever they are, first unify their mind, will and physical strength."

POLICE NAME SUSPECT IN ARSON AT ICA BUILDING

SK191035 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0904 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] According to a report from KBS Radio in Pusan, police investigating the incident of arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan are searching for a Korean ex-convict and several other suspects. They consider this incident as the work of impure elements intent on causing social disorder.

Han Ki-hyong, deputy director of the Pusan Police Bureau and currently serving as director of the investigation headquarters for the arson at the American Cultural Center, held a press conference this afternoon and said that police are engaged in a nationwide search for Chong Sun-chol -- 28-years old, of No. 533, Wolsandong, So-ku, Kwangju -- as a suspect in the arson. He was the prime mover in the arson incident at the Kwangju American Cultural Center on 9 December 1980. He said police are also searching for six or seven other accomplices.

Police assume that the arson incident was a premeditated crime perpetrated by the same organization which disseminated the subversive leaflets near the Yunha department store and the Kukto theater. Police also consider that there are more than two criminals, between the ages of 20 and 24, with women involved. Assuming that the criminals have not been able to get out of downtown Pusan, the police investigation headquarters is intensifying the watch at cross-country bus terminals and railway stations. Police are investigating the background of ex-convicts and impure organizations who have committed similar crimes.

Chong Sun-chol, wanted by the police, is the prime mover in the incident of arson at the Kwangju American Cultural Center on 9 December 1980. Police, figuring that he is involved in the Pusan incident because it was carried out in similar fashion with the arson in Kwangju, are searching for him by composing a photomontage.

Police are also searching for eyewitnesses as to the source of the fuel and plastic containers used by the criminals and the route used in transporting them.

Police estimate that the place where the crime was plotted is near the location of the fire in view of the fact that the fuel was poured into water containers.

The police investigation headquarters estimated the amount of property damage is about 50 million won after conducting an on-the-spot investigation together with U.S. investigation authorities at 1000 this morning.

North Korean Agents Suspected

SK190206 Seoul YONHAP in English 0200 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Pusan, March 19 (YONHAP) -- Local police, investigating Thursday's fire at Pusan's American Cultural Center (ACC), suspect that it may have been set by North Korean agents or militant dissidents.

Police said hundreds of leaflets threatening to detonate the cultural center were found in the vicinity of the building just before the fire broke out at 14:00 KST (5:00 GMT), and suggested that there was a link between the leaflets and the blaze. The leaflets are now being analyzed by police and counter-espionage officials.

The one-hour fire claimed the life of one Korean student who was visiting the ACC library, and seriously injured three other Koreans. The U.S. Embassy in Seoul has confirmed that there were no American casualties.

Further Report on Fire

SK190217 [Editorial report] On 19 March, three major vernacular morning papers published in Seoul carry prominent coverage of the 18 March fire of the Pusan U.S. Cultural Center and on indications of an act of arson.

Choson Ilbo, carrying YONHAP NEWS AGENCY reports from Pusan on the top of page 11, describes the outbreak of the fire and the casualties and goes on to say: "The Pusan police authorities who started to investigate the cause of the fire jointly with a U.S. military investigation team found that some subversive leaflets saying 'The U.S. Cultural Center will be blown up' were scattered in the neighborhood of the cultural center immediately before the outbreak of the fire. Thus, they are reportedly conducting an investigation, considering that the fire was almost certainly caused by an act of arson by some leftist elements or an antigovernment underground organization.

"According to police authorities, around 1350, about 10 minutes before the outbreak of the fire at 1402, the police reportedly found and collected the leaflets scattered in the neighborhood of the cultural center: 20 leaflets at the Yuna department store 100 meters from the cultural center, about 30 from the 3rd floor of the Yongdusan apartment house behind the department store, and about 200 from the rest room of the Kukto theater 500 meters from the department store.

"The Pusan police at 1900 called an emergency meeting participated in by the concerned officials of the counterespionage operations command and other investigation agencies and started to investigate the cause of the fire, analyzing the content of the collected leaflets in many different perspectives. Considering the conspicuous antigovernment and leftist content of the leaflets, the police authorities believe that it is almost certain that some antigovernment underground activist or North Korean spies selected the U.S. agency building for a premeditated act of arson to alienate Korea from the United States.

"Recently "Team spirit 1982," a joint ROK-U.S. military maneuveris in full swing and the ROK-U.S. relations are closer than ever. Therefore, it is considered that the North Korean puppets are scheming to disturb our stable situation and to create a chance to realize their ambition for the communization of the South."

HANGUK ILBO and Seoul SINMUN, all on page 11, carry conspicuous coverage on the outbreak of the fire and the casualties, and run reports, less extensive than CHOSON ILBO, on the indication of an act of arson. No additions are carried by the two papers.

The two Seoul morning English papers, THE KOREA TIMES and THE KOREA HERALD, also report on the fire.

THE KOREA HERALD on page 8 reports only on the outbreak of the fire and the casualties, not mentioning the leaflets.

Foreign Missions Closely Guarded

SK190157 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0100 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Assuming that the fire at the U.S. International Communication Agency building in Pusan may have been set by bad elements, the Seoul Metropolitan Police is strengthening security of the buildings of some 70 foreign diplomatic missions and residencies in the city by increasing police security guards deployed around them from the present 250 to some 500, beginning last night.

This measure by police authorities is based on the assumption that if the arsonists of the U.S. International Communication Agency building in Pusan are organized, there may be a strong possibility for them to select the U.S. Embassy building, residence and other U.S. buildings in Seoul as their second and third targets.

CHON CRITICIZES ASSEMBLY ON 'RICE SCANDAL'

SK181332 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 18 Mar 82 p 2

[Article from column "Tidbit"]

[Text] One hundred and fifty-two Democratic Justice Party [DJP] national assemblymen completed a 3-day training class on 18 March. Visiting the DJP political training institute in Karak-dong, Seoul on the afternoon the same day, President Chon Tu-hwan addressed the trainees for 40 minutes on 1) the unification proposal, 2) the 1986 Asian sports games and the 1988 Seoul Olympics, 3) stable economic growth, 4) the campaign to eliminate the psychologies of the three irregularities, 5) the reform of the political climate and 6) the national assemblymen's awareness of being masters.

Referring to the discussion of rice imports at the recent extraordinary National Assembly session, President Chon said: If lawmakers had demonstrated united efforts, they would have created a favorable atmosphere in which no country would dare to slight the Republic of Korea as in the past. It appears that they inverted the order of doing things in dealing with the issue.

President Chon said: Past practice was that those lawmakers who had different party affiliations hated to converse with one another, harboring much more hostile feelings than those of North-South confrontation. We should not behave like this.

President Chon said that for lawmakers to rally with a few complaining colleagues on the ground that the party authorities have not accepted their recommendations brings disgrace to the image of political leaders. He then said: Those who hold party posts should make efforts to eliminate serious detrimental factors in developing the party.

CULTURE MINISTRY REJECTS REPORTS ON ANGKOR

BK190419 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0445 GMT 17 Mar 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 17 Mar (SPK) -- The Kampuchean Ministry of Information and Culture issued a statement refuting biased news of some Western newspapers on the issue of deterioration of the Angkor temples. The statement says:

Three years after liberating the country from the genocidal regime, the People's Republic of Kampuchea, despite many difficulties, has paid great attention to the restoration of national culture -- abolished under Pol Pot -- in particular the restoration and preservation of Angkor. On this issue, the PRK issued a decree-law on 29 November 1980 concerning the defense and preservation of the nation's cultural heritage.

During Pol Pot-Ieng Sary times, all national infrastructures and institutions were completely destroyed and national culture was abolished. Monasteries were transformed into warehouses, temples were changed into cattle sheds or graneries, Buddha statues were broken, stones from temples such as Sneung Temple in Battambang and Preah Theat Temple in Kompong Thom were used to pave roads, to build bridges and dams. Angkor was abandoned and devastated by nature.

After emphasizing that the Ministry of Information and Culture closely cooperates with the Armed Forces of Kampuchea and Vietnam in the defense of Angkor, the statement continues:

Recently, some Western agencies pretended that the Angkor temples were destroyed by guardian troops who liked to fire at the statues and sculpture. We -- the responsible organ in the cultural field -- categorically refute these groundless statements, a black scheme to damage the prestige of the PRK Government and to break Kampuchea-Vietnam soldiarity.

Our government maintains close relations with archaeologists of friendly countries and has appealed to UNESCO for the restoration of the Angkor temples. No foreign expert came. Why did the Western journalists, who seem to be interested in the defense of Angkor, not speak about these activities to encourage our efforts? Why do they not denounce acts of vandalism committed by Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan? Why do they not denounce the vile activities of some foreign reactionaries who encourage wrong-doers to steal artwork from these temples?

BK191012 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1428 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 18 Mar (SPK) -- The Ministry of Agriculture convened the third national conference since liberation which was attended by delegates from all provinces, and districts as well as chiefs of vanguard solidarity groups.

VODK COMMENTARY CALLS FOR CONTINUED SUPPORT

BK120720 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 11 Mar 82

[Unattributed commentary: "The Sisophon-South of Route 5 Battlefield Is a Graveyard for the Le Duan Vietnamese Enemy Aggressors"]

[Summary] 'The Sisophon-south of Route 5 battlefield where the Malai and Mak Hoen regions are situated is in the western area of Kampuchea in Battambang Province, near the Thai border.

The world has known this zone since 1979. The world knows and sees very clearly the most criminal and barbarous acts of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors in massacring the Kampuchean people. Tens of thousands of the Kampuchean people were chased, shot at and scattered by the Vietnamese aggressors. These Kampucheans gathered in the border region in Sisophon District. They have suffered tragically from starvation. They have been continuously massacred by the Vietnamese use of chemical warfare. On the other hand, the world has known the Sisophon battlefield and especially the Malai and Mak Hoen regions because many reporters and foreign guests have visited these areas since 1797."

"Because this region is well-known to the world, the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies are trying to concentrate their forces for operations in this zone in order to gain a psychological boost by showing that they are strong and can smash the Democratic Kampuchean forces. They are trying to threaten the Southeast Asian countries, particularly Thailand, in order to legitimize their aggression in Kampuchea."

The Vietnamese have tried their best to mount military operations in this region since the beginning of the dry season and especially from January. They tried to use their military activities to serve their diplomatic maneuvers.

"The Democratic Kampuchean National Army, guerrillas and our Kampuchean people in the Sisophon-south of Route 5-Mongkolbhorei-Bavel region who have unceasingly suffered from Vietnamese aggression and race extermination for more than 3 years are very angry at them. Our brothers and sisters are determined to unite with each other shoulder to shoulder to fight against these Vietnamese enemy operations and to smash their arrogance. They are resolute about transforming the Sisophon-south of Route 5-Mongkolbhorei-Bavel battlefield into a big graveyard for the Vietnamese troops as they did in 1980 and 1981. They are determined to sweep the Vietnamese aggressors out of the Phnum Malai and Mak Hoen region."

Our army and guerrillas are divided into small groups to attack the Vietnamese troops from behind and on their flanks. "Last January, when the Vietnamese enemies started their operations against Democratic Kampuchea-controlled regions, our army and guerrillas inflicted 1,053 casualties on them at the frontlines and in their support areas. In February, our army and guerrillas inflicted more than 1,000 casualties on the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. In their continued operations against the Vietnamese enemies, our army and guerrillas have inflicted 885 casualties on them and destroyed five Vietnamese tanks. During the first week of March, our army and guerrillas have continued to fight the Vietnamese enemy operations on the Mak Hoen, Dammak Chek, Phnum Tuk, Phnum Sampeou Lun, Phnum Veng and Phnum Ta sda battlefronts and inflicted 388 casualties on the aggressors and destroyed four Vietnamese. A Vietnamese enemy battalion position, east of Phnum Boeng Di, was also attacked, inflicting 33 casualties and completely liberating it on 1 March." The Vietnamese enemy aggressors can never reverse the strategic situation in Kampuchea because they are completely bogged down on the battlefield. They have no desire to solve the Kampuchean problem peacefully in conformity with the world community's appeals and the resolutions of the UN General Assembly. They are trying to change their military situation only to serve their diplomatic tricks on the international scene. They are trying to force the world, especially the Southeast Asian countries, to accept their aggression in Kampuchea as a fait accompli. This purpose is to fulfill their strategy and that of the Soviet Union in Southeast Asia and the Asia-Pacific region.

"Therefore Southeast Asian countries and peace- and justice-loving countries all over the world realize even more the necessity to unite with each other to bring pressure on the Vietnamese until they withdraw all their aggressor troops from Kampuchea in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly. They should continue to assist and support the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea in their struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors until they are forced to retreat from Kampuchea in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea."

BK190629 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] According to a Radio Thailand reporter, at about 0835 today a serious incident occurred at the Surat Thani Provincial Administration Center. A man drove a car up to the front of the administration center building and shortly after he ran away from the car, it exploded, killing 4 officials instantly and injuring more than 10 others. Several bicycles and cars parked nearby and the administration center building were also damaged.

Initial investigations show that the explosion was caused by 40 lbs of TNT. After the explosion Surat Thani Governor Sawai Sirimongkhon, the commander of provincial police zone 10, Police Maj Gen Wut Chanphithak, and the commanders of the Surat Thani provincial police and the combined civilian, police and military unit 42 of Surat Thani inspected the explosion site and summoned fire trucks to the area. The injured were also taken to the hospital immediately. The investigation is continuing.

The reporter also noted that army commander Gen Prayut Charumani, who started an inspection trip to the south this morning, went to the site of the incident.

At about 1100 a public relations department reported at the Interior Ministry said that the Surat Thani governor had already reported to the Interior Ministry about the incident and the resultant damage. The governor reported that the car that exploded had been driven up and parked at the left front side of the building, where his office is located. A bomb also exploded in his office at the instant the car exploded. The governor had already arrived for work at the time of the explosion but had left his office to visit the countryside.

Interior Ministry Under Secretary Phisan Munlasatsathon told reporters later that the communist terrorists from Camp 508 were responsible for the incident. Camp 508 was recently captured by the government. According to assistant army commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek, from 8 to 10 people were killed in the incident and as many as 50 others were wounded. The Surat Thani deputy governor was among those killed.

FLIGHT RECORDER RETRIEVED FROM AN-26 AIRCRAFT

[Text] Thai military authorities yesterday found what they believed to be an important evidence that will help them determine the motive of the recent intrusion into Thai airspace by a Vietnamese aircraft which crash-landed in Sa Kaeo District last month. They retrieved a flight recorder from the tail section of the Antonov AN-26 plane and brought it back to Bangkok to be decoded.

The search for the flight recorder, which the military officers said contained the message between the pilot and the ground station, began at 9 am. It was found at 2 pm. Twenty military experts, aided by over 20 technicians and workers, jacked up the wreckage of the plane, which had been lying on a tapioca field since crash-landing last month.

Supreme Command spokesman Lt Gen Som Khattaphan said that the Vietnamese plane had intentionally violated the Thai airspace. Hanoi has repeatedly asked Thailand to return the aircraft with its 12 surviving passengers and crewmen. The 12 Vietnamese are being detained at the Ninth Army Division headquarters in Watthana Nakhon.

Mr Suthep Thuaksuban, a Surat Thani MP and secretary to Mr Chuan, said yesterday that his boss's decision not to run in the elections stemmed from his desire to see more unity in the party and avoid unnecessary internal rivalries.

Besides, Mr Suthep said, Mr Chuan has no ambition to become leader of the Democrat Party -- an alleged ambition which he has been criticized for harbouring -- and is satisfied with his present status as deputy leader of Democrats and minister of agriculture and co-operatives.

The Surat Thani MP said that Mr Phichai Rattakun, who is tipped to become the new leader of the Democrat Party, is well recognized among the party members and is capable of maintaining unity in the party.

MESSAGE TO UN ASSAILS SOUTH AFRICAN APARTHEID

OW190741 Hanoi VNA in English 0717 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 19 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today sent a message to United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and President of the Special U.N. Committee Against Apartheid (Yusuff Maitama-Sule) on international day against racism.

The message reads: "Racism and apartheid are among the worst crimes strongly condemned by mankind. That they can exist at all is due to abetment by imperialism and international reaction. The U.S. Government is paying lip service to human rights and pretending opposition to international terrorism, but actually it has vetoed U.N. resolutions on sanctions against South Africa and has encouraged the apartheid South African regime to brutally terrorize fighters of the African National Congress, illegally occupy Namibia, and continuously step up provocations and armed activities against Angola, Mozambique, and other frontline countries, thus creating an extremely critical situation in southern Africa.

"We warmly welcome the recent U.N. decision to make 1982 the international year of mobilisation for sanctions against South Africa. This correct decision reflects the world people's will in the resolute struggle against ugly, criminal racism and apartheid. The people and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam vehemently condemn apartheid; we support all resolutions on sanctions against South Africa and demand that the United States and international reaction stop backing that racist regime.

"The people and the Government of the S.R.V. reiterate their resolute support for the South African people's just struggle for genuine national independence and freedom under the A.N.C. leadership. May the international year of mobilization for sanctions against South Africa be highly successful."

PRC 'MULTIFACETED WAR OF DESTRUCTION' ANALYZED

BK180413 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese Feb 82, pp 53-57

[Article by Nguyen Duc Thieng: "The Multifaceted War of Destruction Waged by the Chinese Expansionists and Hegemonists"]

[Text] Following the tragic and shameful defeat of the truculent war of aggression which they waged from 17 February to 6 March 1979, the Chinese reactionaries have realized that they cannot annex our country through mere military measures. They have shifted then to a multifaceted war of destruction against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam (SRV) in order to weaken us and, whenever possible, wage a large-scale war of aggression.

In the past 3 years, implementing the strategy of a multifaceted war of destruction against Vietnam, the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists have maintained their military pressure and war threat continuously in several guises along the northern border.

They have regularly massed a large military force close to the border, dug trenches and built roads to move weapons, equipment, food and troops to various strongholds along the border. At times, they have sent troops to attack us, nibbling at our territory and occupying some of the heights along the border. They have thus far occupied 30 additional points in Lang Son, Cao Bang, Ha Tuyen and Hoang Lien Son Provinces. They want to control a large area deep inside Vietnamese territory, use it as a springboard from which to nibble at and occupy more areas of our territory continuously turning them into hot spots of protracted battles and absorbing more of our forces there so as to weaken our forces in other places and be able to further their land-grabbing operations.

To occupy the various heights and grab land has become an increasingly notorious goal of China's military attacks. The attacks to occupy Height No 1992 in Xin Man, Ha Tuyen Province in November 1980; Height 400 in Cao Loc, Lang Son Province; and Heights Nos 1800A and 1800B in Vi Xuyen, Ha Tuyen Province in May and June 1981 are the most notorious ones.

They further sent troops deep into villages to loot crops, fell trees, dismantle and take away houses, lay ambushes and plant mines to kill our troops, cadres and people going back and forth to work, causing a permanently tense and unstable situation. Then they accuse us of adopting a "scorched earth policy" to oppose China.

The Chinese reactionaries' military activities are aimed at pushing the war onto the Vietnamese side of the border area, creating a so-called border situation which will permit them to legalize openly the grabbing of some of our territory. They also hope that such a situation will enable them to send their spies and reconnaissance agents to our country to survey the situation here, conduct underground activities and psychological warfare, and stir up counterrevolutionary riots.

Moreover, through their military operations, especially their land-grabbing attacks on the border areas, the Chinese reactionaries want to improve their military deployment and further perfect their battle positions to the advantage of their war of aggression. At the same time by combining its war provocations with its slanderous campaign against our country, Beijing plots to stimulate the chauvinistic and expansionist psychology of its troops, directly preparing for a large-scale war.

Using the trick of "thief crying, stop thief," Beijing has passed the buck to us; rejected talks and continued to implement the strategy of multifaceted destruction against our country even more intensively.

Beijing's military acts of sabotage against Vietnam can be said to be carried out in several guises. They are aimed at many specific immediate objectives and combined closely with various cruel, fundamental and long-range plots.

The political and ideological attack constitutes a particularly important part of the multifaceted war of destruction waged by the Beijing reactionaries against the SRV. The war of spies and the psychological warfare not only support the military offensive but has been upgraded by the Chinese reactionaries to a strategic measure to attack our interior, muster the reactionary political forces and build disguised socialism and Marxism-Leninism in order to oppose and attack the Vietnamese revolution.

The Chinese reactionaries have further taken advantage of a small number of people still affected by the vestiges of Maoist ideology or those who are irresolute and dissatisfied, some reactionaries among the ethnic minority people and bad elements among the Vietnamese of Chinese descent, and have coordinated with the U.S. intelligence network to try and establish new reactionary organizations inside and outside our country. They have further sent thousands of scouts to the border areas of our country to survey the situation there and plant their agents among the ethnic minority people and in those border areas where many Chinese-born Vietnamese people are living.

They have used these elements in their distorting and divisive propaganda in order to undermine the confidence of the masses in our party and government. They have also used lackey Hoang Van Hoan to justify their aggressive activities, attract Vietnamese residents in China and exert a psychological influence on the people living in the border areas (former revolutionary bases) in order to attract some people into the so-called "Hoang Van Hoan armed forces." They have organized scores of camps and stations in the provinces bordering on our country in order to train reconnaissance agents, commandos and spies, and infiltrate them into our country.

It is clear that the Chinese reactionaries have purposely undermined the morale of each specific objective. With regard to comprador bourgeois, landlords and puppet troops dodging rehabilitation, they try to stir up a psychology of regret for the former regime in order to muster some opposition forces. With respect to workers and other laboring people, they attempt to instill a "bourgeois concept of trade unions" into them. As for the scientific and technical cadres, they contact those who are faced with a difficult livelihood, irresolute ideologically and degenerate qualitatively and tell these cadres that they have been exploited and that our regime pays no attention to intellectuals. Several times, they have spread false rumors saying that some of the famous social activists and scientists have left the country in order to cause confusion and suspicion among the people. They have incited some retired cadres to blame the party and the state.

The Beijing reactionaries in collusion with the U.S. imperialists have concentrated on undermining the morale of our youths and teenagers -- their main target -- to smear the thoughts and emotions of the young generation and destroy our future forces and the latent potentials of our revolution. They have driven erring youths into the clandestine counter-revolutionary organization of quisling Hoang Von Hoan. They have further cruelly plotted to goad the children of our leading cadres and revolutionary families into committing wrongdoings and crimes in order to impair the prestige of the revolution.

The Chinese reactionaries in collusion with the U.S. imperialists have used the Vietnamese reactionaries who have fled abroad to publish reactionary books and magazines smearing our regime and beautifying the exploitative regimes of Western societies in order to incite more of our people to flee abroad. They trained those people who had been coerced and deceived by them to leave for China and have sent these people back to Vietnam to conduct their psychological warfare operations, organize espionage and sabotage our country.

They have paid much attention to using mass information facilities to conduct their reactionary, slanderous propaganda. The local radio stations and the 25 wired radio stations which China has built along its border with our country beam thei broadcasts in different tribal dialects to the northern border of our country for three or four hours daily in order to poison the thinking of our ethnic minority people in the border areas.

The Beijing reactionaries have also emphasized the use of leaflets printed in beautifully attractive colors on good paper which contain specific and concise counterpropaganda themes suitable to different times and localities. They have sought every way and facility (aircraft, balloons, shelling, floating rafts downstream) to disseminate these leaflets. During 1981, they scattered more than 50 different types of leaflets in 10 northern provinces of our country.

They have also used small yet no less dangerous forms of propaganda such as spreading false rumors, telling dirty "political jokes" and composing folk songs and sayings to disseminate their reactionary themes. Such other forms as prophecy, fortune telling, ear-to-ear whispering and verbal transmission have also been used to sow suspicion among the people who cannot tell right from wrong and finally spread the news for them free.

The Beijing reactionaries' openly hostile activities to attack Vietnam politically and ideologically in the past fall in with their consistent strategy of sabotaging Vietnam and other Indochinese countries from several standpoints. They have taken advantage of the situation, in which our people are encountering economic and living problems resulting from decades of destructive wars, to attack us -- spearheading their attacks on our party and state -- in order to make some segments of our people suspicious and confused, thereby lessening their vigilance against the nation's enemy. They have also rekindled the vestiges of the former society which we have not eliminated completely in order to make our society insecure and disorderly, and pervert our lifestyle.

Economic sabotage to weaken Vietnam is also one of strategic objectives of the Chinese reactionaries' multifaceted war of destruction against Vietnam. More than 5,000 cases of armed provocations along Vietnam's northern border in the past 3 years have destroyed many houses, storage facilities, shops, hospitals, schools, crops and orchards of our people, forcing some of our people in the border areas to evacuate and leaving some areas uncultivated.

To weaken Vietnam's economy, the Beijing reactionaries have organized 20 markets along the border, selling commodities very cheaply or on credit and flooding our country with luxury items. At the same time, they have bought our goods at high prices, have raked in our gold and gems, and have bought some of our people into removing landmines in exchange for their commodities, and into selling eyes and horns of water buffalo, corn silk and anis root to them. All of these activities are aimed at destroying our production.

They have spread false rumors about increases in commodity prices and plans to replace currency. They have had their henchmen speculate in and hoard commodities, disrupting domestic markets. They have bought some of our cadres or have sought to corrupt some of our high-ranking cadres in order to cause negative manifestations in our production and life. The enemy's reconnaissance agents and commandos have coordinated with its henchmen inside our country to organize the sabotage of our economy, machinery, storage facilities and such important construction projects as ports and communications roads. Moreover, some Chinese-born Vietnamese and their lackeys have counterfeited money and food ration stamps, have falsified products and have played up the trick of exchanging it for the old currency in order to devalue the Vietnamese dong, destabilizing our economy. The enemy has further released epidemic-affected livestock (pigs, chickens and horses) across the border in order to kill our livestock and poultry. It has even taken advantage of the wind direction to cause several forest fires in Land Son and Hoang Lien Son Provinces.

The Beijing reactionaries in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries have carried out an economic embargo against our country in order to sabotage our international economic relations. They have distorted our party's correct international line to urge capitalist countries to cut their aid to our country and to cancel loan and trade contracts already concluded with our country.

Beijing hoped that its aforementioned acts of economic sabotage would worsen Vietnam's originally weak economy and that sooner and later we would no longer be able to bear its military pressure.

The destructive war waged by Beijing against Vietnam is very cruel from the military, economic, ideological, cultural, social and diplomatic standpoints. It is aimed at destabilizing our economy, weakening our country and creating favorable conditions for Beijing to wage a large-scale war whenever possible.

All of these hostilities fall in with Beijing's long range plan to "bleed" Vietnam, undermine the solidarity bloc of the three Indochinese countries and pave the way for a larger scale aggression to annex our country and Indochina as a whole and for expansion into Southeast Asia.

If imperialism is generally stigmatized by its reactionary and stubborn characters, Chinese expansionism and hegemony not only is reactionary and stubborn but also is badly treacherous. If the imperialists' regional plot is to invade Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries, making them old or new colonialists, to seize all resources, exploit labor, establish military bases and sabotage the revolution; then the Chinese reactionaries' plot is to weaken and annex Vietnam and Indochina as a whole, carry out genocide and national assimilation, and create a springboard from which to expand themselves into Southeast Asia and to advance toward global hegemony.

The Chinese reactionaries' plot vis-a-vis our country, Laos and Kampuchea is notoriously cruel, dangerous and relentless. since the plot constitutes their main guideline for expansion and Indochina is the main stronghold and key area to be occupied in order to expand themselves farther into the south. If Vietnam and Indochina as a whole cannot be annexed, in the immediate as well as distant future, the Chinese reactionaries will have no other way to realize their dream of expansion into Southeast Asia and the world. The Chinese reactionaries have long nourished the plot to annex Vietnam and other Indochinese countries. During our former resistance struggle against the United States, the chinese authorities still considered the United States as their enemy and were forced to help "the enemy of their enemy." However, ever since that time, they have prepared gradually to carry out their cruel scheme to annex Vietnam. No sooner had we extricated ourselves from the long and destructive war with wounds all over to be healed and with countless difficulties caused by the war, then the Beijing authorities already exposed themselves as the worst traitor. Expansionism and hegemony -- the core of Maoism -- has turned the Beijing rulers into traitors who betray Marxism-Leninsim and the Chinese people, and into aggressors and saboteurs very dangerous to our country.

The Beijing reactionaries will leave no stone unturned in preparing for a large-scale war of aggression to annex our country whenever conditions so permit. The multifaceted war of destruction being waged by them is designed to create such conditions. So long as the Chinese authorities have not relinquished their expansionist and hegemonist dream, this multifaceted war of destruction will go on and the large-scale war to annex our country is still likely to occur. Our struggle against the expansionist and hegemonist plot of the Chinese reactionaries for national defense is a long, complicated and relentless struggle for survival during which we absolutely can not slacken our vigilance for a minute. History has entrusted our party and people with the mission of countering this dangerous enemy. This is a duty that we cannot shirk. For the sake of the country's independence and freedom, the people's happiness and the noble international obligations, let all our party and people tighten our ranks around the party Central Committee headed by respected and beloved Le Duan, and resolve to devote all our effort to building socialism successfully and defending the socialist Vietnam Fatherland firmly.

NHAN DAN EDITORIAL ON SETTLEMENT OF NOMADS

BK181015 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 16 Mar 82

[NHAN DAN 17 March editorial: "The Settlement of Nomads"]

[Text] Under the motivation campaign conducted over the past few years, some 1.6 million more people have gradually settled their farming and life. Despite difficulties in terms of capital, materials and grain during 1981, the people of all nationalities in various localities have upheld their spirit of solidarity and mutual assistance to effectively use the state investments in building permanent production bases for settled farming and various public utility projects for a settled life.

This has contributed to stabilizing the production and life of the tribal people and to developing political security and social order in the mountainous border areas.

The settlement of nomads should continue. In the mountainous areas of our country there are still 2 million or more nomads. Their primitive slash-and-burn production method has led to the destruction of forests, especially watershed forests. The wandering life of nomads has become increasingly difficult.

The Council of Ministers resolution on the economic and cultural development of the midlands and mountainous regions under the Third 5-Year Plan stresses: We must basically complete the settlement of nomads by resolutely creating all the conditions necessary for stabilizing production and life for the tribal people. In 1982, we should continue to accelerate the construction of permanent production bases and other necessary material and technical bases and concentrate on resolving the problem of settled farming an life in those important areas from economic, political and national defense standpoints.

The main norms to be attained are: Over the next few years to reclaim more than 2,000 hectares of virgin land and build ricefields and to struggle in the areas of settled farming and life in order to reach a per capita reclamation rate of 1,500 to 2,000 square meters of stabilized ricefields and to give each person an annual ration of 350 to 400 kg or grain.

The tasks to be implemented are: Continue to complete various capital construction projects and build 70 new, small water conservancy projects, 500 kms of roads and 90 public welfare utilities; plant 4,000 hectares of trees and long-term industrial crops; relocate 8,800 households and build houses for them; specifically plan the establishment of 171 villages; and complete the settlement of 100,000 nomads.

At a time when our capital remains limited, if we want to achieve the above targets we should actively exploit all of the local potential, uphold the people's sense of duty and implement the motto: the state and people work together.

The settlement of nomads can be carried out only on the basis of urging the tribal people to voluntarily change their old work habits, of building the material bases for settled farming and settled life such as ricefields, roads and permanent orchards and houses. We should establish plans for each center of settled farming and settl correctly determine production guidelines, clearly define the relations between grain production and the development of existing strengths, and concentrate on guiding the settlement of nomads in each given area. First of all, no matter where we are, we should make full use of the land to produce grain in line with the regional conditions and the general situation.

Local nomads should be our main target. Consequently, we should combine the motivation campaign with the establishment and consolidation of cooperatives and production collectives, so that people can help one another produce and build a new life.

In those localities where state-owned economic installations such as farms, forests and factories exist, we should act to enroll nomads as workers. In the mountainous border areas, we should combine the settlement of nomads with the consolidation of national defense by holding fast to our villages and land to maintain production and to fight.

The assistance provided by the fraternal people of various nationalities coupled with limited state investment and the industriousnes of all the people will create the strength which will enable us to overcome difficulties and fulfill the settlement of nomads.

VCP ISSUES EMULATION MOVEMENT RESULTS COMMUNIQUE

OW161342 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 15 Mar 82

[From the Hanoi press review for 15 March]

[Text] Today's Hanoi papers concentrate on the fervent emulation drive of our entire armed forces and people to score achievements in honor of the fifth party congress.

On page 1, NHAN DAN carries the following communique of the party Central Committee Secretariat on the results of the patriotic socialist emulation movement to score outstanding achievements in honor of the party congress: Entering 1981, the first year of the 1981-1985 5-year plan, our people and people's armed forces encountered many difficulties due to the great imbalances in our economy accumulated from previous years. The difficulties were more pronounced toward the end of the year due to a prolonged drought and the existence of rice pests in many areas. In addition, we had to constantly cope with our enemy's all-round war of destruction. However, 1981 was also a year with favorable weather conditions, a year in which the expanded application of a number of new economic positions and policies effectively promoted our people's intensive productive labor.

In the face of such a situation, and in response to the party Central Committee appeal, a movement for revolutionary actions was whipped up to make positive preparations for the fifth party congress. Responding to the premier's directive and the masses' plans to step up the emulation movement to score outstanding achievements in honor of the party congress, all sectors and echelons attached great importance to doing a good job in organizing the 1981 emulation movement. The movement was aimed at promoting emulation in overcoming difficulties, developing advantages, and successfully fulfilling the 1981 state plan. This would serve as an impetus for a widespread emulation drive to successfully fulfil the 1982 state plan and to successfully carry out the resolution to be passed at the coming fifth party congress.

The Secretariat then praised the achievements scored in agriculture, forestry and fisheries, industry, capital construction, communications, transportation, small industry and handicrafts, distribution-circulation, social culture and consolidation of public security and national defense.

The communique concludes by noting the following experiences gained in the emulation movement: Through the developments and results of the emulation movement, the following conclusions -- which are also the major experiences -- may be drawn:

1. The people manifest their close unity with the leading party with realistic revolutionary actions. Emulation in scoring outstanding achievements in honor of the party congress is the aspiration of the majority of our people.

2. The management mechanism must be constantly improved and jobs must be secured for all people.

3. The most important requirement to be met through emulation is to fulfill state plans. Therefore, the administration and mass organizations must closely coordinate with each other, guidance on emulation must be carried out persistently and continuously, controls and supervision must be exerted, good experiences must be praised, and errors must be straightened out.

4. Emulation is a revolutionary movement of the masses. Therefore, it must be placed under the party's constant and direct leadership. Emulation must be linked to the party's other tasks. Party members must set examples in emulation. Party chapters must lead emulation drives.

5. Localities must know how to promote their revolutionary traditions and instill pride into the masses.

6. Creative methods must be applied to motivate and organize emulation drives. The organization of emulation agreements is one of the good methods.

7. To ensure a steady, continuous emulation movement, it is necessary to improve the masses' spiritual and material conditions in a regular, realistic and just manner, primarily for those who score achievements.

8. It is extremely important to encourage the masses with timely information and propaganda activities. However, it is necessary to overcome the situation in which the emulation movement is unevenly carried out in localities, sectors and installations. The emulation movement still does not exist in some units. The emulation movement in the distribution and circulation sectors is still weak. Many government managerial agencies and businesses have not yet organized emulation drives.

DEATHS, ARRESTS REPORTED AFTER JAKARTA RIOTS

BK190657 Hong Kong AFP in English 0625 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Jakarta, 19 March (AFP) -- Police arrested 240 people during rioting in Jakarta last night following a Molotov cocktail attack on a campaign rally of the ruling Golkar Party, it was announced today. A total of 11 people, including two women, were said to have died in the violence, which reportedly spread to the Bogor area, 60 kms (35 miles) south of Jakarta, and to Bandung, 200 kms (125 miles) southeast of the Indonesian capital. The arrests announcement was made by national security chief Admiral Sudomo at a press conference following talks with leaders of the three political groups contesting the election scheduled for May 4. The government would set up special tribunals to try the rioters as soon as possible, he promised. Admiral Sudomo said a total of 62 people were injured, including two policemen and a police woman on duty. But hospital sources said the number of injured had exceeded 100, including people treated at the army hospital.

The capital was quite but tense, with armed troops guarding strategic places. Security troops were ordered to shoot on sight anyone involved in arson, killings or destruction, a military spokesman said. "Strict measures will be taken to ensure peace and order," he said.

Meanwhile, Admiral Sudomo announced new rules banning schoolchildren under age 16 from attending campaign rallies on the grounds that most of the rioters were high-school students. He suggested that rallies should be held either at 10 a.m. or between 4 and 5 p.m. so that the meetings could finish before sunset. In Jakarta, he banned any further campaign rallies in Banteng Square, where yesterday's rioting began, and he named two places, the Istora Sport Hall and the Senayan parking lot as the future venues for rallies.

Admiral Sudomo blamed supporters of the contesting parties for the rioting, saying that they were generally "trouble-makers" who were hired by the parties.

The three parties, Golkar (pro-government), PPP (Moslem United Development Party) and PDI (Indonesian Democratic Party) issued a joint statement condemning the riots and calling on the government to take firm action against those responsible. The statement also said that no party members had taken part in the riots and stressed their unity in the current election campaign.

Admiral Sudomo today summoned leaders of Golkar and its two rivals, the PPP and PDI, to discuss the current political situation which badly marred the supposedly calm campaign.

The riot was the worst since the violent anti-Japanese demonstrations in 1974 in which scores of youths were killed and hundreds of Japanese cars were set alight.

The incident quickly sparked rioting that spread to other Jakarta suburbs where a number of shops, cars and an office of Golkar's youth organisation (AMPI) were set on fire.

Golkar officials last night dismissed charges that certain PPP and PDI elements were behind the rioting, which started just before Information Minister General Ali Murtopo was to speak to the rally.

Sudomo said the political parties, including Golkar, will take precautionary measures with the cooperation of the security authorities to enable them to control their party members as well as their supporters.

Sudomo urged the three contestants not to use students under 17 years of age in their campaign.

SAKURAUCHI DEPARTS FOR 5-DAY VISIT TO U.S.

OW201053 Tokyo KYODO in English 1046 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 20 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi left here Saturday night on a five-day visit to Washington for talks on trade frictions and other bilateral problems. Also high on the agenda for talks will be the Polish issue and aid to the troubled Central American and Caribbean region.

Sakurauchi will meet with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, President Ronald Reagan and other U.S. leaders early next week. This is Sakurauchi's first overseas tour after he became foreign minister last November.

TRANSPORT MINISTER VIEWS AIR TALKS BREAKDOWN

OW201217 Tokyo KYODO in English 1152 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 20 (KYODO) -- Transport Minister Tokusaburo Kosaka, commenting on Friday's collapse of air talks in San Francisco, Saturday blamed the U.S. rejection of Japanese requests for expanded "beyond" rights and permission to serve more points in the U.S. for the breakdown.

The Japanese and U.S. delegations did not discuss when to resume negotiations, Kosaka said. He added that a certain "cooling-off" period would be needed before negotiations could reopen. If the U.S. should take reprisals against Japan, Japan would also have no choice but to take retaliatory measures, Kosaka said.

The transport chief said the breakdown of negotiations is a minus for the two countries' ties as a whole. However, he said bluntly that there is "no need whatever" for the Japanese delegation to make any unreasonable concessions. After the air talks, Japanese Ambassador Okawara and Transport Vice Minister Nakamura told reporters that the key factor leading to the rupture in negotiations was the U.S. rejection of Japan's demand for expanded "beyond rights" -- the right to serve points beyond a certain U.S. city.

The two leaders of the Japanese delegation also said the U.S. spurned a Japanese proposal that U.S. airlines limit the volume of transportation beyond Japan to present levels. The American side claimed that such a limitation would be tantamount to a reduction in the United States' vested rights.

Darrell M. Trent, U.S. deputy secretary of transport, said the Japanese claimed there are inequalities between Japan and the U.S. under the 1952 bilateral civil air transport agreement. However, Trent claimed 51 percent of Pacific lines' revenues go to Japan Air Lines, 40 percent to American enterprises and 9 percent to other companies. This perception gap was an important factor behind the failure of the two delegations to reach an agreement, the American official said.

SUZUKI, ITO VIEW DEFENSE PROGRAM SCHEDULE

OW220644 Tokyo KYODO in English 0621 GMT 22 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 22 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Monday the government will bring Japan's defense capability up to the level set forth in the national defense program outline as soon as possible. Speaking to graduating cadets from the Defense Academy in Yokosuka, south of Tokyo, Suzuki said this must be done in view of tension mounting between the Eastern and Western blocs and other severe international situation.

Suzuki said there will be many difficult economic and security problems in the 1980's while the international situation will remain unstable. He said it is difficult for Japan to maintain its security alone, pointing to the importance of the Japan-U.S. security setup.

"As a member of the free world community, it is important for us to steadily expand defense capability with a firm resolve to defend the nation by our own efforts," Suzuki said.

He called on the nation to share this determination and added the Self-Defense Forces should join hands with the people to accomplish their duties. He said his government is trying to achieve the level of Japan's defense strength envisaged in the national defense program outline, adopted in 1976. The outline said the nation should maintain a posture of full vigilance during peacetime and cope effectively with limited and small-scale aggression.

Defense Agency Director General Soichiro Ito, who also spoke at the ceremony, stressed severe internaional situation by mentioning the Soviet military buildup in the Far East. Ito said the Defense Agency was making utmost efforts to accomplish the goal laid down in the national defense program outline as soon as possible.

SOURCES REACT TO U.S. PROPOSAL TO SELL RICE

OW191243 Tokyo KYODO in English 1214 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 19 KYODO -- The U.S. expressed a wish to sell rice to Japan, a country now struggling to reduce its own overproduction of rice, when an economic mission of this country's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party visited Washington late last month, government sources disclosed Friday. This is the first time that the U.S. has made known such a desire at formal talks with Japan, they said.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, in asking Japan to buy American rice, made no reference whatever to the possible volume and timing of rice export. He made the request to the mission after demanding Japan's import liberalization of beef, citrus and fruit juice, the sources said.

Officials of the Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Ministry are puzzled over whether the U.S. really wants to sell rice to Japan or wants Japan to buy surplus American rice for supply to food-short developing nations, they said. Farmers' organizations here, already deeply worried by Washington's growing pressures for liberalization of Japan's agricultural imports, are all the more alarmed by the disclosure of U.S. intentions about rice since rice is Japan's No. 1 farm production on which farmers' livelihood hinges.

The LDP mission, led by former International Trade and Industry Minister Masumi Esaki, visited the U.S. for a week from February 20 to gain U.S. understanding on Tokyo's effort to open the Japanese market wider to foreign products and thus to placate strong American discontent with their heavy trade deficits with Japan.

FISHERY TALKS WITH USSR OPEN IN MOSCOW 7 APR

OW181305 Tokyo KYODO in English 1243 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 18 (KYODO) -- Japan and the Soviet Union will open fisheries talks in Moscow April 7 to set a quota for Japanese salmon fishing within the Soviet 200-mile exclusive fishing zone, the Fisheries Agency said Thursday. The fisheries talks are held annually on the basis of the 1978 Japan-Soviet fishery cooperation treaty to set quotas, fishing areas and durations and also the Japanese "cooperation" fee to be paid to the Soviet side for the salmon catching. The annual catch quota has remained unchanged at 42,500 tons since 1978.

On the ground that salmon resources are diminishing, the Soviet Union is certain to deny Japanese demands for a larger quota for the coming year. It is also likely to demand an increase in the Japanese fee from the current year's yen 4 billion (about dollar 17 million).

PYONGYANG REPORTS FIRE AT ICA BUILDING IN PUSAN

SK201440 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1300 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] According to a news report, a fire broke out at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan at around 1400 on 18 March. It is said that the fire, accompanied by a loud noise, burst out in the first floor of the cultural center. Although about 20 fire engines were mobilized, this building was in fierce flames for an hour. It is said that the chief of the Pusan office of the U.S. Embassy in South Korea was injured when he leaped from the second floor to escape death.

A foreign news report said that about 10 minutes before the fire broke out, hundreds of anti-U.S. fliers were scattered at four spots in the vicinity of this building. It is said that the leaflets denounced the crimes of the U.S. imperialists, who are pursuing Korea's permanent division, and U.S. economic exploitation of South Korea. It is also reported the leaflets said: "United States, get out of here."

A foreign news report said the leaflets carried the words "We demand that the United States stop making this country its vassal and withdraw from this land."

It is said the leaflets carried a message urging people to denounce the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique and rise up in a riot [poktong]. It is also said that the leaflets carried a message denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan ring's hosting of the 1988 Olympics and protesting the master-servant relations between the South Korea puppet clique and the United States.

Foreign news reports pointed out that at least seven persons were involved in the attack against the U.S. Cultural Center and in the dissemination of the fliers.

A foreign news report said the leaflets state that this attack against the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan was only the beginning of the anti-U.S. campaign. A foreign news report, touching on the fact that leaflets carrying anti-U.S. sentiments have appeared since last year's students' struggle, paid attention to the fact that anti-U.S. sentiments among people have been rising high.

Meanwhile, confused and perplexed at this incident, the South Korean fascist clique is kicking up a racket by conducting a joint investigation with the U.S. Army. In an attempt to keep the anti-U.S. struggle flames from reaching Seoul, they have greatly increased the number of police guards at foreign mission offices in Seoul from about 250 to 500. They have greatly strengthened the guard at the U.S. Embassy since the night of 18 March.

This is the second time that U.S. Cultural Centers in South Korea caught fire in recent years. The U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Cholla Province, caught fire in December 1980. A similar fire broke out at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan at around 1400 on 18 March.

Meanwhile, according to news reports in Japanese newspapers quoted by the Korean news service in Tokyo, it is said that leaflets scattered in the vicinity of the U.S. Cultural Center building in Pusan bore a message denouncing U.S. neocolonialism and opposing Japan-South Korea economic cooperation.

MAINICHI SHIMBUN reports that the leaflets carried a message which ran: "Under the cloak of economic cooperation, the United States and Japan are trying to make us an economically subject nation." It is said the leaflets also carried a harsh message saying: "The present government has completed its preparations for a northward invasion." Reporting on these facts, the newspaper pointed out that the fire at the U.S. Cultural Center is causing a great shock to the South Korean fascist clique and the United States.

NODONG SINMUN Hails ICA Fire

SK220345 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2249 GMT 21 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 22 March commentary: "An Explosion of Resentment and Indignation Against the U.S. Imperialists"]

[Text] As was already reported, the U.S. Cultural Center building in Pusan was burned during the day on 18 March, and anti-U.S. leaflets were scattered around it. According to foreign press reports, the leaflets condemned the U.S. imperialists' crimes of scheming to divide Korea permanently and the U.S. neocolonial policy against South Korea, and they demanded that the U.S. forces withdraw from South Korea. The leaflets also condemned the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique and appealed to the people to rise up in a riot [poktong]. The leaflets indicated that the attack on the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan was nothing but the start of an anti-U.S. campaign.

The arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan and the dissemination of the leaflets are an expression of the stern resistance against the U.S. imperialist aggressors who are frantic in their policy for the forcible occupation of South Korea and for their schemes of division and war. They are also not only an explosion of the anti-U.S. sentiment deeply stored up in the hearts of the South Korean people for a long time but also an expression of their firm will and patriotism to drive out the U.S. imperialists and to restore national dignity and sovereignty.

This brave struggle was staged when the U.S. imperialists and their stooges are staging the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise -- which is the largest one in history -- to threaten the Korean people by force and are noisily advertising so-called South Korea-U.S. friendship, clamoring about the centennial anniversary of diplomatic relations between them. It vividly shows how high the anti-U.S. sentiment is growing among the South Korean people. This struggle showed that the South Korean people are still alive even under the dark military fascist and oppressive rule and that they are turning the spearhead of their struggle to the U.S. imperialists, who are the ringleaders of aggression and plundering and who are the source of all misfortune and sufferings.

The attack against the U.S. Cultural Center and the dissemination of the leaflets were not acts staged on impulse at the spur of the moment by a few people but reflected the ever-growing anti-U.S. sentiment among all of the South Korean people, and they are nothing but a due consequence of the U.S. imperialists' colonial and reactionary politics against South Korea.

Since the first day of their occupation of South Korea, the U.S. imperialist aggressors have been engaged in oppression, plundering and frantic war policy through the most brutal colonial, fascist rule of terror, while they have constantly perpetrated all sorts of beast-like atrocities against the South Korean people. The various criminal acts of aggression committed by the U.S. imperialists in South Korea over the past 37 years have added a new curse page to the disgraceful, blood-stained U.S. history.

Under the invariable, aggressive ambition to hold on to South Korea as a colony and military base, and, using it as a springboard, to dominate all of Korea, the U.S. imperialists have constantly built up the U.S. armed forces stationed in South Korea and the puppet army strength. They are staging the largest-scale test war for northward invasion in anticipation of a nuclear war and are perpetrating an unprecedented suppression of the people through the human butcher Chon Tu-hwan ring in a bid to escape the serious crisis in their colonial rule.

The brutal genocide of mercilessly suppressing the heroic Kwangju popular uprising and submerging Kwangju City in a sea of blood by unleashing the puppet army belonging to the South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command, clamoring that the rebels in Kwangju should be smashed, was the height of massacre and repression by the U.S. imperialists in South Korea.

All facts clearly show that the U.S. imperialists are the aggressors trampling underfoot the national sovereignty of the South Korean people and their basic human rights and are the ringleaders forcing countless disasters upon the Korean people. As long as the U.S. imperialists are left as they are in South Korea, peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification cannot be contemplated and the South Korean people cannot escape today's misfortunes and sufferings.

Through their bitter experience, the South Korean people have come to clearly recognize that the U.S. imperialists are not their supporters and protectors but are the aggressors and the inveterate enemy of the Korean people. This was clearly proven by the recent act of arson at the U.S. Cultural Center.

Amid the atmosphere in which the anti-U.S. fighting spirit is growing among the South Korean youth, students and people, the Pusan U.S. Cultural Center was burned in the wake of the fire set to the Kwangju U.S. Cultural Center in December 1980. This is not an accident.

The U.S. Cultural Center is the U.S. imperialists' tool to infiltrate their ideology and culture into South Korea. It makes a business of spreading pro-U.S. flunkeyism and the American lifestyle and conducting propaganda on the dogma of aggression, war, mistrust and enmity in an effort to justify the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their aggressive policy and to paralyze the consciousness of national independence of the South Korean people. It is the U.S. Cultural Center that has beautified the unprecedented massacre, branding the heroic Kwangju uprisers as a mob, and has engaged in strategic propaganda, distorting the reality of South Korea by babbling there is no infringement on human rights in South Korea when voices calling for the release of democratic figures, including Kim Tae-chung, have been growing at home and abroad.

Setting fire to the U.S. Cultural Center is a demonstration of the South Korean people's firm will to resolutely eliminate the tendency of pro-U.S. flunkeyism and to struggle against the occupiers to the end. The South Korean people have experience that the amity and friendship the U.S. imperialists clamor about is nothing but a slogan to cover up their policy of aggression, plunder, murder and subversion. Setting fire to the U.S. Cultural Center -- one of the headquarters for the subversion and undermining of South Korean ideology -- is the patriots' just action in the struggle for the nation and against the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists.

Frightened by the growing anti-U.S. sentiment, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is conducting a joint manhunting operation and strengthening investigations with the U.S. forces by mobilizing the puppet police and its troops. This exposes its dirty nature as a group of pro-U.S. flunkeyists who flatter their masters while suppressing their fellow countrymen. To serve the U.S. masters with loyalty, the Chon Tu-hwan rint has massacred tens of thousands of fellow countrymen and soaked South Korea in a sea of their fellow countrymen's blood. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is a thoroughgoing group of traitors who, if it helps to maintain the aggressive, bellicose policy of the U.S. imperialists, do not hesitate to convert the nation into a powder magazine for war and make fellow countrymen cannon fodder. What is worse, these betrayers are flattering the U.S. imperialists' aggression as amity and friendship. This clearly shows that the Chon Tu-hwan clique is a group of dirty dogs of the U.S. imperialists and heinous traitors.

Under the banner of anti-imperialism and antifascism, the South Korean people will more vigorously struggle to drive out the U.S. imperialist aggressors from South Korea, closely combining this with the struggle to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan ring -- a group of pro-U.S. betrayers. The longer the U.S. imperialists continue their occupation of South Korea, the stronger the South Korean people's fighting spirit against the U.S. imperialists will be.

The U.S. imperialists should clearly see reality and not encourage the puppet traitors to follow the road of fascism and war but immediately withdraw from South Korea, taking along their aggressive forces and weapons.

Abandoning treacherous maneuvers to suppress and massacre fellow countrymen, betraying the nation and the country and flattering foreign forces, the traitor Chon Tu-hwan should immediately step down from power which he usurped with bayonets.

South's Security Measures Noted

SK212339 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2211 GMT 21 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 22 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, dismayed at the burning of the "U.S. Cultural Centre" in Pusan when the anti-U.S. struggle of the South Korean people was growing, are becoming more frantic in their crackdown upon the people, crying for the "arrest of the criminals," according to a report.

The fascist gang carried out "a wholesale check-up and search" in the Seoul District on the evening of March 19 with the general mobilisation of the police force and from next evening formed "check-up teams" of 12,000 men in uniform and plainclothes even involving puppet army strength and let them stop people and "examine" them everywhere in the city, on streets, neighbourhood of railway stations, bus terminals, hotels and inns, etc, and they send "joint check-up teams" to the suburbs, too, for search. They are even mobilising such puppet administrative organs as "District Offices" and subsidized organisations in ferreting out the "criminals."

In Pusan, too, the fascist clique are kicking up a row of search with the general mobilisation of the repressive force, demanding the citizens to "cooperate" with them with the threat that those who refuse this would be regarded as "seditious elements."

NODONG SINMUN FLAYS WICKHAM'S CONGRESS TESTIMONY

SK210113 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2240 GMT 19 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 20 March commentary: "Truth Cannot Be Concealed by False Propaganda"]

[Text] A few days ago, Wickham, commander of the U.S. forces in South Korea, gave so-called testimony on the Korean situation to the U.S. House Armed Services Committee. Blatantly enough, he talked nonsense that the continued presence of the U.S. forces in South Korea is an indispensable requisite to peace and security in northeast Asia and that we continue to build up our military strength and are trying to achieve reunification by force of arms.

Perhaps the U.S. war merchants [chonjaeng sangindul] seemingly believe that if they summoned a messenger boy, whom they dispatched to South Korea, to speak to Congress, they could lend credence to their aggressive propaganda. This notwithstanding, no matter how repeatedly they give such false testimony, they can never make anyone believe that a lie is the truth, nor can they conceal the stern reality in Korea.

Today in South Korea, a total of 40,000-strong U.S. aggressive forces are building up their military strength and are running wild to make war preparations. The so-called "Team Spirit 1982" large-scale military exercises, which are being waged all over South Korea, is a good illustration of this. These military exercises, which bear an extremely provocative nature, are exercises for an all-out war and a test war to attack suddenly the northern half of our republic from the sea, air and land.

If the U.S. imperialists have no intention of provoking a war in Korea, why do they continue to increase their military buildup and run wild to wage war exercises, while militarily occupying half of another's country, thousands of miles away from the U.S. mainland?

All facts show that the danger of war on the Korean Peninsula is coming from the South and that the U.S. imperialist aggressors' occupation of South Korea and their war maneuvers constitute a basic factor heightening tension and disturbing peace in our country. In spite of the frantic war provocation maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, peace is maintained in Korea thanks to our peace-loving policy and persevering efforts. Nevertheless, Wickham clamored that the U.S. imperialist aggression forces' occupation of South Korea is a factor for peace and that the sustained tension on the Korean Peninsula resulted from someone else's military buildup and the threat of a southward invasion. This is ridiculous.

Hidden behind the hypocritical remarks by Wickham is the U.S. imperialist warmongers' wicked intention aimed at acheming to occupy South Korea forever behind the facade of peace and to justify the endless military buildup and war preparations of the U.S. forces and the South Korean puppet army, while emphasizing the necessity of the U.S. imperialist aggressors' occupation of South Korea.

The so-called argument about someone else's military buildup and the threat of a southward invation are mere fabrications of the U.S. imperialists and the puppets, aimed at misleading public opinion. Everyone knows that they raise a hue and cry about our military buildup, whimpering about their weakness, when they think it necessary to increase strength and certain victory in the initial stage of war when they feel it necessary to threaten people and us.

Wickham's flight to Washington and his hypocritical and deceitful testimony was prompted by the U.S. imperialists' attempt to accuse someone else of being war maniacs. This also reveals the U.S. imperialists' intent to hold on to South Korea as a colony and military base by maintaining the fascist military regime of traitor Chon Tu-hwan which is rejected and isolated at home and abroad for its policy of fascism, war and national division.

This was borne out by Wickham who, in his testimony, stressed U.S. support for the modernization of the puppet South Korea armed forces and described South Korea as the vanguard of anticommunism, babbling about the people's support for the puppet clique and South Korea's position in the international community.

It is not surprising that at the House of Representatives Wickham spoke in favor of traitor Chon Tu-hwan, advocating support for him. Long ago on the bloody battlefield in Southeast Asia, Wickham trained traitor Chon Tu-hwan as a frontman for the United States and, after the assassination of the former dictator in South Korea, instigated him to seize power with the aid of the military and encouraged his suppression of human rights, including the Kwangju massacre. Wickham, who played a midwife's role in making traitor Chon Tu-hwan the boss of Chongwadae, protects him whenever Chon is reeling from the protests of the people. No matter how hard Wickham may try to help him, he cannot deliver traitor Chon Tu-hwan from the wretched situation in which he now finds himself.

The situation prevailing in South Korea shows that we cannot achieve peace in Korea and peaceful reunification without driving out the U.S. aggressors and frustrating and crushing their policy of aggression. As demanded by our people and the world's people, the U.S. imperialists should immediately withdraw from South Korea, taking along their troops and lethal weapons, and should not instigate the Chon Tu-hwan clique to fascism, national division and war.

PROVINCIAL MEETINGS DENOUNCE 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982'

SK210959 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0849 GMT 21 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 21 (KCNA) -- Mass meetings were held in various parts of Korea in denunciation of the large-scale "Team Spirt 1982" war exercises started by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique in South Korea. Representatives of various circles who spoke at a South Hamgyong Provincial mass meeting held in Hamhung on March 20 strongly held that the U.S. imperialists must stop the play with fire at once, give up their aggressive design on Korea and withdraw from South Korea without delay, taking along nuclear weapons and all other destructive weapons introduced there.

The speakers denounced the U.S. imperialists for trying to justify the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, claiming that they are a "war deterrent" to someone and for "defence" of South Korea. With no pretext can they cover up the aggressive and dangerous nature of the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, the speakers declared.

Pointing out that at a time when the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises are going over to the "stage of attack," having completed the "strategic deployment," a boss who shapes the war policy of U.S. imperialism and executes it is going to turn up on the scene of operations, they said: This is aimed to examine the war preparations for invading the North and direct the current aggressive war exercises on the spot.

Earlier, on March 18, a Chagang provincial mass meeting was held in Kanggye. Speakers at the meeting said: No one can say that the large-scale war exercises, in which a large quantity of nuclear weapons are mobilized, will not expand into an all-out nuclear war against our republic. They stressed that the U.S. imperialists must discontinue the reckless war exercises at once, drawing a proper lesson from the ignominious defeat they sustained in the past Korean war. Speakers at the meeting demanded the Chon Tu-hwan group to stop the criminal war exercises at once, put an end to the fascist suppression of the South Korean people and step down forthwith from "power."

JOINT U.S.-ROK MILITARY EXERCISES REPORTED

SK200344 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0335 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 20 (KCNA) -- A provocative exercise called "Joint South Korea-U.S. Field Army Shooting Exercise" took place on March 18 at a shooting range in Pochon County, Kyonggi Province, promoted by the Second Division of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces, according to a report. That day the U.S. imperialist aggression forces, together with the South Korean puppet army, had a frantic play with fire, bringing out field artillery pieces, mortars, attack helicopters and anti-aircraft direct firing weapons on the pretext of "examining the capacity for using various kinds of weapons in a coordinated way."

On the same day, U.S. imperialist aggressive Marines and South Korean puppet marines held a street parade in Pohang of North Kyongsang Province under the name of "marking the Team Spirit 1982." Under the pretext of "reexamining the defence capacity" they paraded through the streets, causing quite a commotion and whipping up a war fever.

The U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique are holding military rehearsals in various parts of South Korea along with the provocative "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, the largest ever in history, thereby heightening the tension and more crudely challenging our people's desires and aspirations for the independent reunification of the country.

NODONG SINMUN HITS SOUTH'S ANTICOMMUNIST POLICY

SK181535 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1512 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 18 (KCNA) -- The row of anti-communist confrontation kicked up in South Korea today is the main factor of rendering the situation in Korea strained, harassing peace, blocking the reunification of the country and deepening division, declares NODONG SINMUN today in a signed article headlined "Anti-Communism Is Treachery Against Democracy, Peace and Reunification." Pointing to the wholesale smear campaign against us carried on by the South Korean rulers, which is attended with a malicious anti-communist racket, it says:

The reactionary nature of the anti-communist row in South Korea lies, above all, in denying reconciliation and unity within the nation and pursuing division and confrontation. The propaganda machine of the Chon Tu-hwan group alleges that we are trying to create "social unrest" and cause "an internal revolution" in South Korea for "southward invasion" and that we "are manipulating" behind the scene the struggle of the South Korean people for democracy.

We have no intention to impose our idea and social system upon South Korea and never have imposed. It is our stand to reunify the country on the basis of recognizing and tolerating the ideas and social systems existing in the North and South.

It is not we but the South Korean puppets themselves who are trying to impose their idea and system upon the other side. Outwardly, they talk much about "peaceful unification," "relaxation of tension," and the like. But, in actuality, they are challenging peace and dreaming of satisfying their desire for northward aggression.

Claiming that the northern half of the republic is the "unrestored area," they went so far as to appoint "honorary mayors and county magistrates" to "be sent" to the northern half and issue them "mandates". This is a naked expression of their shameless will to impose their idea and system upon us. "Anti-communist unification" is, in essence, to deny national reunification and fix division under the pretext of opposing communism. It is the camouflage of its advocates to veil their splittist colour and erase the question of the country's reunification from the order of the day for good.

The strained situation obtaining on the Korean Peninsula has been caused by the war preparations and military exercises carried on in South Korea under the slogan of anti-communist confrontation.

The unparalleled fascist terrorist rule in South Korea today is legalized with the veil of anti-communism. Anti-communism is a disguise for concealing and justifying their crimes in instigating hostile feelings against us, kicking up war rackets, suppressing the patriotic democratic forces and removing the political opponents.

The manoeuvres for fascism, war and division to which the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique is persistently resorting are intended to execute the U.S. imperialists policy of aggression. The ever more wanton anti-communist row in South Korea is a product of the serious crisis facing the colonial rule of U.S. imperialism and the fascist terrorist dictatorship.

The United States must give up its aggressive acts of patronizing the Chon Tu-hwan clique hated and cursed by the people and instigating them to the suppression of the people, blocking reunification and fixing division and get out of South Korea.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must not run about recklessly to check the onward movement of history with its foolish row of anti-communist confrontation, but act with discretion and step down from "power" as demanded by the people.

VRPR URGES STUDENTS TO STRUGGLE IN SPRING

SK190337 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Dialogue from "Hour for Youths and Students" program]

[Text] As is well known, March and April is a struggle season in which anti-U.S. and antifascist struggles have been staged. We believe that youth and students, who greet this struggle season, are resolved to effect a new turn in a nationwide struggle for democracy by developing the ardent aspirations for democratization into struggle. In this hour, we will hear a dialogue entitled "The Season of Struggle and the Plan of Youth and Students" between Madam Yun and announcer Ko U-chol.

[Announcer] Reviewing history from the 1 March uprising to today, we can see our people's vigorous struggle against foreign forces and fascists have been staged in March and April. In these sacred struggles, youth and students used to fight valiantly, opening the road to struggle.

[Madam Yun] Yes, that is right. Whenever courageous students greeted the struggle season in March and April, they have unreservedly demonstrated the courage and spirit of youth, opening a road to struggle against foreign forces and fascists. Greeting this proud season of struggle, patriotic students on campuses are strengthening their spirit of struggle against fascists and for democracy. When I met a certain student of Seoul National University, he said: We, the students of Seoul National University, take pride in having unyieldingly fought in the van of the struggle for democratization. We are also resolved to vigorously stage the struggle for democratization this year by fanning the flame of struggle.

[Announcer] That is quite natural. On 19 March last year, the Seoul National University students, who courageously struggled, igniting the flame of the antifascist struggle for democratization, declared that they should struggle against the fascist regime until the last drop of blood dries and they sing a song of victory. This is viewed as a firm will of students across the country, not to mention the students of Seoul National University. For this reason, we believe that youth and students will again gather together on the plaza of democracy in this coming spring.

Now, we need to talk about how the patriotic students should struggle and which point they should emphasize.

[Madam yun] I agree. Considering past experiences and the present situation, I think it important to stage a joint struggle with the masses by further organizing the students' struggle and firmly uniting. Babbling that it will uproot campus turmoil and that the government firmly stands opposed to chronic campus unrest, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is threatening students by suppressing them in a fascist manner, intensifying investigations of campus activities. I think that if students fight sporadically in such a situation, they will not win victory but will be defeated. This is a lesson of past struggles. I believe that students are well aware of this fact. In the declaration for the antifascist struggle issued by the students of Hanguk Seminary last November, they appealed to their fellow students to develop the sporadic and individual protest of masses to the level of the organizational and persistent mass movement.

[Announcer] I think that the patriotic students should not repeat the past method of struggle because they have learned a lesson from past struggles. They should firmly consolidate their struggle ranks and continue to develop them. In particular, protecting the core forces -- leading forces of the student movement -- is an important matter. By organizing the struggle ranks and protecting the core forces of struggle, they should develop the movement for democratization into a new level of movement.

[Madam Yun] Another important question is how to develop the students' movement into a mass movement. As in the April and May struggle of 1980, all students on campus should rise up in struggle together, closely getting in touch with each other among colleges across the country. In short, students should stage a nation-wide struggle in a unified manner.

[Announcer] That is right. I think that, to win a decisive victory in a struggle for democratization, students should combine the students' movement with the labor movement.

[Madam Yun] As you know well, the working class is the most resolute class about to struggle for democratization to the end. The working class, which possesses a strong revolutionary spirit and unity, is growing into a leading class of the Korean revolution and the main forces of the movement for democratization. When youth and students fight with the workers in a unified way, they will destroy any fascist forces. This is shown by the 19 April struggle which overthrew the Syngman Rhee regime and the October democratic struggle which plunged the traitor Pak Chong-hui into ruin.

Because students have learned a lesson through the past struggles, they are ardently appealing to combine their struggle with the labor movement in their leaflets and putting into practice. To this end, taking advantage of night time, not to mention vacations, they are conducting various righteous activities, such as enlightening, awakening and organizing workers, to encourage them to rise up in struggle.

[Announcer] That is a move prevailing among college students these days. To combine the students' movement with the labor movement, students should vigorously stage such activities. By the way, I think it is important to struggle under slogans reflecting the interests of workers, in an effort to combine the students' movement with the labor movement.

[Madam Yun] Of course, it is very important to present correct struggle slogans. Generally speaking, the struggle slogan is a powerful means which touch and agitate a broad range of people. Youth and students have struggled under slogans, such as those reading: "Let us obtain three labor rights!", "Hike wages!" and "Stop suppression of the labor movement!" which reflect the interests of workers. In the future youth and students should stage a joint struggle with workers, upholding these struggle slogans. I think it desirable that youth and students rush to the scene where workers stage a struggle and fight together with them.

[Announcer] Another important question in the spring struggle is to open a way to the antifascist struggle for democratization by taking advantage of given opportunities.

[Madam Yun] Yes, it is very important for youth and students to make the most of opportunities. Whenever youth, students and our people observe the anniversary of anti-Japanese and antifascist struggles in the past, they cannot repress the surging hatred of dictators who have trampled underfoot freedom and democracy, ruminating upon the fighting spirit displayed in these struggles. I believe that, when they seize the opportunities for struggle and make the most of them, they will develop our nation's animosity against dictators into a nation-wide antifascist struggle.

[Announcer] I agree. I firmly believe that youth and students, who love justice and the nation, will uphold the torch of the antifascist struggle for democratization in this coming spring for struggle, responding to the people's call and meeting the demand of the times.

Yi's 15 March Managua Speech

SK201410 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 18 Mar 82

[Speech by Yi Chong-ok, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and premier of the DPRK Administration Council, at 15 March Managua banquet -- read by announcer]

[Text] First of all, I express my deep thanks to you for having accorded us a warm welcome the moment our party and government delegation entered your country, for providing us with such a wonderful banquet and for the esteemed Comrade Daniel Ortega Saavedra's friendly and encouraging speech for us just now. Availing myself of this opportunity overflowing with friendly sentiment, I convey militant and friendly greetings to the Sandinist National Liberation Front and the fraternal Nicaraguan people from the KWP and the Korean people.

The warm welcome and hospitality you accorded our delegation is a clear expression of the Nicaraguan people's friendship toward the Korean people. The friendship and unity between the Korean and Nicaraguan peoples are indestructible as they have been cemented in the common struggle against imperialism and for independence.

Our people highly value the friendship with the Nicaraguan people and always watch their struggle for creating a new life with deep interest. Under the correct leadership of the Sandinist National Liberation Front, the wise and courageous Nicaraguan people are now registering a great accomplishment in their struggle to develop their national economy and national culture after overcoming the consequences of the old reactionary rule. In particular, the measures your government has taken to strengthen defense capability after defining this year as the year of unity against invasion and rallying the people around the Sandinist National Liberation Front are significant in advancing the Nicaraguan revolution.

The Korean people sincerely rejoice as their own over the successes achieved by the Nicaraguan people in the struggle for reconstructing the country in accordance with Sandinism. Our people wholeheartedly hope that the fraternal Nicaraguan people, closely united around the Sandinist National Liberation Front, will register greater successes in their future struggle for defending the country as firm as a rock from the aggression and intervention of the imperialists and building a rich and powerful, independent and new Nicaragua.

We highly appraise the active support and encouragement the Republic of Nicaragua is extending to the just struggle of the Salvadoran people and other Latin American peoples for freedom and liberation, pursuing the nonaligned policy in external relations, and express firm solidarity with it.

The Korean people are now waging a vigorous struggle for modelling the whole of society with the chuche idea and accelerating the historic cause of national reunification under the guidance of the glorious party center, upholding the programmatic tasks advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth KWP Congress. Today the paramount national task facing our people is to reunify the divided fatherland at an early date. The proposal for the founding of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] put forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the fairest and most just proposal for reunification and for achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland after the crushing of the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique to fabricate two Koreas.

However, splittists at home and abroad, running counter to the unanimous will and aspiration of the Korean and world peoples, are pursuing the splittist line, intensifying their war policy and are laying more serious obstacles on the road to the reunification of the fatherland. All Korean people, with the untied strength of the entire nation and under the positive support of the peace-loving people of the world, including the fraternal Nicaraguan people, will crush the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique to fabricate two Koreas and maneuvers to provoke a war and will surely achieve the historic cause of national reunification through establishing the DCRK.

Availing ourselves of this opportunity, we express our deep thanks to you for strongly denouncing the maneuvers of the splittists at home and abroad to fabricate two Koreas and for supporting our people's just struggle to oust the U.S. troops from South Korea and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

The Korean people deem it a great price to have such a staunch people with a strong sense of justice as the heroic Nicaraguan people as their comrades in arms in Latin America and will advance as ever shoulder to shoulder with you in the struggle against imperialism and for independence.

Comrade Yi Chong-ok, premier of the Administration Council, spoke first at the banquet. He said:

We exchanged views on further expanding and developing the friendly and cooperative relations between the two peoples and other problems of common concern with members of the Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of the Republic of Nicaragua, and reached a unanimity of views on all problems discussed. This, coming as it does from common understanding of our two countries' anti-imperialist and independent stands and from the good will of our two countries, pleases us very much.

Although our stay in Nicaragua was short, we have seen the Nicaraguan people, rallying around the Sandinist National Liberation Front, struggling vigorously to crush at every step the disintegrating and undermining maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and internal reactionaries, consolidating the revolutionary gains and building a new, independent and prosperous society. We have seen them registering successes in their struggle, and we were moved by them.

New changes and successes made in Nicaragua show that the strength of the people who have become the masters of their country and society is inexhaustible and that their future is bright. Speaking next at the banquet Daniel Ortega Saavedra, coordinator of the Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of Nicaragua, said:

[Report on Speech by Yi Chong-ok at 17 March departure ceremony at Managua airport -- read by announcer]

[Text] Expressing gratitude to the Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of Nicaragua, the Sandinist National Liberation Front and the Nicaraguan people for having accorded the DPRK party and government delegation with all cordiality so as to let the delegation spend pleasant and rewarding days during its stay in the fraternal country of Nicaragua, Premier Yi Chong-ok said:

Although our stay with the intimate Nicaraguan friends was short, those days were significant in that they contributed to strengthening the militant and friendly unity, cohesion and ties between the peoples of Korea and Nicaragua.

The party and government delegation of the DPRK exchanged with members of the Council of the Government of National Reconstruction of Nicaragua views on strengthening the friendship and unity between the two parties, governments and peoples and other problems of common concern, and reached a complete unanimity of views. We are satisfied with this.

Through our visit to your country, we have seen the heroic Nicaraguan people, rallying around the Sandinist National Liberation Front, despite the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to disintegrate and undermine it, firmly safeguard their revolutionary gains and courageously struggle to build a new prosperous society. We have seen the militant mien of the Nicaraguan people brimming over in the country and we are convinced that the Nicaraguan future will be prosperous and wealthy.

Strengthening the militant unity between the KWP and the Sandinista National Liberation Front, between the governments and peoples of Korea and Nicaragua under the revolutionary banner of anti-imperialism and independence, and strengthening the ties of support and solidarity are an important guarantee for the two countries to crush all sorts of maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists, safeguard national dignity and create a new and independent life.

We are proud of having the Nicaraguan people, who have a strong and dignified anti-imperialistic stand, as comrades-in-arms in Latin America. We are convinced that the friendship and unity between the KWP and the Sandinist National Liberation Front and between the governments and peoples of our two countries will expand and develop more widely in the future through the common struggle against imperialism and for independence.

HOME MINISTER ISSUES STATEMENT ON PUSAN ARSON

SK201302 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 1000 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] Home Affairs Minister So Chong-hwa said today that those organizations and individuals who hide criminals involved in the arson attack on the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan will be regarded as impure elements equally guilty as the arsonists and will be punished accordingly. Correspondent Pak Se-hui has this report:

Home affairs Minister So Chong-hwa issued a statement today in connection with the arson attack on the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan and urged the people to cooperate with the government authorities' effort to arrest the criminals involved in the recent arson.

[Begin recording of So statement] The arson attack on the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan is a wicked and impure act committed at a time when relations between the ROK and the United States have been solidified as never before and when a security system, which no aggressive force can slight, has been established with the staging of the "Team Spirit" exercise and with the ROK-U.S. annual security consultative meeting scheduled for the end of March. We cannot tolerate the terrorism, violence and arson of impure elements to create internal subversion and disturbances when the government and the people are striving to achieve stability in all sectors, solidify national security and achieve a second economic takeoff.

I urge all the people to render positive cooperation with the efforts to arrest the impure arsonists and to immediately report to the nearest police station anything on those organizations and individuals who are hiding the criminals. Should we discover those organizations and individuals hiding the impure elements, the government will regard this act equal to the one committed by the arsonists. [end recording]

In conclusion, Minister So said the government issued a nationwide instruction to investigation agencies, including the police, to stand alert and reporting that it will give 20 million won to the person who provides information leading to the arrest of the arsonists. All investigation agencies, including the police and prosecutor offices throughout the country, are standing alert to arrest the criminals. The government is now tracking them down, utilizing reporting networks among the people.

The handbills scattered in the area surrounding the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan call the present government a fascist regime -- a term used by the North Korean puppets. The handbills oppose the hosting of the Olympics, say the ROK has completed preparations for a northward invasion, portray ROK-U.S. relations as those existing between master and servant in order to disrupt these relations and slander our open-door economy as a comprador economic system. This clearly appears to coincide with a similar line used by the North Korean puppets. The writer of the handbills also appears to have joined maneuvers to fulfill Kim Il-song's wild desire for achieving unification through communication of the ROK. We can see that the recent arson was a product of violence by a leftist, antigovernment force. We cannot tolerate the antinational act of using arson to achieve the political aim of disrupting the friendship solidified between the ROK and the United States.

The new era should eliminate all violence from society. Violence is the No 1 enemy of a free society. The arsonists should be hunted down at the earliest possible date. To this end, the people's positive cooperation is required.

Further Report on Arson

SK191138 [Editorial Report] On 19 March, three major vernacular evening papers published in Seoul carry prominent coverage of the 18 March fire at the Pusan U.S. Cultural Center. TONG-A ILBO, carrying a correspondent's report from Pusan on the top of page 11, reports in detail the discovery of some 250 antigovernment and anti-U.S. handbills in Pusan, and notes the police speculation that this incident was caused by an underground antigovernment organization or by leftist elements masterminded by North Korea agents.

Reporting the government's actions to apprehend the criminals and the increase protection for foreign embassies, the paper notes the ROK Foreign Ministry's expression of regret over the incident.

Referring to the content of the handbills, the paper says: "The printed materials read 'pursuing a policy of economic cooperation in order to economically exploit us, the United States and Japan are trying to make our country their tributary.' These handbills then bitterly denounce the present system, using radical terminology. Opposing the hosting of the 1988 Olympics and denouncing the education policy and the attitude of the press, the handbills groundlessly say that the government has completed preparations for an advance toward the North."

Briefly reporting the 18 March incident on the top of the front page, CHUNGANG ILBO says: "Judging from the fact that, prior to the outbreak of the fire, 781 impure antigovernment and anti-U.S. handbills were scattered at three places in Pusan, the police see this fire as premeditated arson committed by impure elements." Carrying a more detailed report on the circumstances of the incident and on the handbills found at the scene on the top of page 6, the paper says: "The handbills oppose ROK-Japan economic cooperation and the hosting of the 1988 Olympics, denounce U.S. neocolonialism and note preparations for a northward invasion by a certain military regime."

Carrying a report similar to those in the other two evening vernaculars, KYONGHYANG SINMUN, in an article at the top of page 7, says: "In light of the fact that the handbills assume an antigovernment and leftist nature, police sources speculate that underground antigovernment elements or North Korean agents have committed arson against a U.S. installation in South Korea to disrupt ROK-U.S. relations."

KOREA TIMES Report

[Text] The arson at the U.S. Cultural Center in Pusan Thursday had grave significance as it indicated anti-government elements were taking a violent leftist turn, investigation authorities said yesterday.

The contents of leaflets the collaborators of the arsonists scattered in Pusan showed that the group was bent on creating a rift between Korea and the United States by terming their ties a "comprador-capitalist, servant-master" relationship. "Americans go home. Don't attempt to make Korea a subject state," they quoted the leaflet as saying. "...We are raising a torch for an anti-American struggle by burning the U.S. Cultural Center, the symbol of U.S. Cultural Colonialism. We appeal to Pusan citizens to renew their national self-awareness."

At one point, the leaflet said the "ruling force" in the South was ready "to invade the North with purchased arms and is dreaming of starting a fratricidal war again." The authorities took note of this phrase as indicating the anti-government elements' complete adherence to North Korea's propaganda line. It also indirectly proved the imminence of the communists' armed invasion of the South, they added.

Calling for the overthrow of a "fascist military regime," the leaflets agitated people to stage a violent revolt against the present government in bloody expressions. They described the government's recently-announced unification formula as "cosmetized" and "deceptive." The hosting of the 1988 Olympics is certain to destroy the national economy completely, the fliers said, demanding an immediate end to its preparation.

Economic negotiations with Japan should be stopped at once so as not to subordinate the Korean economy to Japan's and all existing "compradorship-oriented economic policies that ensure the prosperity of the privileged few" should be abolished, the leaflets said. They also contained attacks on education officials who they said were controlling the academic world through the graduation quota system and the professors' recommendation system.

The authorities said the wording of the leaflets clearly exposed the group's neo-leftist color and their liking for violence, which is intolerable in any form. The opposition to the 1988 Olympics in Seoul reveals the group's anti-national nature because it promises to be an occasion greatly enhancing the national culture, the authorities said.

JAPAN COMPLETES REVIEW OF PROPOSED LOAN PROJECTS

SK191347 Seoul YONHAP in English 1255 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Seoul, March 19 (YONHAP) -- The Japanese Government Friday presented South Korea the results of its review of 11 development projects in connection with Seoul's request for six billion U.S. dollars in public loans.

Kunio Muraoka, a minister at the Japanese Embassy in Seoul, called on Choe Tong-chin, director of the Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau, and discussed ways of cooperation suggested by Japan for about 70 minutes. It was the first time that Japan officially suggested concrete ways to cooperate since August of last year when the six billion dollar loan issue was first discussed between the two countries.

During the meeting, the Japanese minister suggested that Japan wants to provide South Korea with the proposed loans in such a way as to combine Japan's Official Development Aid (ODA) loans and loans from the two world banks -- the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and The Asian Development Bank.

The Japanese insist it would be difficult to offer the six billion dollars fully in ODA loans because of its financial situation. Korea has been asking Japan to extend the money fully in ODA loans.

MONTSAME BLASTS U.S. ON 'ANTI-AFGHAN FARCE'

OW201742 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1713 GMT 20 Mar 82

["Anti-Afghan Farce of Washington" -- MONTSAME headline]

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 20 Mar (MONTSAME) -- A MONTSAME commentator writes: According to reports from the U.S.A. official Washington has prepared another surprise for the world -- a new propaganda show this time entitled "The Day of Afghanistan." U.S. ex-State Secretary W. Rogers appeared in a role of a producer. The premiere is appointed for the 21st of March. In this anti-Afghan show were involved best falsifiers, slanderers and liars specially chosen from different American foreign policy and propaganda agencies so that the "truthfulness" and "trustworthiness" of everything they will tell about the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan and the life of its people are beyond any doubt. The overall technical capacity of the American propaganda machine is at their disposal.

By the way this is the second "work" of the kind the American propaganda has to its credit. The first was the anti-Polish fraud catcalled all over the world. The same reception undoubtedly awaits this anti-Afghan show.

Now it is an open secret who is trying to hinder the building of a new life by the Afghan people. Namely the United States in collusion with China and other reactionary Islamic regimes carry out an undeclared war against the people of this country. Together with Beijing, Washington turned Pakistan into an anti-Afghan activity base. In its territory in bordering with Afghanistan regions created are over 70 special camps and training centers for cut-throats from the Afghan counter-revolutionary rabble. Then armed to teeth by their American benefactors they are sent to the territory of Afghanistan sowing death and destruction. Naturally, this is passed over in silence by Washington "friends" of the Afghan people. Their farce is designed to represent the crude interference of the United States into the internal affairs of the DRA as a "humane help" to its people.

Fanning up the anti-Afghan hysteria Washington besides that is trying to divert the attention of the world public from its hostile subversive activities against other peoples coming out for freedom and social progress in different countries of the world extending from El Salvador to Kampuchea.

Washington's passion for such provocative shows reflects also the sharp activization of the subversive foreign policy propaganda of the United States connected with the turnout [as received] from the policy of detente to confrontation with socialist community countries and attaining of world supremacy. All these performances of Washington experts in "brainwashing" have one thing in common: They assume clearly defined inciting, anti-socialist character and are aimed at supporting counterrevolutionary and reactionary forces whether in Poland or Afghanistan.

SIANG PASASONG SUPPORTS BREZHNEV ARMS PROPOSAL

BK201213 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 20 Mar 82

[SIANG PASASONG 20 March editorial: "New Well-Intentioned Step by the Soviet Union"]

[Text] During his address to the 17th congress of Soviet trade unions on 16 March, Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, openly announced a new, constructive proposal by the Soviet Union aimed at halting the arms race and checking the threat of a new world war. To demonstrate its new and good intentions to the people of the world, the Soviet Union unilaterally announced a freeze on the deployment of its medium-range nuclear weapons in the European part of the Soviet Union. Meanwhile, it will reduce in both quantity and quality the existing weapons installed in the region. Unless there is a new worsening of the international situation, the Soviet Union intends to carry out a partial reduction of its medium-range missiles this year.

Moreover, the Soviet Union has agreed to a restriction of military activities. For example, it is prepared to enter into a mutual agreement to restrict naval operations. This step is designed to create mutual trust and interests and to make the world's oceans a zone of true peace.

This concrete proposal by the Soviet Union, as well as its previous peace initiatives announced by Comrade Leonid Brezhnev in Berlin in October 1979, have been broadly supported by the masses throughout the world and respond to the ardent aspirations of mankind, which wants to live in peace, free from the threat of war. This stand constitutes a new factor that will contribute to resolving the conflicts between East and West and to settling the current global situation. At the same time it shows the lofty responsibility of the Soviet leadership and the Soviet people, who are making tireless efforts to safeguard the peace and security of the various nations in Europe and the rest of the world.

However, it is regrettable that the Washington administration, and President Reagan in particular, recently made statements distorting the Soviet Union's new proposals in an effort to deceive world public opinion. Washington has so far continued to pursue its harsh attitude, refusing to take part in sincere talks on the limitation of strategic arms. It is seeking by every possible means to upset the existing balance of strategic arms. To achieve its lordly policy and plans to increase its armed forces and weapons, the White House deceitfully said that the Soviet Union enjoys an advantage in the military sphere. Nevertheless, an increasing number of people throughout the world have clearly seen the true nature of Washington's aggressive and bellicose policy. The new Soviet proposals have been approved by some members of the U.S. Congress, for example, Senator Edward Kennedy. These members of the Senate are demanding that the U.S. Government join in talks with the Soviet Union.

Once again, the Lao people, together with the progressive and peace-loving people throughout the world, fully support the correct, just and reasonable proposals put forth by the Soviet Union as announced by Comrade Leonid Brezhnev. At the same time, we maintain that these proposals will serve as a new step leading to the reduction of strategic arms, easing tension in the international arena and eliminating the threat of genocidal war.

SIANG PASASONG LAUDS LEADERSHIP ON ANNIVERSARY

BK220750 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 22 Mar 82

[SIANG PASASONG 22 March editorial: "Twenty-Seven Years Under the Glorious LPRP's Leadership"]

[Text] Our beloved and respected LPRP is 27 years old today. Under the party's leadership over the past 27 years, our Lao nation, from not having its name on the world map, has marched forward to the point that it has become well known in the international arena as a heroic nation with prestigious roles which has defeated the U.S. imperialist aggression -- by imperialist chieftains and the strongest imperialists in the world. Our Lao nation is now majestically standing in the forefront of socialist camp in Southeast Asia.

Our Lao people of various nationalities have been completely freed as slaves of foreign countries, and have marched forward to become the genuine owners of their country. They are now diligently striving to build their fatherland into a civilized and prosperous country step by step. This is the meritorious deed of the LPRP for our nation and people.

The LPRP is a genuine Marxist-Leninist party of the Lao working class. It is a well-organized vanguard unit and a top-level organization of the working class. Its historical origins date back to the Indochinese Communist Party. It was formally founded on 22 March 1955 by the congress of the representatives of former members of the Indochinese Communist Party. In the beginning, it was called the Lao People's Party. Later, at the second party congress which was held in February 1972, the world revolutionary was added to its name in order to the appropriate to its class and vanguard-struggle characteristics. Since then it has been called the LPRP.

The 27th founding anniversary of the LPRP comes at a time when our entire party, army and people are joyously and enthusiastically competing in scoring achievements to welcome the third party congress, which will be held soon. With the great strength of its 27-year history, the talented and clear-sighted LPRP with Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan as general secretary has led our Lao people of various nationalities to carry out the cause of national liberation struggle and march forward on the path of socialism, bypassing the period of capitalist development. It has led our Lao people to systematically achieve ever greater and more glorious victories.

It is noteworthy that after leading the Lao people of various nationalities to successfully accomplish the cause of national liberation struggle, the LPRP has clearly adopted its path of advancement and his guided the various nationalities to carry out socialist revolution in the country, thereby achieving successes step by step. For example, the party has led the people of various nationalities to carry out the two major strategic tasks, namely, the maintenance of peace and independence and the defense of the country's territorial integrity. Simultaneously, it has led the people to successfully fulfill the plan for economic building and cultural development. It is now leading the people forward in the implementation of the first 5-year state plan. Glorious successes have been achieved in the first year of the implementation of the first 5-year plan. For example, more than 1 million tons of rice have been harvested. As a result, our country can reduce the amount of imported rice. Livestock breeding and the planting of crops has also been expanded. The number of hospitals and schools at various levels, including the vocational schools and kindergartens, as well as the number of students attending the schools has also rapidly increased, thus meeting the basic requirements of daily life, medical services and education for the children of the laboring people of various nationalities. New steps have also been achieved in the branches of trading, communications and transportation, construction of bridges, roads and housing projects, and mining exploitation as well as the development of heavy and light industries, mechanical workshops and handicrafts work. All these works have been consolidated every day to be ever more efficient. Following these successes, our entire nation is maintaining a new shape -- a shape which is different from that under the old regime.

Our party has created a strength of solidarity among the various nationalities on the basis of the vigorious consolidation of the worker-peasant alliance. At the same time, it has always combined in an appropriate and skillful manner the genuine spirit of patriotism with the pure spirit of proletarian internationalism, coordinated national interests with class interests, enhanced the overall strength of its own nation together with the strength of the era, maintained and enhanced the special solidarity among the three Indochinese peoples of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea, strengthened the all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, and consistently strived to maintain solidarity with the working class and the oppressed people as well as the peace- and justice-loving people throughout the world. As a result, the roles and status of our nation have been raised to an ever higher level in the international arena. This is an important factor which has guaranteed an ever greater and more brilliant success in our struggle to defend and build the country.

However, to reach the lofty ideals of our party in the immediate future, it is still necessary that our entire party, army and people always strengthen the solidarity among the various nationalities and maintain vigilance to counter all acts of aggression, encroachment, subversion and sabotage of the imperialists and the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists. This is because the imperialists and the Beijing reactionaries have continued to resort to every possible means to destroy the new system and sabotage the peaceful life of our people. We must also persist in overcoming all difficulties and obstacles and endeavor to march forward another step so as to fulfill the plan for the development of the economy, culture, education, public health and others as stipulated in the first 5-year state plan. For example, we must dash forward to fulfill or prefulfill the implementation of the plan for the quarter, the 6-month plan or the plan for this year in order to score achievements to welcome the 27th founding anniversary of the LPRP and the third congress of our party, which will be held soon.

It is certain that to successfully fulfill the aforesaid great, heavy, but honorable and glorious task, it is necessary for us to make the effort. With the beacon of various resolutions of the party and with the great determination of the cadres, party members and all our people who have maintained confidence in and profoundly understood the line and politicies of the party, it is certain that we will be able to overcome all difficulties and obstacles. In the past, responding to the party's call, the cadres, party members and our people of various nationalities have unconditionally sacrificed their lives for the country, the people and the cause of national liberation. Now, under the party's call, all of us are also prepared to sacrifice our lives to defend and build the country. Let our entire party, army and people march forward together and sacrifice all energies, intelligence and abilities for the socialist country and for the happiness of the Lao people of various nationalities. We are absolutely convinced that the cause of socialist transformation and construction in our beloved fatherland will certainly be successful.

Long live the LPRP -- organizer and leader of all victories of the Lao revolution!

SITTHI DISCUSSES ASEAN, KAMPUCHEA SITUATION

BK210923 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Excerpts] The foreign minister, Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, delivered a keynote speech at the meeting of the Institute of Foreign Affairs yesterday at the Foreign Ministry.

Speaking about the history of ASEAN, he noted that ASEAN was conceived in Southeast Asia by Southeast Asians for Southeast Asians. We have to overcome many difficulties, prejudices and preconceptions that had kept apart. Fifteen years since it was founded, ASEAN is internationally recognized as a success story of regionalism. It is so because it is pragmatic. The driving force behind ASEAN is the attainment of peace, prosperity and progress through constructive cooperation. We have said what ASEAN stands for. It constitutes a primary pillar of our foreign policy. Particularly since 1975, Thailand has clearly defined her foreign policy direction. It is based on the following objectives: First, to promote the solidarity, unity and cooperation of ASEAN and to extend that cooperation to development of good relations with our Indochina neighbors; second, to pursue mutually beneficial relations with all countries irrespective of differences in political, social and economic systems and ideologies; third, to contribute in her own capacity to regional, global stability and development; and finally, firm adherence to the principles of international law and the UN Charter.

The Kampuchean situation is the major threat to the peace, stability and progress of our entire region. Thailand, together with our ASEAN partners, is prepared to have discussions on any meaningful suggestion leading to a durable solution of the Kampuchean problem which comes with the total withdrawal of foreign troops from Kampuchea and the expression of self-determination by the Kampuchean people.

The foreign minister concluded his address with a remark that times of danger are also times or opportunity. Ours is an age of tremendous technological and scientific development. It is the challenge of our age as we move toward a new century to make it a century in which developments move forward to accomplishment in peace. What has previously been acccomplished for war? This is truly the trend which I would like to develop for Thailand, ASEAN and the world.

NATION 22 Mar Editorial

[Editorial: "Reading Between the Lines of What Sitthi Said"]

[Text] Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila's speech Friday at the Institute of Foreign Affairs was a rare combination of diplomacy and realism, which, like oil and water, do not mix. He avoided certain key issues, like the role of China in Indochina and ASEAN, for instance, but did address himself with commendable frankness to the problem of Kampuchea which is destabilizing the region -- an objective of both Vietnam and the Soviet Union. Foreign policy, those of small countries especially, is never spelled out in clear terms because, whether we like it or not, small countries do have to take into account how the rooks, knights and bishops move in the international chessboard -- very rarely pawns take the initiative.

When Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said that Thailand and ASEAN are always open to a dialogue with Hanoi, he was not saying something new but was only reiterating the stand which ASEAN had already taken countering that of the foreign ministers of Vientiane, Hanoi and Phnom Penh who wanted an Indochina-ASEAN dialogue thereby securing de facto recognition of the puppet government of Heng Samrin. There is no problem about a Bangkok-Hanoi dialogue for after both capitals have diplomatic representations and all that is needed is to use that channel or for exchange of visits at a higher level as has happened before.

Thailand's foreign policy interest, along with that of ASEAN, one must admit, has primarily to be directed towards a peaceful and political solution to the Kampuchean problem which can be obtained, according to UN resolutions, only through the withdrawal of "foreign troops" from that country. Pragmatically speaking, that is a pipe dream. Vietnam is not going to pull out her troops from Kampuchea since she knows all too well that if she does so the puppet government in Phnom Penh will not last a couple of weeks.

Departing from realism and resorting to diplomacy, Sitthi says that Thailand and ASEAN have no other course but to persevere in the main pursuit to restore the equilibrium of interests in the region with the cooperation of all parties. Diplomacy demands that he should not spell out the "equilibrium of interests" nor name "all parties" concerned. But any longtime observer of the Indochina scene, especially after Christmas, 1978, knows what Sitthi is talking about.

It would be wrong to interpret this statement as saying that Thailand and ASEAN have exhausted all their options -- he certainly did not mean that. What exactly happened in Kampuchea after the fateful capture of Phnom Penh in the middle of January, 1979, is too fresh in the mind to need recapitulation. While the big sticks in Indochina are being wielded by the Soviet Union and China, the international prestige of ASEAN has made world opinion assert again and again in the UN General Assembly and in other international forums that Vietnamese troops must withdraw from Kampuchea.

The Vietnamese troops, with their battle-hardened war machine, are in the fourth dry season in Kampuchea and are still not able to eliminate the main guerrilla opposition of the Khmer Rouge nor the minor opposition of the pro-Sihanouk and pro-Son Sann guerrilla groups. Possibly, it is the thinking in Moscow and Hanoi that this is the final dry season for the Vietnamese to eliminate all opposition in Kampuchea -- we are seeing and hearing from Prachinburi the intensive efforts which the Vietnamese are making. If they fail during the next two months, and the rains set in, then the initiative will change hands. This is the nuts-and-bolts side of what Sitthi was trying to convey.

SOM ON FIGHTING IN KAMPUCHEA, PROVOCATIONS

BK190507 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] The director of Supreme Command Information Office, Lt Gen Som Khattaphan, during a news conference on the situation along the border with Kampuchea, said that sporadic fighting between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops and the Khmer Rouge continued inside Kampuchea during the past month. In most cases the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops took the initiative in launching suppression drives against the Khmer Rouge. Heavy fighting occurred in the vicinity of Phnum Malai, which resulted in rather heavy casualties on both sides. In addition, the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops have been suffering from malaria and food shortages and thus their morale and spirit are running low.

The Thai side is always affected by the fighting inside Kampuchea because of the stray shells which land on our soil and the influx of illegal immigrants. The director said: We have been trying to solve the problem tactfully. We fire smoke shells to warn the warring parties that they are near our border. Still, he said, Thailand has been constantly provoked by the other side. Citing examples, he said: On 5 and 6 March, Thai troops conducted routine exercises along the border while there was no fighting in the adjoining areas inside Kampuchea. However, some 150 shells from 130-, 120- and 105-mm mortars were fired into Thai territory during this period. But since there was no fighting in Kampuchea at the time, this proves that the shelling was a deliberate act of provocation by the other side.

On 15 and 16 March a border patrol police platoon guarding the border area in Ban Khao Lan District along the Chanthaburi-Trat border was attacked by foreign troops armed with rifles, submachineguns, mortars and grenade launchers. During the attack, two Thai policemen were wounded. The intruders retreated after we fired smoke shells.

Lt Gen Som Khattaphan said the Thai side has been trying to solve all problems tactfully, appealing to the Thai people not to believe the fabrications which are aimed at provoking and luring Thailand to recognize the status quo in Indochina. The Thai people should have confidence in the Thai armed forces' ability to prevent the violation of the country's sovereignty by any foreign force.

Meanwhile, Army Secretary Col Narudon Detpatiyut spoke to the news conference about the army ammunition found in the communist Camp 508. He said that a preliminary investigation has revealed that a total of 30,000 rounds of such ammunition produced by the army ordance department in 1979 were found at the communist stronghold. A further investigation is being conducted by the army inspector general's department and the results of this investigation will be made public in the future.

BORDER COMMAND CAPTAIN REPORTS ON FIGHTING

BK220821 Bangkok Domestic Television Service Channel 3 in Thai 1300 GMT 21 Mar 82

[Press conference by group captain, Ophat Chamratsi, deputy chief of staff of the Chanthaburi-Trat Security Operations Command -- recorded]

[Text] I would like to make a report on an incident which took place in the area under responsibility of the Chanthaburi-Trat Security Operations Command since it poses a threat to national security.

On 17 March, about two infantry battalions of Vietnamese forces, backed by 60mm and 82mm mortars, 75mm recoiless rifles and from four to six PT76 tanks, mounted attacks against the Kampuchean forces in Ban Sok San, about 3 km inside the Kampuchean border opposite Tambon Dan Chumphon, Bo Rai District, Trat Province. The Vietnamese forces took complete control of Ban Sok San at about 1700 on 17 March. As a result of the attack, about 3,000 Kampuchean people fled the war into Thailand's Tambon Dan Chumphon. They grouped at Ban Khlong Pun Piak and Ban Khlong Pun Haeng. On 18 March, about four artillery rounds landed about 2 km inside the Thai border and another two rounds landed in Ban Thung Yao. We are sure that they were artillery shells because they landed quite far from the Thai border.

The Chanthaburi-Trat Security Operations Command believes that without proper control of the influx of the Kampuchean people fleeing into Thailand in large numbers, they would create security problems for Thailand in future. Forces have therefore been dispatched to block these Kampucheans from entering the country and group them together at Ban Thung Yao. The command also placed units in readiness to resist possible hot pursuit across the border by the Vietnamese troops chasing the Kampuchean forces into Thailand. The Chanthaburi-Trat Security Operations Command also carried out humanitarian operations to help those people. We provided them with food and other necessary items, water and medical care. We received assistance with this from international organizations, like the World Food Program, the International Red Cross Society and the Thai Red Cross Society.

As for our plan, when the situation in Kampuchea improves, we will repatriate these Kampuchean people. In any eventuality, the Chanthaburi-Trat Security Operations Command is in readiness to cope with any intrusion by the Vietnamese forces which might, deliberately or not, cross the border in hot pursuit against the Kampuchean forces.

U.S., PRC ACCUSED OF SLANDER ON TOXIC CHEMICALS

NHAN DAN 20 Mar Comment

OW200737 Hanoi VNA in English 0717 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 20 -- NHAN DAN today comments that the U.S. slander campaign charging the Soviet Union and Vietnam with using toxic chemicals in Afghanistan and Kampuchea has backfired. It is still remembered that in South Vietnam, the paper says, the United States dropped over 100,000 tonnes of toxic chemicals on 13,000 square kilometres of crop-land and 25,000 (twenty five thousand) square kilometres of forest covering almost all the provinces, destroying crops which would be sufficient to feed millions of people and affecting two million inhabitants, 3,500 of them mortally.

The Chinese, NHAN DAN continues, also used gas in some populous areas and poisoned water sources during their aggression against Vietnam in February 1979.

In their trial by the municipal court in Kabul, the paper further recalls, seven rebels, agents of imperialism and international reaction, confessed that they had been ordered to intrude into Afghanistan from Pakistan, taking along 200 bags of poison tablets to poison 2,000 pupils in Kabul.

Early this week, the paper says, the paper KAMPUCHEA condemned Thai troops for firing, on February 11 and 14, many chemical shells into Phnum Malai, Kampuchea, seriously affecting many inhabitants. Earlier, the Thai authorities had ordered the evacuation of Thai inhabitants from areas adjacent to Phnum Malai and the issue of gas masks to Thai troops.

By making false charges, the paper points out, imperialism and international reaction seek to divert public opinion from their increasing intervention in Afghanistan and Kampuchea and their military activities against Nicaragua and El Salvador. "The U.S. Government also hopes to draw public attention from its criminal decision on large-scale production and use of new chemical weapons, among the binary ones, which may be as destructive as nuclear weapons," NHAN DAN stresses.

Hanoi Radio Comment

BK201301 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The Reagan administration and other reactionary forces have again accused the Soviet Union and Vietnam of using toxic chemicals in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia.

On 9 March the Reagan administration claimed that Soviet troops had killed at least 3,000 persons in Afghanistan by the use of gas and other chemical weapons. Earlier U.S. Under Secretary of State [as heard] Walter Stoessel told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the report was leaked by refugees in Afghanistan. Those statements by the U.S. authorities showed that U.S. diplomacy falsified and distorted, disregarding world opinion including scientific and intellectual circles.

In any scientific problem it is necessary to have concrete proof. But Washington, by relying on the confession of some refugees and some samples of leaves and tree branches alleged as being poisoned, has come to a hasty conclusion. The ASSOCIATED PRESS, however, said that there is no basis to blame the Soviet Union for using toxic chemicals in Afghanistan. It is necessary to note that the charge was made just before the U.S. Congress adopted a resolution observing 21 March as Afghanistan Day. The move was aimed at drawing public attention to this Afghanistan Day, wooing other countries to start a hostile policy toward the Soviet Union, causing tension and preventing a political solution to the Afghan issue.

The paper WALL STREET JOURNAL on 9 March said that by so doing Washington hopes to cover its plan against that country. Chiming in with Washington's allegation, Beijing and Bangkok claimed that Vietnam was using toxic chemicals in the border areas between Thailand and Kampuchea. But their charge did not hold water. The Washington POST on 6 March said that the Western experts were still unable to find any evidence of Vietnam using toxic chemicals in Kampuchea. The British secretary of state for defense declared on 18 March that the scientists analysing some samples have so far not arrived at any conclusion.

Meanwhile, the Kampuchean news agency SPK reported that Thai troops on 11 and 12 February fired chemical shells on Phnum Malai area in Battambang Province, seriously affecting 20 civilians.

Every one still remembers that the United States has used toxic chemicals on a large-scale during the Vietnam war and that while invading Vietnam's northern border areas in February 1979 Chinese troops poisoned many wells and other water sources. How can Washington, Beijing, Bangkok and other reactionary forces deny such crimes? They can never besmear the Soviet Union, Vietnam and other socialist countries. The more they slander these countries, the more they expose their true color and make a laughingstock of themselves.

NHAN DAN PRAISES BREZHNEV PEACE INITIATIVE

OW200807 Hanoi VNA in English 0730 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 20 -- NHAN DAN today acclaims as "very important" the peace proposal made by Soviet President L.I. Brezhnev at the 17th congress of the trade unions of the U.S.S.R. "Again," NHAN DAN says, "the Soviet Union has proved its consistent stand of peace and its earnest intention and tireless effort to secure peace and security for all nations. This is all the more significant since warlike forces in the Pentagon are feverishly stepping up the arms race for military superiority." NHAN DAN points out that "arms racing, in fact, has always been the backbone of the U.S. foreign policy since the Second World War, while the Soviet Union has always been a great peace champion."

The paper continues: "Having sustained the heaviest losses in the Second World War, the Soviet people, like other peace-loving nations, very highly value peace for their own construction and prosperity. The Soviet Union's great concern to peace and security in Europe is correct and quite understandable. The situation on this continent has become more and more critical because of big concentrations of hostile armies and modern war materials. So, in a persistent struggle for peace and disarmament, the Soviet Union has put forth practical proposals, especially concerning Europe. Now again, it has shown its good will through the unilateral decision to postpone the deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles on its European territories."

After criticizing the negative attitude of the United States, NHAN DAN writes: "World public opinion is acclaiming the good will and effort of the Soviet Union. The way to disarmament is difficult and complicated. Keeping the status quo in order to create favourable conditions for negotiations and to foster mutual trust and then to advance towards treaties on gradual disarmament will be the most practical and logical way. The Soviet Union has made the first step in this direction with a great sense of responsibility."

"The Soviet Union's new proposal suits the aspirations of European peoples and mankind as a whole... The forces of war know that they will have to account for all the consequences of their frantic intensification of the arms race," NHAN DAN stresses.

SRV COMDEMNS U.S. CENTRAL AMERICAN POLICY

OW191555 Hanoi VNA in English 1523 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 19 -- A spokesman for the Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam issued here today a statement on the situation in Central America and the Caribbean. The statement reads:

"The situation in Central America and the Caribbean has become very tense due to the Reagan administration's bellicose and interventionist policy and its threats of aggression.

"Running counter to the American people's interests and disregarding the growing protest of the peoples and the majority of governments in Latin America and the Caribbean, and of public opinion in the United States and throughout the world, the U.S. imperialists are pursuing a policy of increasingly impudent intervention in Central America and the Caribbean, especially in El Salvador, while increasing their opposition to and sabotage of Cuba, Nicaragua and Grenada, critically endangering the independence, sovereignty, security and peace of those countries.

"The Reagan administration has been smuggling large amounts of weapons and other means of war and a great many military adivsers into El Salvador to help the Salvadoran junta massacre the people of that country in most brutal manners. At the same time, the remnants of the Somoza regime and other reactionary forces fed and armed by the United States are rallying on the Honduran-Nicaraguan border to conduct armed provocations in coordination with the C.I.A.'s subversive plan against Nicaragua. The reinforced U.S. naval, army and airforces in the region are joining N.A.T.O. forces in large-scale military exercises on the Caribbean Sea. Meanwhile, the United States has slanderously charged Nicaragua and Cuba with interfering in the internal affairs of El Salvador with the aim of covering up and justifying their increasing intervention and paving the way for adventures in Central America and the Caribbean in an attempt to maintain their client regimes in El Salvador and other countries and eventually to destroy the Nicaraguan revolution and the revolutionary movement of the national independence movement in the region.

"The people and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam vehemently condemn the Reagan administration for its extremely dangerous schemes and acts. We resolutely support the national defence and construction of the peoples and the governments of Nicaragua, Cuba and Grenada and the certainly victorious just struggle of the Salvadoran people for democracy, freedom and the right to self-determination.

"The only solution to the tense situation in Central America and the Caribbean is for the Reagan administration to put an immediate end to its policy of intervention and aggression toward that region, to respect the right to self-determination of nations, and seriously respond to the correct stand full of good will already stated in the Nicaraguan Government's five-point proposal and in President Fidel Castro's letter supporting the three-point proposal made by the Mexican president in February 1982".

U.S. MOVES AGAINST NICARAGUA CONDEMNED

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Comment

OW210755 Hanoi VNA in English 0728 GMT 21 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 21 -- The Reagan adminstration is crudely interfering in the Central America-Caribbean region "in a bid to save the dictatorial regimes there, especially in El Salvador, while scheming to stamp out the Nicaraguan revolution", says QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in a commentary today. The army newspaper condemns the U.S. for "fabricating evidences to slander Nicaragua and Cuba and deploying its forces in preparation for dangerous adventures."

The paper recalls the legitimate measures taken by the Nicaraguan Government to cope with the U.S. aggressive moves. "Progressive mankind resolutely supports the Nicaraguan Government's demands to the U.S. and is vigilantly watching the United States' bellicose policy aimed at maintaining its selfish interests in Central America," the paper says.

"Nicaragua is facing the danger of U.S. imperialist invasion", the paper notes, adding: "But its entire people, far from flinching, are resolutely standing up in defence of their motherland. To divert public opinion and cover up its aggressive acts, Washington is clamouring about 'negotiation' with Nicaragua!

"The Vietnamese people firmly support the Nicaraguan Government and people and demand that the Reagan administration end immediately its adventurous policy against Nicaragua and the other countries in the Central America-Caribbean region," QUAN DOI NHAN DAN concludes.

NHAN DAN Comment

OW220857 Hanoi VNA in English 0716 GMT 22 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 22 -- "The Caribbean and Central American region is one of the hot points drawing much attention from the world public. The latter fully sympathizes with the Nicaraguan Government in taking urgent measures to defend the independence and sovereignty of Nicaragua," NHAN DAN writes in a commentary today.

The paper energetically condemns the United States for having recently increased provocative activities and threats in the region and supplied more military aid to its lackey administrations in the hope of bolstering up their morale. President Reagan has also adopted a plan for carrying out sabotage and causing instability in Nicaragua with the aim of overthrowing the legal government there, NHAN DAN says.

It continues: "The world public, especially the Latin American public, strongly protests against U.S. provocative and aggressive actions in Nicaragua, a sovereign country. Together with progressive people all over the world, the Vietnamese people express their militant solidarity with the fraternal Nicaraguan people and fully support their just cause against U.S. intervention and aggression to defend their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and their revolutionary achievements".

"U.S. imperialists, hands off Nicaragua", demands the paper.

NHAN DAN COMMENTARY SCORES 'AFGHANISTAN DAY'

OW210729 Hanoi VNA in English 0714 GMT 21 Mar 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, March 21 -- The Reagan administration's declaring March 21 as "Afghanistan day" is a new skulduggery of the U.S., says NHAN DAN in a commentary today. Like the "day of solidarity with Poland", the paper notes, "Afghanistan day" is a spear thrust of the United States' massive campaign against the Soviet Union and the world revolutionary and progressive forces.

The paper says: "The Reagan administration's concern decidedly is not Afghanistan's real independence and freedom. In fact, the U.S. imperialists, in collusion with the Beijing expansionists and other reactionary forces, have for many years now waged an undeclared war against the Afghan revolution. They have used Pakistani territory as a spring-board for intervention and aggression, grossly encroaching upon the Pakistani people's national rights and threatening security at the southern border of the Soviet Union."

That is the cause of tension in the Persian Gulf region, a situation fraught with incalculable consequences, NHAN DAN says. "Those who are shedding crocodile tears over Afghanistan are precisely the aggressors, interventionists and cursed warmongers", it points out.

The paper goes on: "Together with progressive mankind, the Vietnamese people resolutely condemn the U.S. imperialists and the other reactionary forces for their continued hostile toward Afghanistan and their blatant interfernece in that country. We reiterate our total support for the just stand full of good will of the governments of the Soviet Union and the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan."

NHAN DAN recalls the recent national conference of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan as affirming the Afghan people's determination to strive for the establishment of peace and security in their country. "That is an irreversible course of action," NHAN DAN concludes.

PAPER WARNS AGAINST PRC 'MULTIFACETED SABOTAGE'

BK191035 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 28 Feb 82, p 2

[Unattributed article: "Be Vigilant and Ready To Frustrate the Scheme of Multifaceted Sabotage of the Beijing Expansionists"]

[Text] Vietnam's great victory over China's war of aggression in February 1979 rubbed salt into the wounds of China's society, which for a decade has been ailing. China's ambitious "four modernizations" economic program has achieved nothing, and the Chinese leaders are talking about long-term changes to their economy. In Zhongnanhai the swords are rattling as the power struggle among various factions continues. Decadent phenomena are widespread in Chinese society and the people's confidence has been shattered. The so-called "solidarity" and "stability" so frequently invoked by the Beijing reactionary leadership for their society is still illusive.

Isolated by world public opinion and knowing that they are still weak in various domains, the Beijing reactionary leaders realize that they still cannot subjugate Vietnam by military force. As a result, they have perfidiously resorted to a multifaceted war of sabotage against Vietnam militarily, economically, politically and diplomatically in order to weaken and then dominate our country.

This scheme of sabotage is a logical development of the Great Han nation strategy and the big-nation hegemonism which have been nurtured by the Beijing reactionary leadership for more than 3 decades. In waging their multifaceted war of sabotage against Vietnam, the Beijing reactionary leaders hope to fulfill the objectives they have long dreamed of. Consequently they continue to:

-- Maintain huge regular military forces along the China-Vietnam border and threaten to attack Vietnam a second time, increase their provocations and armed conflicts to undermine our manpower and facilities in order to create obstacles to our people's efforts in building socialism and helping the fraternal Lao and Kampuchean revolutions;

-- Accelerate their psychological and espionage warfare activities, slander and distort our party and state's independent lines, smear our party cadres and members to sow division between the party and the masses and the administration and the people, undermine the all-people solidarity alliance in order to weaken our socialist system and our people's collective mastery cause. This is aimed at creating rebellion and uprisings in localities where they think they can interfere in our internal affairs and stir up a war of aggression against our country;

-- Undermine our economy by using their local henchmen to carry out sabotage activities against our economic establishments such as warehouses, ports, state farms, enterprises and communications lines, create disturbances in the monetary and marketing systems, spread epidemics to kill our livestock and damage our crops, exert pressure by persuading other countries to conduct a trade embargo and economic blockade against Vietnam in order to isolate and weaken us and force us into bankruptcy; and

-- Launch a global campaign against Vietnam by using international forums, especially the United Nations, to slander, distort and smear Vietnam and discredit it in the international arena. This is aimed at undermining the special relationship between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, the friendship and cooperation relations between Vietnam and the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community and at creating obstacle for normal relations between Vietnam and the other countries in the world.

In carrying out their multifaceted war of sabotage against Vietnam, the reactionary group in the Beijing leadership believe that by weakening Vietnam they can weaken the three Indochinese countries, thereby creating conditions for them to annex and subjugate Indochina and expand their influence to other Southeast Asian countries.

The multifaceted war of sabotage being waged by the Beijing reactionaries against Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries is an inseparable part of the global counterrevolutionary strategy of the expansionist Great Han nation and the Beijing big-nation hegemonist forces. It is the first step along the path toward fulfilling their dream of hegemonism in Southeast Asia and the world.

To fulfill their dark scheme to "bleed" and weaken Vietnam in order to subjugate it, the reactionary group in the Beijing leadership have strengthened their collusion and coordination with the U.S. imperialists to frantically oppose and undermine the Vietnamese, Lao and Kampuchean revolution. They have resorted to the most meticulous and perfidious maneuvers to block the trend toward dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries, oppose and undermine the national independence movement and socialism in this area, a key strategic region of the world.

Beijing has sought to exert pressure to buy and solicit the leaders of ASEAN countries into their expansionist and aggressive orbit, undermine the rebirth of Kampuchea and plot to replace the yoke of slavery on this country.

In a bid to carry out their scheme of undermining the Indochinese countries' revolutions, Beijing has paid special attention to exploiting the lackey forces which they have organized and fostered such as the Maoist group, the reactionary Hoa people, the Pol Pot remnant troops, and the Hoang Van Hoan traitorous group. They have also used the former imperialist lackeys such as soldiers and civilians of the former Saigon regime, the Son Sann, Sihanouk and the bandit Vang Pao groups, the CIA, French and British spies and other reactionaries disguised as religious and national groups. In short, all the dregs of society in Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea have been recruited to carry out long-term sabotage activities against the Indochinese countries' revolutions.

In their "war of comprehensive sabotage" against Vietnam and other Indochinese countries, the Beijing expansionists have resorted to their forte -- meticulous and sinister maneuvers which can deceive domestic public opinion and at the same time help them to achieve their dark scheme to weaken the revolution. As a result, the Beijing leadership, while adhereing to their plan to wage a large-scale war of aggression, maintain that the multifaceted war of sabotage is a vital means to conquer the Indochinese countries without having to wage an open and risky war of aggression which would undoubtedly be opposed by the Chinese people and strongly denounced by the peoples of the world. The maneuvers that the Beijing expansionsits have indulged in this war are sabotage activities in the military, economic, political, social and diplomatic domains. They have acccelerated psychological, espionage and commando warfare activities, attempted to send spies into our territory, and established double-faced administrations in localities with conditions favorable to them so as to incite evacuation and create rebellion and subversion.

While carrying out these sabotage activities, the reactionary group in the Beijing leadership views each period and each locality to determine which maneuver is the best one.

In Kampuchea, the reactionary group in the Beijing leadership pays special attention to accelerating "guerrilla warfare." They have sought support from the untrarightist reactionaries in the Bangkok leadership to use Thai soil as a sanctuary and base for the Pol Pot remnant troops and other Khmer reactionaries carrying out sabotage activities against the Kampuchean revolution, especially in the Kampuchea-Thailand border areas.

In Laos, they pay lipservice to peace and create confusion among the masses, making them unable to distinguish right from wrong and friend from foes. They have sent their henchmen to work in the administrative organs in order to undermine from within by trying to damage the reputation of the revolutionary administration, especially in the China-Laos border area.

In southern Vietnam, especially in the former enemy zones, the Beijing reacitonaries have persistently contacted and used former imperialist henchmen such as soldiers and civilians of the former Saigon regime, CIA agents, French and British spies, reactionaries disguised as religious group and bad elements among the Hoa and the ethnic minority peoples. They have accelerated psychological and espionage warfare activities to oppose the cause of socialist transformation, undermine production, disturb the market, incite evacuation and try to create rebellion in those localities where they think it is possible.

In northern Vietnam, especially the provinces bordering China, the Beijing reactionaries have attempted to sow division among the people of various nationalities, between cadres and soldiers and between the public security forces and the ethnic minority groups. They have tried to establish double-faced administrations and slandered our party and state line and policies by referring to traitor Hoang Van Hoan's statements. They have also tried to send commandos and scouts into our territory to carry out sabotage activities and conduct round-the-clock armed provocations in order to create tension at the Vietnam-China border.

In colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionary forces to frantically conduct a multifaceted war of sabotage to weaken Vietnam, the Beijing reactionaries have committed many new crimes against our people. Over the past 3 years, they have launched more than 6,000 provocations and intrustions into our northern border areas. Their aircraft have flown thousands of sorties through our airspace and their armed vessels have violated our territorial waters tens of thousands of times. They have also fired artillery shells on many populated areas while their troops have intruded into our territory to kill our people and destroy our property. The Chinese troops still illegally occupy the Paracel Archipelago -- an indivisible part of Vietnam's territory -- and dozens of points along our northern border.

The war of sabotage being persistently waged against Vietnam by the Beijing reactionaries is very wicked. Its dangerous nature is that the enemies have concealed their appearance in waging this war in order to avoid denunciation by domestic and international public opinion. At the same time they can easily deceive those who are off guard, lack political background and vigilance and who cannot distinguish friend from foe. Moreover, they have colluded closely and comprehensively with imperialism and the international reactionary forces, thus making it more difficult for us to oppose them. They also take advantage of our economic and social difficulties as well as negative phenomena in our social life to carry out their psychological warfare activities to undermine us. If we are not alert we will not be able to distinguish which are the enemy's sabotage acitivites, which are events caused by backward elements and which are our own weaknesses and shortcomings that must be overcome. In carrying out this multifaceted war of sabotage, the Beijing expansionist contend that they can achieve their expansionist ambitions without having to use as many forces and weapons as in waging a war of aggression.

This multifaceted war of sabotage is dangerous and wicked. It is, however, an act of a weak and passive side. By waging a war of aggression against us, the Beijing expansionists have reached the peak of their scheme in opposing and undermining Vietnam. Since they were defeated in their war of aggression, they will undoubtedly be foiled in their war of sabotage. Being an evil and fraudulent, the Beijing reactionaries cannot create a strong force to defeat our combined strength. Our people, party and state are firmly united. Our party's revolutionary guideline is correct and creative. Our people have inherited a tradition of loving their country and socialism and have firmly maintained their revolutionary consciousness. The nature of these sabotage activities being conducted by Beijing is nothing new. In the past the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists resorted to similar activities but were defeated by us. Now, despite their great efforts to carry out these perfidious schemes, the Beijing reactionaries will surely meet with failure because we have had ample experiences to oppose them and our strength is unprecedentedly strong.

It is the duty of the entire party, the people and the army, various echelons of party committees, state organs and mass organizations to heighten their vigilance and strive to foil all the maneuvers in the multifaceted war of sabotage of the Beijing expansionists. It is also a noble obligation and a heavy task for our party cadres and members and officers and combatants of our people's armed forces.

In each locality and unit, attention must be paid to heightening vigilance, enhancing revolutionary spirit and formulating decisive and effective measures to oppose all schemes and manuevers of the enemy. Accelerating the tasks concerning the elimination of negative phenomena is also very important for the struggle to defeat the Beijing expansionists' multifaceted war of sabotage.

Reality has shown that the enemy always takes advantage to carry out sabotage activities at places and units where negative phenomena and lack of vigilance are prevalent. As a result, all tasks designed to persistently enhance the people's love for their fatherland and socialism, heighten their spirit of collective mastery, accelerate socialist construction, strengthen national defense and maintain security are main tasks that will form our strength to smash all maneuvers in the war of sabotage of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists.

SHIPPING SECTOR HOLDS REVIEW CONFERENCE

BK131411 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 13 Mar 82

[Text] The General Sea Transport Department of the Communications and Transportation Ministry recently held a conference in Ho Chi Minh City to review its 1981 performances and to discuss measures to fulfill its 1982 transportation tasks well.

In 1981, the sea transport sector made great efforts in exercising its leadership over production, combining well its routine duties with unplanned tasks. It initiated timely guidelines for domestic and overseas transportation, for loading and unloading import and export goods, and for shipping good from north to south.

The sector also adopted many measures which contributed to stabilizing the livelihood of cadres, workers and civil servants. It implemented the product contract system, boldly applying product contracts to transportation; expanded secondary production; and applied the system of wages and bonuses. It has contributed to maintaining consistent manpower and has partly restricted negative manifestations in life.

The conferees critically reviewed shortcomings in loading, unloading, receiving and transporting goods, and failure to meet the requirements of production and life, to set proper plan norms and to fully use the sector's transporting capacity. They unanimously approved the guidelines, tasks and specific measures to enhance the quality of all tasks, reorganize production and implement the socialist system of business accountability.

As an immediate task, the sea transport sector must guarantee to receive all the import goods, unload and load export goods quickly, fulfill north-south shipments promptly and meet the economic and national defense requirements.

Ministers Discuss Relations

HK220428 Baguio Mountain Province Broadcasting Corporation in English 0400 GMT 22 Mar 82

[Excerpts] President Marcos buckles down to work today with top-level talks in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. The talks will follow proposals taken up in separate ministerial meetings yesterday. Saudi Arabia has agreed to extend more aid to the Philippines, especially in the continued and increased supply of oil to the country. Increased technical and economic cooperation between the two countries is expected to result from the president's 3-day visit.

President Marcos held a private meeting with King Khalid yesterday. In their conversation the president was reported to have invited the king to make a return visit to the Philippines at the most convenient time.

One of the more important assurances given by Saudi Arabia to the Philippines is continued oil supply. Energy Minister Geronimo Velasco said Saudi oil officials have pledged to increase the supply should the Philippines need it.

Another important measure discussed was agricultural cooperation. Agricultural Minister Arturo Tanco Jr said his talks would be relatively easier in that there is already a working agreement on agricultural exchange between the two countries.

The on-going talks in Saudi Arabia are also expected to result in increased aid for faster development on Mindanao. Public Works and Highways Minister Jesus Hipolito said he would concentrate on working out the continued completion of network roads that would link all of the south. Hipolito said the 2.4 billion-peso project would need substantial help from Saudi Arabia.

For his part, Education and Culture Minister Onofre Corpuz said he would try to set up accreditation linkages with the Saudi Arabian schools to improve Islamic education in the Philippines. Corpuz said the Philippines would also be working out arrangements to train Saudi Arabians in technical management.

Shaykh Muhammad Aba al-Khayl, the minister of finance and national economy, said after talks with Philippines director-general of the national economic and development authority, Placido Mapa, that they discussed ways of strengthening relations in the banking sector. He said the possibility of setting up a Saudi fund to aid development in the Philippines and to develop commercial relations between the two states was also discussed.

Dr Ghazi al-Qusaybi, the minister of industry and electricity, said that he and the Philippine industry minister had discussed the possibility of expanding industrial cooperation. [end (Asuke) recording].

Enrile was reacting to reports that certain Philippine Constabulary elements in Cavite were taking sides in political rows in that area.

[Text] Lieutenant General Fidel Ramos, Philippine Constabulary [PC] Chief, has relieved Major (Maximo Evora). Cavite's PC officer was accused of politicking. Acting on a directive from Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, Ramos also ordered an investigation on the alleged issuance of guns to politicians without proper authority.

The Defense Ministry earlier ordered the military to immediately act on a complaint of the Cavite mayors' league regarding alleged militarization in the province. Acting on this complaint, Enrile ordered the armed forces to dismantle all military checkpoints allegedly put up in the province without authority. Ramos, who is also armed forces vice chief of staff, ordered the commanding officer of the PC Training Command to refrain from conducting military field exercises outside of Camp (Castaneda) in Cavite. The presence of soldiers in Cavite reportedly has scared tourists, businessmen and residents in the province, according to the mayors' league.

REAGAN, SAKURAUCHI DISCUSS TRADE, DEFENSE ISSUES

OW230035 Tokyo KYODO in English 0002 GMT 23 Mar 82

[Excerpts] Washington, March 22 (KYODO) -- President Ronald Reagan Monday met Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and strongly urged Japan to open its market still wider to foreign goods and services. Speaking to reporters after talks with Reagan at the White House, Sakurauchi said he pledged Japan will make every effort to cut its huge trade surplus with the United States.

Japanese officials, in briefing reporters on the talks, said Reagan hoped Japan will introduce fresh additional market-opening measures before the Versailles summit in June of seven non-communist industrialized nations. By doing so, Japan can make a great contribution to the maintenance of the free trade system, the President was quoted as telling Sakurauchi, here on a five-day visit. The Reagan-Sakurauchi meeting, which lasted about 30 minutes, was also attended by Vice President Goerge Bush and Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

The Japanese foreign minister arrived here at a time when a series of congressional hearings have beenheld to deliberate on bills to curb the influx of Japanese exports to the United States. U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige recently urged Japan to make a "dramatic" move to cut its mammoth trade suplus, claiming the Japanese market is still closed to foreign goods and services. But Japan has insisted that the trade imbalance was caused by the high U.S. interest rate and the higher dollar trend on money markets all over the world. U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield last week echoed Baldrige's call when he met leaders of Japan's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party.

Reagan told Sakurauchi Monday that Japan-U.S. relations are also important for the entire Western bloc and the world. The President hoped Japan will open its market wider to all of its trading partners to solve serious economic problems plaguing other Western nations and to maintain the free trade system, the Japanese officials said. Diplomatic observers interpreted this as suggesting the possibility of concerted action by the United States and Western Europe against Japan unless it takes further trade measures before the Versailles summit.

Sakurauchi reportedly told the president that his government is making every effort to make its market easier for foreign products to enter with the summit in mind. "The cherry blossoms will soon be in full bloom and at the same time, relations between Japan and the United States will be in full bloom," Sakurauchi told reporters after his talks with Reagan. He added: "If the U.S. economy recovers, then the (Japanese currency) yen will gain strength in the market. We can buy more foreign goods."

Japanese officials said Reagan in principle agreed to meet Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki individually while they are attending the Versailles summit. No exact date has been set, however, they said. Reagan sought more Japanese defense efforts as a member of the Western bloc, saying increased Western power is "important because it is a basis for real arms reduction with the Soviet Union," American officials reported. Japanese officials said the President asked Sakurauchi to resume negotiations to revise the bilateral civil aviation accord which ended in rupture in San Francisco last week. Sakurauchi said the presidential request will be relayed to the Japanese prime minister, the officials added.

Before Reagan, Sakuruachi met Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and was briefed on the prospects of the U.S. economy which is plagued with rampant inflation and a high rate of unemployment. Regan was quoted by Japanese officials as saying that the high interest rate in the United States will begin to decline between this summer and autumn. The secretary appreciated Japan's recent efforts to open its market wider for foreign imports but said the measures are still insufficient, the officials said.

After his meeting with the President, the Japanese minister visited the Pentagon and met Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci. Carlucci appreciated Japan's defense expansion efforts and added he hoped Japan will continue to take due responsibility and play an appropriate role in world affriars, the officials said. Sakurauchi is scheduled to meet Secretary of State Haig and congressional leaders Tuesday.

RESULTS OF NHK OPINION POLL ON DEFENSE SPENDING

OW221451 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 1000 GMT 22 Mar 82

[Text] An opinion poll conducted by NHK indicates growing opposition among the people to an expansion of the nation's defense capabilities with more than half of those polled stating that defense spending should be kept below the 1-percent level of GNP -- gross national product.

NHK has been conducting public opinion surveys on living and political conditions twice a year. The latest survey was held on 6 and 7 March, polling 1,800 persons 20 years of age or older across the country. On the defense issue included in the survey, the first question was about the government's policy of limiting the nation's defense spending within 1 percent of GNP. Fifty-five percent demanded that the government firmly maintain its policy, stating that defense spending should be kept below 1 percent of GNP under all circumstances or that it should be drastically reduced. On the other hand, approximately 25 percent approved the defense spending exceeding 1 percent of GNP. Notable was the fact that support for greater defense spending increased among older men while support decreased among older women.

On questions dealing with the defense capabilities of the Self-Defense Forces, an overwhelming percentage of those polled -- approximately 60 percent -- answered that they should be kept at the present level, while 14 percent advocated an expansion and buildup. A comparison with similar polls since May 1980 indicates a trend urging a curb on arguments for a defense buildup.

On questions dealing with the special treatment given to defense in the fiscal 1982 budget, approximately 49 percent approved of the special treatment -- 39 percent of those polled said that it cannot be helped and 10 percent said that it was a matter of course. On the other hand, 30 percent indicated their opposition to the special treatment.

Answers to questions on disarmament and nuclear weapons also indicated a similar trend. This trend appears to reflect the serious concern among the people about nuclear war and the arms race as tension heightens between the East and the West and between the United States and the Soviet Union. This trend also indicates that if the government should attempt to reconsider its present spending policy in connection with the upcoming 5-year defense buildup program, it will inevitably encounter strong opposition from public opinion.

GOVERNMENT URGED TO GRANT VISAS TO DPRK GROUP

OW171135 Tokyo KYODO in English 0855 GMT 17 Mar 82

[Text] Tokyo, March 17 (KYODO) -- A group of dietmen Wednesday asked the government again to promptly issue entry visas for a North Korean delegation wishing to visit Japan to negotiate extension of a two-year provisional fishery agreement before it expores in June. Chuji Kuno, Liberal-Democrat chairman of the Dietmen's League for Promotion of Japan-(North) Korea Friendship, and other league members made the request to Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa.

Miyazawa said the government would study the request. Japan has no diplomatic relations with North Korea. The dietmen's group made a similar request last week. The Foreign Ministry is reluctant to issue the entry visas for the North Koreans at this time when Japan is in negotiation with South Korea on Seoul's request for economic aid.

North Korea had proposed to send a mission led by Hyong Chun-kuk, deputy chairman of the Korean Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, for talks on extension of the fishery agreement. In view of Japan's reluctance, North Korea told the dietmen's group through the pro-Pyongyang General Association of Korean Residents in Japan (Chongnyon) that it would not submit a list of mission members before Japan made its attitude clear.

When the provisional fishery agreement expires at the end of June and is not extended, Japanese fishermen will no longer be permitted to catch cuttlefish in North Korea's 200-nautical-mile sea zone in the coming season.

NODONG SINMUN CALLS WEINBERGER TRIP 'WAR JUNKET'

SK230422 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2345 GMT 22 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 23 March commentary: "Dangerous Trip"]

[Text] According to foreign press reports, U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger plans to visit South Korea and Japan in late March for approximately 10 days. During this period, Weinberger is scheduled to attend the 14th South Korea-U.S. annual Security Consultative Meeting [SCM] to be held in Seoul on 30-31 March and the Japan-U.S. annual SCM to be held in Tokyo on 25-28 March, the reports said.

Reports say that the annual South Korea-U.S. SCM will discuss the modernization program of the U.S. forces occupying South Korea and the puppet army and other military problems pending between the United States and the puppets, and that the annual Japan-U.S. SCM will discuss the international military situation, an increase in the military spending of Japan and the buildup of Japan's armed forces. Reports also say that the Fourth South Korea-U.S. Military Committee Conference, with the participation of chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the United States and the puppet clique, will be convened in Seoul on 29 March and will map out strategic guidelines for the South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command.

For Weinberger, the planner and executor of the U.S. policy of war, to sneak into South Korea and Japan to discuss military problems at a time when the U.S. imperialists are frantic in preparations of a new war in South Korea, Japan and other areas of the Far East is a very ominous thing. Therefore, our people and the peace-loving people of the world cannot but to pay keen attention to this. As has been shown by history, visits by high-ranking U.S. officials and military bosses to South Korea, in particular, have had grave consequences for peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification. It is clear that the planned visit of Weinberger to South Korea will not be an exception to this.

The "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise, an extremely provocative military exercise against our republic, is now being staged in South Korea. This war exercise is mobilizing the U.S. forces stationed in South Korea, the puppet army, U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine units from the U.S. mainland and military bases in the Pacific -- totalling more than 160,000 men -- and various sophisticated lethal weapons and equipment.

In light of its scale, content, characteristics and the equipment it is mobilizing, the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercize is not merely a repeat of the usual military exercises conducted in the past but a dangerous play with fire aimed at completing the preparations for a nuclear war and all-out war in Korea and for attacking us at any time. It is only too clear that Weinberger's visit to the battlefield, where bullets and shells are bursting, at the very time when huge armed forces are being concentrated in the area near the military demarcation line and when the "Team Spirit 1982" war racket has moved in earnest into an attack stage after completing its strategic mobility and preparatory stages is designed for on-the-spot inspection and direct command of the war exercise for northward invasion against our republic.

Weinberger's planned visit to South Korea is reminiscent of the visit by Dulles, a war merchant, who visited South Korea just prior to the outbreak of the war of aggression against Korea and endorsed the war provocation plan. It is also more clear evidence that the U.S. imperialists are running wild to continuously hold onto South Korea and, using it as a springboard, to implement an aggressive strategy against our republic. Based on this aggressive strategy against Korea, the U.S. imperialists are increasing their aggressive armed forces in South Korea and in the surrounding areas. The U.S. imperialists' deployment of new cruise missiles to the 7th Fleet, their reinforcement of large-scale U.S. forces in the Far East and their continuous introduction of new type fighter-bombers, close support planes and anti-aircraft missiles to South Korea are part of such military buildup schemes.

The Security Consultative Meeting between Weinberger and the puppets is to further accelerate the military buildup schemes for the implementation of the U.S. strategy of aggression against Korea. The Joint Military Committee Conference is to map out and issue an operational plan to execute this strategy.

Weinberger's planned visit to South Korea is also to hand over more lethal weapons to the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, to inspire war hysteria and to drive the Chon Tu-hwan ring to the field of war against the nation as an assault unit. This is why the U.S. imperialists have transferred various types of weapons and operational equipment valued at several billion dollars to the puppets in recent years and why they plan the transfer of a huge amount of war materiel, including ammunition and equipment, valued at $2 billion.

By doing this, the U.S. imperialists are threatening our republic with force and are attempting to push ahead with preparations for a war against the Korean people by further massing forces from the United States and the puppet army, around the Korean Peninsula. Weinberger's junket to South Korea is totally one for war and aggression; it is to accelerate preparations for a new war.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring is converting South Korea into a base to launch a new war, following the truculent war policy of the U.S. imperialists. It is also trying to realize its wild desire for long-term power under the patronage of the U.S. imperialists. For the military fascist elements to meet in Seoul with their masters for aggression and treachery is a vicious challenge to our fellow countrymen's aspirations for peaceful reunifications and is a new treason.

Weinberger is scheming to conspire with the Japanese Government at the U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Meeting in Tokyo. This is aimed at waging a new war. It is reported that he will ask Japan to increase military expenditures and beef up the military capabilities of the Self-Defense Forces. It goes without saying that this is aimed at dragging the Japanese reactionaries into the U.S. strategy in the Far East and Asia by accelerating the militarization of Japan and strengthening the U.S.-Japan security system. Furthermore, considering that his junket to Japan has been planned shortly after the United States and Japan entered upon the study of an emergency on the Korean Peninsula, the U.S.-Japan SCM, which plays an important role in accelerating the U.S. imperialists' preparations for a new war on the Korean Peninsula, will be a meeting to frame a concrete plan to sue Japan as a base for aggression and to throw the Japanese Self-Defense Forces into a new war.

Every fact shows that the U.S. defense secretary's junket will result in straining the situation on the Korean Peninsula, threatening peace and increasing the danger of a new war. This is an aggressive crime running counter to the aspirations of the world's peace-lovers and the demand of times, thus further heightening the people's anti-U.S. sentiment. Babbling about the non-existent threat from the North, the U.S. imperialists are conducting propaganda that their military buildup contributes to maintaining peace in the Far East. This is like a thief crying: "Stop thief!" and is a fraudulent trick to mislead public opinion. If the U.S. imperialists believe that they can realize their wild desire for aggression in Korea by threatening anyone with force, this is fantasy and will expose their belicose nature to the world, thus accelerating their isolation from the world peoples.

The U.S. imperialists should stop maneuvers to prepare for a war against the Korean people, withdraw the U.S. forces and their lethal weapons from South Korea and put an end to their interference in Korea forever. The puppet Chon Tu-hwan should stop the disgraceful treachery against the nation and immediately step down from power.

VRPR SAYS MASSES SHOULD PROTECT PUSAN ARSONISTS

SK230019 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 22 Mar 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] Mobilizing the army and police, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is making a wholesale roundup racket in Pusan and all over Seoul in connection with the incident of arson at the Pusan American Cultural Center.

The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique is arresting innocent people at random and summarily trying them, kicking up the row of wholesale crackdown and roundup rackets everywhere -- including downtown, at railway stations, and at cross-country bus terminals -- by mobilizing some 12,000 police, both uniformed and plain-clothes, with reinforcements from the military. On the pretext of searching for criminals, it is running amok with a house-to-house search by mobilizing ward heads, tong heads and even members of the Civil Defense Corps. In Pusan, it is waging fanatical repression of the citizens, holding the March meeting of the neighborhood association ahead of schedule on 22 March.

As you know, setting fire to the American Cultural Center in Pusan was an explosion of rancor and indignation pent up for a long period in our hearts against the U.S. imperialist aggressors, an eruption of anti-American sentiments. This is stern punishment of the U.S. aggressors, who are disturbing peace and the peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula, suppressing the forces calling for democracy and reunification while adhering to maneuvers for war and the nation's permanent division and violating the human rights. It was an extremely just and patriotic act reflecting our masses' will and demand.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan clique, mobilizing tens of thousands of military and police, kicked up the row of a wholesale crackdown and roundup campaign against our masses in Pusan and Seoul on the pretext of searching for the criminals. This is indeed an antipopular and antinational crime clearly showing the clique's nature and color as a pro-U.S. flunkeyist nation seller.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique is the butcher of the nation which cruelly massacred the Kwangju citizens calling for democracy and reunification in order to realize its long-term power. Seeking its own pleasure and wealth by carrying the U.S. masters on its back, it stained the land of Kwangju with the blood of fellow countrymen. The Chon Tu-hwan clique is a bloodsucker and warmonger running amok with aggression and northward invasion at the instigation of the United States. It is also vicious splittist.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique, the cursed flunkeyist nation-selling group, has held its tongue in the face of all kinds of atrocities and violence committed by U.S. troops occupying South Korea -- the cause of our masses' misfortunes and sufferings. However, it became enraged at the fire at the American Cultural Center in Pusan. This clearly shows what a filthy pro-U.S. stooge it is.

The fact that the Pusan American Cultural Center was set ablaze and that antigovernment and anti-U.S. leaflets reading "America should leave this land!" were scattered at the site of fire is a logical result of the colonial rule of the United States over South Korea. Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is fanatically repressing the people while flattering the U.S. masters. This is indeed an intolerable crime. The Chon Tu-hwan clique should immediately discontinue antipopular acts, such as suppressing the patriotic masses and following outside forces.

The masses from all walks of life should actively protect the patriots from the Chon Tu-hwan clique's barbarous oppression and guarantee their security. This is a duty and principle of the people who love the country and the people and who hope for democracy and reunification. Our masses will, by no means, tolerate the Chon Tu-hwan clique's vicious repression. They will crush the U.S. colonial rule by actively waging the anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle and bury the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist regime.

SOUTH STUDENTS SAID TO PLAN FOR 'DECISIVE MOMENT'

SK131045 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1014 GMT 13 Mar 82

[Text] Pyongyang, March 13 (KCNA) -- A recent issue of "NEW KOREA TIMES," a Koreans' paper published in Canada, carried an article titled "Rapid Increase of Underground Scientific Organisations of South Korean Students: Student Movement Enters New Phase."

The paper says: According to an information from an organisation of student movement of South Korea, underground scientific organisations are rapidly expanding among students, becoming widely prevalent as a new form of student movement, in the three-month long winter vacation.

The spread of this movement is mainly motivated by the urge to find the crux of the problem through scientific studies and expand the cell organisations in order to successfully go over to an anti-fascist movement at a decisive moment [kyolchongjok sungan].

These underground study groups are secret associations, each formed with 5 to 10 students, which are called in ciphers and whose members read scientific books and discuss South Korean problems, changing date and place.

The subjects of their studies are "theory of the development of history," "capitalist economy," "theory of economy of underdeveloped countries," "history of the South Korean people's movement," "history around the liberation" and so forth. The key point of their discussion is the reunification problem in which they find the tragedy of South Korea in North-South division and "the theory of dependence" regarding the political and economic ruin of South Korea as a course of exploitation by world capitalism.

Through their meetings, they study and discuss historic, political and economic problems concerning the relations between the United States and the Third World. This trend is the first of its kind to be observed among South Korean students since June 25, 1950.

YIM CHUN-CHU ARTICLE EXTOLS KIM IL-SONG

SK160721 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2222 GMT 15 Mar 82

[NODONG SINMUN 16 March special article: "The Respected and Beloved Comrade Kim Il-song Is the Great Leader Who Has Glorified Our People as a Prestigious and Independent Nation"-- KCNA press review identified Yim Chun-chu as author of article]

[Text] Today, our people live in the era of endless national prosperity. Never has our nation in its long 5,000-year history been more powerful and glorious than it is today.

The history of the prosperity of our nation is synonymous with the history of the resplendent revolutionary struggle of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The course which the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song covered in the storms of the prolonged severe revolutionary struggle has been embroidered with an epic about the peerless patriot and the great national hero.

Thanks to the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the future of our nation is endlessly bright and the happiness of the coming generations is firmly guaranteed. To our people, nothing is prouder and more prestigious than having the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as the great leader.

1) The respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song is the great leader who has brought about a fundamental change in the position and situation of our nation.

Throughout its long history, our people have suffered national trials which defy description. However, the present situation of our nation is entirely different.

The two contrasting aspects of the history of our people prove the precious truth that the position and situation of a nation entirely depend on the leadership of a leader.

It was a historic event which set a new chapter in the history of the nation that our people in those early days received the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as the great leader and started to hold him in high esteem. The course which we have covered since then is a proud one during which the position of our nation has reached its culmination and a brilliant path has been pioneered for the solution of the national questions of our times.

What are beyond description are the immortal achievements which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has won in the history of the nation along the distant and rugged path. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has made our people, who suffered maltreatment and humiliation by others, a proud, most prestigious independent people. This is the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great contribution to the development of the national history.

To liberate people from subjugation and oppression and to make them an independent people is a basic trend of our times and a guarantee for national independence and prosperity. Our is a time of independence.

Every nation must shape and pioneer its own destiny by itself. The people who live without independence and under the domination and subjugation of another cannot enjoy prestige and honor and achieve prosperity and growth. In changing the position and situation of a nation, nothing is more important than taking the road of independence.

The path along which the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has shaped the destiny of our nation is embroidered with the immortal exploits that all kinds of national oppression and subjugation were opposed, sovereignty and independence were defended, the century-long backwardness and poverty were liquidated, and the progress and civilization were brought about.

The realization of the cause of national liberation by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was a new milestone effecting a new turn in ending the protracted history of national ordeal and developing our people into an independent one. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: By leading the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to victory the Korean communists regained the national sovereignty of which they had been by the Japanese imperialists, achieved the independence of the country and thus opened a wide road toward the building of a new society.

The world was under the control of imperialists powers in the period from the late nineteenth century to the early twentieth century. As a result, the realization of national liberation was a supreme historic task of people under colonial rule in pioneering their fate. At the time when the national ordeal reached a climax and the imperialist powers' plundering of oppressed people was unprecedentedly unscrupulous, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song embarked on the road of fatherland liberation, holding aloft the banner of chuche. At that time, the colonial repression by the Japanese imperialists was at its worst; the whole country was submerged in a sea of blood and the people were living under extreme hardship. All situations and circumstances showed that the fate of the nation could not be saved by such previous ways of struggle as just sitting and lamenting over fate and begging others for independence.

Just at that period the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song elucidated a totally new way of struggle -- in other words, a unique way for winning independence through our people's own armed struggle. Because of this new way of struggle, the flames of struggle to carry out the cause of national liberation from colonialism under the principle of independence flared up for the first time in our history. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song defeated the Japanese imperialists by standing at the front of the arduous anti-Japanese struggle for some 20 years and achieved the cause of national liberation. This was a great event which brought a new spring of freedom and democracy to this land and which introduced the first struggle by an independent nation to a colony in the Far East.

If the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had not organized and led the heroic anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, breaking through all sorts of deadlines and difficulties, during the dark period of Japanese imperialist rule, our nation would have disappeared from the map of the world forever.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is indeed the great benefactor of national revival who rescued our people from a crisis. The heyday of great national prosperity unfolded by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is another great contribution he has made to the history of independent development of our nation. The fundamental change in the status and situation of a nation is made practically through growth and prosperity. The people who have failed to liquidate backwardness, poverty, illiteracy and barbarity and to achieve prosperity cannot achieve national equality or enjoy high pride and dignity as a nation.

In our country, the victory in the revolutionary struggle against Japan unfolded a new history of changing our nation from a subjugated nation to an independent nation whereas the almost 40 years of creation and construction since liberation are a glorious chronicle which has brought about a new era of national prosperity. This growth and prosperity of our nation is a miracle of the century, is a heroic epic which has made a contemptuously treated and oppressed nation a most powerful nation and brought overall improvement and development in all fields of social life. History has not witnessed as yet another great leader who has so greatly changed the status and situation of a nation in a short period of only scores of years.

The course on which the heyday of national prosperity has been unfolded on the land of our fatherland was not smooth. Korea was the synonym for backwardness and poverty. Although the people greeted liberation, our fatherland was divided; we suffered a shortage of funds and national cadres; we had no experience in building a new society. Under the difficult circumstances in which we were compelled to begin all our works from scratch, it was beyond imagination to enact the great upsurge of national prosperity. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was the only leader capable of accomplishing the new weighty task assigned the people.

Full of resources, an ironclad will and organizational skill, which he developed in anihilating the aggressors and in saving the people in the anti-Japanese struggle period, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song led to victory the new historic advance toward national prosperity. The magnificent plan for national prosperity set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is to eliminate completely colonial legacies and to found a most powerful, independent socialist country.

To achieve true national prosperity after freeing themselves from imperialist subjugation, the people should advance toward the road of socialism and found an independent country. The road to capitalism is one toward subjugation and downfall. Only the road to socialism is one for independence and prosperity. The line for building an independent socialist country delineated by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the most just course for protecting the already achieved independence of the people and for achieving the overall enlightenment and development of the people in all sectors, including the political, economic, cultural and military sectors.

Development devoid of the course for thoroughgoing independence is an empty word. The people who follow the course of reliance on foreign forces will be unable to avoid domination and subjugation by others. Because our people were powerless and backward in the past, they were forced to suffer the status of colonial slavery because of the Japanese imperialists.

With a firm resolve to turn our people into a developed and powerful people to prevent them from being humiliated by others, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song organized and led all the people to build a new, wealthy and powerful fatherland.

Over scores of years since the time when he embarked on the road of national foundation, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song devoted all his energy to founding an independent, self-reliant and self-defending powerful socialist country. As a result, our people was provided with a firm foundation for lasting prosperity.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always been deeply interested in fully developing the superior talent of the people in achieving prosperity for the country. Developing the inherently superior talent of the people is an important requirement for developing the people. A people can achieve national prosperity and contribute to the world revolution and to developing the culture of mankind by correctly carrying out the revolution and construction in their own country and by developing their ethnic traits. Thus, they can demonstrate their national pride.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has correctly developed the superior tradition of our people to meet the trend of a new era. In addition, he has helped them set a new, excellent example in all sectors. Thus, our people have contributed to enriching the treasure chest of mankind's culture. Thanks to the great leader Comrde Kim Il-song's correct policy and wise leadership, our national language has developed into a more beautiful, rich cultural language; the distorted history of our country has been corrected based on a chuche stand; and the heyday of chuche art has been ushered in with a national form and a socialist content.

In the era of the KWP led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people, who were once deprived of their names and suffered from illiteracy, have fully developed their wisdom and talent and demonstrated their status as a most noble and civilized people. In the long history of the people, there has never been another era in which our people were so powerful and prosperous as today. Gone is the miserable status of our people who, bound to the iron shackles of slavery, were humiliated and backward.

This whole history in which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song completely changed the status and situation of the nation was a rewarding course which achieved our people's ideological and spiritual liberation from old ideology destroying the principle of national independence. For the people to have a high sense of independence while getting rid of old ideologies of national nihilism and flunkeyism is a basic requirement in becoming an independent nation. When the people become slaves of other people ideologically and spiritually, they cannot escape the status of colonial subjugation nor can they defend independence with their own efforts and achieve their prosperity. People who have a high sense of independence are invincible, but those who do not are enervated and are inclined to be in subjection to others.

Independent development of a nation is a course on which the nation hews its way by itself. The fact that our nation is becoming a dignified nation which treasures independence and sovereignty, not subjugation and subserviency, is the outcome of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's spiritual delivery of our people from the shackles of flunkeyism. For a long time flunkeyism had caused much harm to our nation's independent development and revolution and, in the end, led the nation to ruin.

It was the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who saved the Korean people when they were doomed to become slaves. Always holding high the banner of national independence -- the banner of the establishment of chuche, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song provided our people with confidence that they are able to hew their own way by themselves. This was the powerful driving force that propelled our people to independence and prosperity.

Today our people are a nation with a high sense of independence. They do not tolerate anyone who would violate their national independence and dignity. They take great pride in being Korean and in carrying out the revolution in Korea. Dependence on foreign forces -- the idea of relying on others at the expense of national pride -- has no place in our people's noble spiritual world.

With all the people cherishing the spirit of national independence, our nation was able to hew its own way. Thus -- the change that took place in our people's ideological and spiritual arena -- is an incomparably precious success scored in the annals of our nation's independent development. Our people, who once were most wretched, have become an independent nation so powerful and dignified that no one can now make light of it. This great achievement of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has devoted himself to bringing about a fundamental change in the status and position of the nation, will be remembered for generations to come.

2. The history of our nation enjoying boundless prosperity on its path is a glorious history which can be created only by the most outstanding leader.

It is not easy to deliver a nation from a crisis and make it prosperous and dignified. This cause required a serious struggle against all schemes that obstruct the nation's independent development and a vast plan designed to do away with centuries-old backwardness and poverty. This cause -- a sacred cause -- can be achieved only by a great leader who unites the nation and leads it to victory.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a man of great ideals, tested leadership and noble virtues -- qualities that are needed to lead the nation to the road of independence. Without the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we cannot think of the fact that difficult and important problems related to the destiny of our nation are being precisely solved.

All the honor and superiority of the Korean nation and a bright future for the nation are linked to the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The respected leader's name is the symbol of our nation's honor and dignity and the greatness of the leader is the fountain of the might of our nation.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the patriot of the century who has devoted his life to the country and the people with ardent patriotism. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: What we are now doing is for our people. There is no work which does not meet the interests of the people. The epithet, patriot of the century, reflects all the people's endless reverence for and trust in the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has spared no arduous effort and devoted his life only to the independent development of the country and the people. Born in a traditionally patriotic family, regarding the hardships suffered by the people as his own and having fostered the warm love for the fatherland, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, braving all difficulties and trials over a long period, has devoted everything to the country and the people. Patriotism cherished by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has developed the sense of complete responsibility for the destiny of his fatherland and people and the farsighted plan for the prosperity and happiness of posterity, generation after generation. The firm principle of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's meditation and activities has stemmed from this noble patriotism.

All works planned and carried out by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song are for the interest, prosperity, dignity and honor of our people. The great leader has helped build communism to meet the situation in Korea and the desire of our people. It has been a great joy for him to see the happiness and prosperity of the people. The respected and beloved leader's warm patriotism has helped our people conserve and love even a single tree and blade of grass in the fatherland, have passion for the revolution in their country and firmly safeguard the dignity and sovereignty of the people. With burning love for the fatherland and with a lofty sense of responsibility for the destiny of the people, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always personally coped with crises for the people since the period of the bloody anti-Japanese struggle and has devoted all his energy to the cause of the country and the people.

The patriotism cherished by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is totally for the masses of the working people -- the majority of the people. This patriotism is closely linked to proletarian internationalism.

Proceeding from this noble patriotism, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has regarded the interests of the masses of the working people as a pivot in formulating even a single line and policy. He has solved all questions in the interests of the class and the people. As a result, all the respected and beloved leader's lines and policies have assumed an (?exciting) nature of meeting the vital demand of all the people.

Because the respected and beloved leader has always encouraged our people to strengthen friendship and solidarity with the world's people and to develop international support and solidarity while loving their country, they have become a dignified people who actively contribute to developing the world revolution.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a great leader who, embracing all the people in his bosom with an endlessly magnanimous heart, has led them to the road of independence. To advance toward the road of independence, the people should firmly unite with a single desire. National unity is the road to independence and prosperity. Division is the road to subjugation and national ruin. The unity of the people is the source of national might. Although a people might be backward and few, they have nothing to fear if they unite. They can become a powerful people to firmly defend independence.

Originally, our people had the capacity for united action because they have lived in a single national territory for a long time, maintaining a homogeneous lineage. However, this does not mean that the unity of the people have been automatically and easily achieved in our country. Within the homogeneous people has existed people who possess different ideas, political views and religious beliefs and the classes and social circles which have different living circumstances. It is by no means easy to help these people, classes and social circles firmly unite with a single desire and aim. In particular, it was not easy to make all the people unite under circumstances in our country which was placed under colonial subjugation in the past and in which different ideas and systems dominate two areas.

The only leader who has accomplished this significant historic cause of our country is the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. To achieve national unity and firmly defend it is a basic principle given priority by him in the struggle for the independence and prosperity of the nation. Even when the nationalists and those leading the communist movement in its incipient stage were engaged in a factional struggle for domination without paying attention to the nation's fate or the revolution, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song ardently struggled to achieve national harmony, ignoring his personal peril. It is his firm and consistent policy for national unity to attach great importance to the concept of the nation, transcending ideology, political views and religious beliefs.

Thanks to such a just policy and positive struggle by the respected and beloved leader, a brilliant example of forming a united national front under the banner of the fatherland liberation was created even in the dark period of the Japanese imperialist rule.

Following liberation, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song made all the people unite with one mind for building a new Korea by inducing the physically strong to help build a new Korea with their physical strength, the wealthy people with their riches and intellectuals with their knowledge. Even now, he says the most important policy for reunification of the fatherland is to achieve a great national front for reunification through national unity. His is, indeed, the bosom of great national unity, which makes the whole nation unite with a common purpose.

The respected and beloved leader always trusts and leads those who are determined to follow the honest road as directed by their national conscience, no matter what political view they may hold or what crimes they may have committed before the nation, and does not hold them to account for their past.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's great confidence in the people and his generosity are the great power which converts even the staunchest anticommunists to work for the fatherland and people. Without the generosity of the respected and beloved leader, we could not conceive of the numerous intellectuals and patriots who came into the bosom of the republic by crossing the death lines in the wake of national liberation or of the unprecedented national transformation from capitalism to socialism.

Thanks to the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who always elucidates the future of the nation and who always regards matters related to the future of the nation as a just cause, our people are now uniting and struggling to achieve the national cause, as they did in the past. Our people, who were mistreated and despised in the past, have created a glorious history of the nation under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader. This history has shown us a precious truth that a nation's dignity, honor, prosperity and strength entirely depend on the greatness and wisdom of the leader. In this very precious truth lie the greatest pride and honor of our people who have advanced along the road of independence.

3. A more brilliant prospect is open for our people who have long traversed the road of independence, sovereignty and prosperity.

Our people's bright future stems from the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who is energetically leading our people along the road of independence. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has made immortal contributions to the development of national history through storms of all sorts ever since he took the road of revolution, is now leading the sacred struggle to achieve greater prosperity for the nation and to defend the nation's independence and sovereignty.

The lines and policies continuously developed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song comprise grand programs to defend the nation's sovereignty, expedite national reunification and guarantee happiness for ages to come. Only when we follow the road led by the leader, upholding the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, can we brilliantly pioneer the future destiny of our nation. The nation's bright future and eternal prosperity lie in upholding the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. This is the firm belief that our nation has deeply cherished since it first upheld the leader and the steel-like will that it has consolidated through practical experiences over a long time.

No nation is more ardent and firm in upholding its leader. Loyalty to the leader is the nucleus of the Korean people's national spirit. It is also the driving force which enables our nation to advance along the road of independence. With the energetic leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our nation is seething with a firm resolve to vigorously advance, upholding the leader forever. This lofty trait of our people is highly manifested in struggling, deeply cherishing a high national pride -- implementing the revolution with the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as their leader.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Such a national price is very precious in the people's liberation struggle. A nation without national pride and confidence will be ruined; a nation with them is invincible. National pride and confidence are important characteristics of the independent nation.

National pride and confidence are cemented only by upholding a great leader. A leader [suryong] is the nation's supreme representative and the only leader [yongdoja] who leads the nation, taking responsibility for the nation's destiny. Therefore, nothing makes the people enjoy greater national pride and confidence than upholding a great leader. The respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song is the great leader who has created the chuche idea, opened a new era of independence and registered immortal achievements before the fatherland and history.

By holding the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song in high esteem, our people have made their appearance in the international arena, competing with small and big countries, and our nation is enjoying high praise from the world's people as the chuche fatherland and a model country of socialism.

Without the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we cannot talk about the fact our nation has nurtured a heroic people fearing no enemies and that the international prestige of the republic is continuously growing and about our nation's bright future. The great leader is the genuine sun of Korea and our nation's glory. No people are more proud and happier than ours, who were born in and are implementing the revolution in the chuche Korea led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who is endlessly revered and trusted by the world's people. For this reason, our people wholeheartedly admire and ardently respect the respected and beloved leader. Furthermore, this noble sentiment is growing more with each passing day.

Our nation's unanimous will is to brilliantly implement the leader's plans, firmly uniting around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has been unaimously upheld by the entire nation since the first days when he embarked on the road of the revolution due to his qualification as an outstanding leader and his lofty traits, is the center of national unity.

It is our proud tradition to have pioneered the nation's destiny, firmly united around the leader as ever. This national rank has been joined not only by communists, but by those who love the country and are concerned over the nation's future, irrespective of their political view, religion, knowledge and wealth. Since our nation firmly united under the unitary leadership, it was able to liberate the fatherland by itself and has safeguarded the nation's dignity and sovereignty.

Only when all Korean compatriots in the North, South and abroad unite in a front for national reunification, transcending ideology, system, faction and political view, can they defend the national sovereignty generation after generation without repeating the miserable history of a homeless race.

The grand program unfolded by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song reflects the unanimous aspiration and desire of the entire nation and illuminates the road along which the nation will advance. By upholding all lines and policies of the great leader, the Korean people will traverse the road of independence and prosper forever.

Thoroughly embodying the proposal for national reunification set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is an urgent task assigned to our people for our nation's independence and future destiny. In addition to the 36-year colonial rule by the Japanese imperialists, the South Korean people have been compelled to swallow the colonial slavery of the U.S. imperialists for 37 years. No Korean can tolerate this miserable situation. Saying that national reunification is the greatest gift to our nation, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has worked for its realization. The proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], which was set forth by the great leader at the Sixth KWP Congress, is the most just, reasonable and realistic program for national salvation and for ending the tragedy of national division. We should reunify the fatherland by founding the DCRK, achieving collaboration between the North and South. Thus, we will appear in the international arena with dignity and authority as an reunified independent country and erect a people's paradise where the entire nation can enjoy happiness.

We should reunify the fatherland without fail in this generation and establish national sovereignty throughout the country by continuously effecting upsurges in socialist construction and firmly consolidating the chuche revolutionary force. Then, we should develop our nation into an independent one which could never be toyed with by anyone.

Our nation, which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has led to prosperity, is greeting a more rewarding era under the wise leadership of the KWP. With a tested leadership and positive activities, our party is leading the struggle to materialize all plans of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song along the road of victory. Thanks to the correct leadership of the invincible KWP, the future of our revolution and nation is more promising. This gives our people greater ambition for and faith in the nation's future. As long as the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is in the van of our nation led by our party, our nation will advance along the road of independence under any adverse circumstances and endlessly prosper.

KCNA PRAISES LEADERSHIP OF PARTY CENTER

SK180012 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1508 GMT 17 Mar 82

["Fervor of Creation and Innovation Rush High Under Party's Guidance" -- KCNA headline]

[Text] Pyongyang, March 17 (KCNA) -- A leaping advance previously unknown is being made and everything created on the highest level in all domains of the revolution and construction in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, and there spreads an endless expanse of dazzling realities in which the worth of struggle and ecstasy of life are blooming into the optimism of the age.

It owes this to the party which is bringing into blossom the cause of chuche started by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. It was the glorious party centre which unfolded the blueprints for completely changing the appearance of the capital of revolution, including those for the construction of the Changgwang Street in the centre of the city and the Munsu Street in east Pyongyang.

The party centre, which unfurls one great and original plan after another and leads the whole party and the entire people to their practice, is possessed of brilliant intelligence and mighty leadership whereby it fulfills hundreds of kinds of important and urgent tasks and looks far ahead to the future, a decade and a century henceforth while planning and designing and undertaking.

Under this leadership, so proud realities are constantly spread on this land in which the hot wind of the speed campaign is blowing a gale in economic construction and all fields of the party work, cultural construction and science and technology are coming into full blossom all at once along the road of unheard-of changes and creation, leap and development. But the characteristics of our realities are not confined to the unprecendented speed of advance.

Before liberation, a rather big department store called "Pyongyang Hwasin" was built in Pyongyang over a period of seven years and nine months. In mid-November 1980, builders of the capital blew up this building in accordance with a plan of the party. In a little more than one year since then there has risen up in its place a modern new department store 25 times the old one in size. This fact alone explains the deep meaning of what is called creation today.

This mettle of the Workers Party age asserted itself in the building of a recreation ground, too. A few years ago, functionaries received from the party centre a vast blueprint together with a task to build a fun fair in Mt. Taesong in Pyongyang. It was a bold and ambitious plan for building a fun fair of a whole set of facilities, not one or two kinds of them, for our children and working people, and for laying a track of 1,500 metres for a jet coaster, not minding that the world's longest was no more than 1,350 metres.

Revolutionary optimism prevails and joy and emotion of life are felt everywhere in Korea which is pulsating with struggle and feats, tremendous changes and miracles. On August 31 last year, there was an evening gathering of Pyongyang working people celebrating the successful conclusion of the symposium of non-aligned and other developing countries on increasing food and agricultural production.

The head of a foreign delegation said in exhilaration after dancing, mixed up with our working people, till the end of the gathering: "Your songs and dances have peculiar charm and mysterious strength. Singing those songs and dancing those dances, one feels the passion of youth course through his whole body overflowing with the volition of life, his heart beating with the thought of human dignity. No force on earth can bar the way of the Korean people who are working and advancing with such passion and spirit."

All this is the balmy spring season of revolution greeted and enjoyed by our people. It is the reality of Korea that, upholding the great party, she is dashing forward like the wind, developing a proud history of changes of the century, the passion of creation and innovation overflowing the whole land, and she is pulsating with happiness, overflowing with emotion of life and beating with the spirit and optimism of youth.

CHUNGANG ILBO SAYS U.S.-JAPAN RICE PACT 'INSULT'

SK190833 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 18 Mar 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Lesson of the Alleged Rice Scandal"]

[Excerpts] The alleged rice import scandal was a model case in which the United States and Japan -- which are the richest countries in the world and, what is more, are our allies -- made the Korean rice market a target of their commercial bargains. Therefore, it gives us a great lesson to consider in our future negotiations with the United States and Japan on rice imports.

The United States and Japan concluded an agreement on grain exports in April 1980. According to this agreement, which will remain in force till 1983, Japan is allowed to export only 400,000 tons of rice produced in Japan to foreign countries, and to export only 40,000 tons of that to Korea annually. At the same time, Japan needs approval from the United States if it wants to export more.

Because of this preposterous agreement concluded between the two countries, in November 1980, when our country needed to import 2 million tons of rice from foreign countries, our government inevitably had to negotiate with the U.S. Government to purchase rice from Japan. At the same time, in an effort to get U.S. approval, our government had to import large amounts of U.S. Gulf Coast rice, which does not suit our tastes.

The U.S.-Japan grain agreement was concluded with the aim of exploiting the Korean rice market. Of course, the conclusion of the agreement was based on paragraph 2, article 16 of the regulations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade [GATT], which prohibits acts of dumping in international trade activities in order to guarantee orderly international trade. Giving in to the pressure of the powerful U.S. rice lobbysts, the U.S. Government concluded the U.S.-Japan grain agreement, which amounts to an insult to the Korean people, running counter to spirit of GATT and to the interests of Korea.

Rice produced in Japan suits our tastes. We can purchase the Japanese rice on credit on a long-term and low-interest basis, with repayment in 10 years with a 5-year grace period. The shipping expenses are cheaper and the transportation time shorter.

When it approved Japan's exports of 1 million tons of rice to Korea in 1980, the U.S. Agriculture Department, which always stands at the side of U.S. farmers and rice dealers, not only forcibly sold Gulf Coast rice and California rice to Korea at a high price but also attached a condition that the shipment of the 1 million tons of Japanese rice to Korea should be completed by August 1981. The Japanese rice shipping capability was only 100,000 tons a month. Because of this Japanese shipping capacity, despite the U.S. approval for the import of 1 million tons of rice from Japan, our government purchased only 670,000 tons of rice from Japan and had to purchase the remaining 330,000 tons from the United States.

We wonder what our diplomatic authorities and Agriculture Ministry did when such an unreasonable agreement was concluded. If our government had exposed the unreasonable aim of the U.S.-Japan agreement to the GATT and FAO when it was concluded and had staged a strong drive to block the agreement, today's controversy on rice would not have occurred and we could have imported rice under favorable conditions.

The government should not react nervously to the arrogance of rice dealers any longer and instead should make efforts to have the U.S.-Japan grain agreement, the source of today's controversy, abolished. The U.S.-Japan grain agreement, which is only in the interests of U.S. rice dealers, runs counter to the national interests of the United States and is not conducive to the security of northeast Asia. Our government should stress this point to the Washington authorities and to the U.S. press. Even though our security depends largely on the United States, we cannot accept this quasi-agreement which reminds us of the division of territory in the era of imperialism.

At a recent U.S. House Agricultural Subcommittee hearing on rice, Albrecht, deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, exposed the Connell Company's schemes to monopolize exports of rice to Korea. At the same time, the Agricultural Subcommittee concluded that the allegation of bribery is groundless. From now on, we should switch the debate on the alleged rice scandal to efforts for abolishing the U.S.-Japan grain agreement.

FIRMS SETTLE FOR AVERAGE 9.7-PERCENT WAGE HIKE

SK230154 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 23 Mar 82 p 8

[Text] Wage hikes for employees of the majority of workshops in the nation have been settled at an average of 9.7 percent, the lowest in the last 10 years, through government-pushed labor-management consultations, it was learned yesterday. According to the Labor Ministry, 90.1 percent or 3,760 of the total 4,176 enterprises with 100 or more employees have worked out new wage levels for this year so far under the ministry's strong guidance.

The average hike this year was lower by 7.6 percentage points than 17.3 percent last year, officials said. The annual wage hike during the 10 years since 1971 was 26.0 percent on average and the lowest during the period was 11.5 percent in 1973, they said.

They attributed the comparatively low wage hike this year to the "self-restraint" of both laborers and the management who had worked out the new wage levels in consideration of the inflation rate, labor productivity and the financial capability of each firm. They further said that the laborers had shown "readiness to share troubles with employers to tide over the current economic difficulties by accepting the low wage hike rate."

The ministry has urged enterprises since last year-end to work out new wage levels through autonomous labor-management consultations and to set the hike rate at a "one-digit figure." Officials said that the ministry would make all-out efforts to provide laborers with the maximum actual wages in spite of the slight increase in nominal wages. As part of such efforts, the ministry will encourage employers to provide welfare measures including the operation of discount stores at workshops, they said. The highest salary increase among local firms was registered at 30 percent by the Shinil Integrated Services Co. with 492 employees, according to the ministry.

HUN SEN DISCUSSES WHITE BOOK ON THAI HOSTILITIES

BK200800 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 19 Mar 82

[Text] At 1500 on 19 March a press conference to introduce a white book on Thailand's hostile policy against the PRK was held at Vat Phnum Hotel in the presence of Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs. Attending were representatives of the embassies of friendly socialist countries accredited to the PRK and many local and foreign reporters. Among the foreign correspondents were those representing VNA, TASS, U.S., Japanese and British newspapers, and a number of international organizations.

During the press conference, Comrade Hun Sen informed local and foreign opinion about the hostilities perpetrated by Thailand against the PRK. He said in full as follows:

[Begin recording] The recent period is full of evidence of continuing Thai hostilities and provocations against the PRK. [Words indistinct] to Southeast Asia as well. In this connection, the Foreign Ministry of the PRK deems it necessary to shed greater light on the hostile policy of Thailand vis-a-vis the PRK as described in the white book already distributed to all of you and contained in the statement attached to it.

On this occasion, I would like to add some comments to the statement about Thailand's activities against the PRK [words indistinct]. I will not repeat what has already been said in the white book.

Primarily, let me stress that for more than 3 years Thailand has openly played an important role in realizing China's maneuvers against the PRK. It can be understood that without Thai connivance and without Thai territory as refuge for the Pol Pot gang, it would have been impossible for Pol Pot to remain alive today. However, since our liberation on 7 January, Thailand has allowed its territory to be used by the reactionary Pol Pot gang as a hiding place and a base to concentrate and rebuild its forces. Thai territory has also become a major transportation route through which arms have been taken from Beijing to the Pol Pot gang operating along the Kampuchean-Thai border. Thai territory has also become an area for the mustering of all reactionary Khmer groups in exile from the country.

Following the failure of the reactionary Khmer groups in Pyongyang and Singapore, Thailand has become a focal point, where all these reactionary Khmer groups are concentrating and attempting to create a so-called united front and a loose coalition government.

The administration of Prem Tinsulanon repeatedly claims that Thailand remains neutral regarding the conflict in Kampuchea and that Thailand does not interfere in the internal affairs of this country. However, what has it really done?

If it is really neutral regarding the conflict in Kampuchea, what is the reasen behind Thailand's continued maintenance of the reactionary Khmer groups on Thai territory in order to oppose the PRK? If Thailand really does not interfere in Kampuchea's internal affairs, why does Thailand strenuously try to rally reactionary Khmer groups [words indistinct]?

In the recent past, following repeated failures, Thailand threatened the reactionary Khmer groups [words indistinct] but also to connive with China's policy which Thailand has been following for the past 3 years. In the past as at present, Thailand has made great efforts to [words indistinct] to sabotage the PRK. This white book also tells how we [words indistinct] a Sereika government set up by Prime Minister Hem Kroesna in Phnom Penh was rounded up and sent to the tribunal [words indistinct]. Now, they are continuing [words indistinct] in order to undermine security in our country.

Besides the activities [words indistinct] to subvert and undermine the PRK, the second part of the white book also deals with direct armed Thai activities against the PRK in support of the reactionary Khmer forces. Bitter incidents have frequently taken place along the Kampuchean-Thai border. [Words indistinct] fired artillery barrages into my country, sent spy planes to violate the airspace of my country and even dispatched infantry troops to encroach upon the territory of my country.

At a time when [words indistinct] the United States accused the Soviet Union and Vietnam of using chemical weapons in Kampuchea [words indistinct] and when the Reagan administration announced its decision to produce neutron and chemical weapons, Thailand [words indistinct].

We have always sought to settle conflicts and to ensure peace and stability along the Kampuchean-Thai border. Not only has Thailand refused to listen to us and to talk with us but it has continued to provoke hostilities against our country. Thailand is playing with fire. [Words indistinct] which might cause a major armed clash along the Kampuchean-Thai border. This is because, while we seek to solve the problem through political means, we certainly will not allow anyone to interfere in or commit aggression against our country.

The third part of the white book deals with Thailand's continuing use of humanitarian aid and Kampuchean refugees to oppose the Kampuchean people.

[Passage indistinct] for the Kampuchean refugees who [words indistinct] are receiving the care and attention of the PRK. There are three main causes that have brought Kampuchean refugees to Thai territory. First, it was the war of aggression waged by U.S. imperialism against Kampuchea. This U.S. imperialist war of aggression in Kampuchea caused an influx of refugees into Thailand. After the U.S. imperialists were defeated, some of their lackeys also brought a number of Kampuchean people out of the country. Second, it was caused by the genocidal policy of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary gang. When the Pol Pot gang was in power in Kampuchea, many Kampucheans took refuge in Thailand. After the Pol Pot gang was defeated, it also forcibly dragged a large number of people into Thailand. Third, it was because [words indistinct] on Thai territory and distribute humanitarian aid at the Thai border as a bait to lure the Kampuchean people into fleeing their country when we were experiencing food shortages. It is normal that the fish would swallow the bait. If this humanitarian aid was distributed in Kampuchea, no one would have gone to the border to collect humanitarian aid. For this reason, we regard the considerable aid distribution on the Thai border as one of the causes which prompted many people to flee their homeland when we suffered famine in 1979 and 1980. [Passage indistinct] when the refugees were encouraged to go to Thailand, they had an excuse to provide the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary Khmer groups with shelter, food and arms. They also used these refugees as a means to obtain international aid for the Pol Pot remnants on humanitarian grounds.

In this white book, we also publish testimonies by a number of journalists and international organization officials who talked about international aid falling into the hands of Pol Pot. If all Kampuchean refugees returned home, Thailand would be deprived of a pretext on which to appeal for international aid to feed the reactionary Khmer groups. For this reason, our white book notes that the question of refugees is deadlocked. We have appealed to the Thai side to agree to the idea of making contacts with each other, of holding negotiations -- direct or indirect or through any international organization -- to solve the problem of Kampuchean refugees. But the Thai side has consistently refused to enter into consultations.

Thailand has persistently linked the question of refugees to a political position according to which Thailand declares nonrecognition for the PRK. On the contrary, Thailand has expressed a desire to create a kind of a [word indistinct] on Kampuchean territory. Thus it seems that Kampucheans became refugees in their own country, something similar to the Palestinians who are refugees in their own homeland. This is a maneuver to create [words indistinct] to feed the Pol Pot gang and other reactionary Khmer groups who oppose the PRK.

There is no need whatsoever for people to continue to be refugees once they have returned to Kampuchea. It would be more practical for them to go back to their hometowns. Thailand must therefore bear full responsibility for this deadlock.

Let me tell you, ladies, gentlemen and friends, the PRK has always wished to live peacefully with its neighbors, including Thailand. We have already estabished a border of peace and friendship with Vietnam and Laos. We also want to create a border of peace and friendship with Thailand. We hold that Thailand's practice of following Beijing's policy in opposing Kampuchea and the rest of Indochina means very clearly that Thailand is playing with fire.

It is necessary that we maintain patience, restraint and firmness. Nevertheless, we must make it absolutely clear that we will not permit anyone to harm our independence and sovereignty. We are ready to normalize relations with Thailand but we are also ready to cope with any Thai incursion into Kampuchea. [end recording]

When asked by a U.S. reporter about the U.S. slander that the Soviet Union and Vietnam have used toxic chemicals in Kampuchea, the comrade emphasized:

[Begin recording] The U.S. propaganda campaign alleging that the Soviet Union and Vietnam have used toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Laos and Afghanistan was kicked off by U.S. Secretary of State Haig in a statement he made in West Germany. This wanton calumny distorts realities in Kampuchea. Every Kampuchean citizen in the PRK can clarify this question.

In reality, it is the U.S. imperialists who are the criminals using toxic chemical weapons in Indochina, including Kampuchea. [Words indistinct] of chemicals used by the United States in Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea have created untold consequences to us until now. U.S. Secretary of State Haig was himself one of the U.S. generals who conducted the war of aggression in Indochina and Vietnam. He used to commit the crime of dumping chemicals in Indochina. Now, he is slinging mud at the Soviet Union and Vietnam.

We often say that when a thief starts crying "stop thief," he can make himself heard louder than a policeman and the victim put together. For what purpose has the United States launched a campaign accusing the Soviet Union and Vietnam of using chemical weapons in Indochina?

Let me tell you of my personal views on this question. First, the United States wanted an advantage over the Soviet Union at the recent Geneva talks for [words indistinct] Reagan ordered the production of some types of arms which were banned by Carter. The United States has to justify the tension it thereby created in the world. Thus, in order to have an upper hand over the Soviet Union in the talks, the United States [words indistinct]. Second, as part of their efforts to preserve the UN seat for the Pol Pot gang, they saw a need to conjure up a so-called Kampuchean question in order to hold the so-called international conference on Kampuchea and realize the resolutions of the UN General Assembly on Kampuchea. Therefore, willingly or not, the United States has to join with China, Thailand and a number of other reactionary countries in making propaganda [words indistinct] and also to erase the criminal records of the U.S. actions in Indochina before 1975.

Another reason is that while accusing the Soviet Union of using chemical weapons, the United States has now decided to produce chemical weapons itself. It accuses other people in order to cover up its own actions. This trick has been used before by the United States. It is being used again now.

A delegation appointed by the United States to investigate the use of chemical weapons still has not come up with any conclusive findings. This is an initial setback for its campaign of slander against the Soviet Union. [end recording]

This press conference ended at 1600 in a most cordial and joyous atmosphere.

FOREIGN MINISTRY WHITE BOOK ON THAI POLICIES

Part One

BK220500 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0425 GMT 20 Mar 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 20 Mar (SPK) -- On 19 March the PRK Foreign Ministry issued a white book on the intensification of hostile acts by the Thai authorities against the PRK. We now reprint the first part of this white book which denounces Thailand's political activities:

After toppling the genocidal regime of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan -- agents of the Beijing expansionists in their schemes against the Kampuchean revolution and the three Indochinese countries -- the Kampuchean people have become the masters of their own destiny. The people's power, born out of the 1 May 1981 general elections, is effectively managing the internal and external affairs of the country. The Government of the PRK is, therefore, the sole authentic and legal representative of its people.

Under the leadership of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party and government, the country is rapidly being reborn. Important achievements have been made in all fields -- economic, political, cultural, social, military. A peaceful life with independence and freedom has been restored to the Kampuchean people.

The PRK pursues a foreign policy of peace, friendship and nonalignment; of peaceful coexistence with all countries regardless of their political and social systems on the basis of mutual respect for independence and territorial integrity, noninterference in internal affairs, equality and reciprocal benefit; and of establishing friendly, cooperative and good-neighbor relations with the Southeast Asian countries thereby contributing to peace, stability and prosperity in the region and to progress in the world.

Regarding Thailand, letting bygones be bygones and always displaying good will, the PRK wants to foster friendly and good-neighbor relations with that country on the basis of mutual respect for independence and sovereignty. The PRK also seeks in the immediate future to begin a dialogue in order to put an end to the hostile acts which are equally nefarious to both sides.

Turning up their noses at the reality of the situation in Kampuchea, which is improving with every passing day, the Chinese expansionists, in collusion with U.S. imperialism and the leading circles of some ASEAN countries, are trying to restore the genocidal Pol Pot regime, sabotage the rebirth of the Kampuchean people and overturn peace and security in Southeast Asia. They are plotting to use various reactionary Khmer elements to reestablish the Pol Pot regime in Kampuchea while camouflaging Pol Pot.

It is regrettable that the Thai authorities turn their backs to this evidence. They have not ceased to declare: "Thailand remains neutral in the Kampuchean problem" and "we hold that Kampuchea's internal affairs must be settled by the Kampucheans themselves without foreign interference." But, in their deeds, they are the first to play the game of the Chinese expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialism to injure Kampuchea.

This white book brings to light the hostile acts of the Thai authorities against the PRK.

Thailand openly plays the leading role in the realization of the Chinese schemes by intensifying the political activities hostile to the PRK:

The memorandum "The Tense Situation at the Kampuchean-Thai Border" issued by the PRK Foreign Ministry on 31 July 1980 stressed the following points:

1. Immediately following the Kampuchean people's victory of 7 January 1979, Thailand took part in the implementation of the plan by the Chinese expansionists to reassemble and support the fragments of the Pol Pot troops in order to launch them against the new revolutionary power.

2. Thailand has not ceased to allow arms given by China to the fragments of Pol Pot's troops to be transported across its territory.

3. Along the Kampuchean-Thai border and in Thai territory there are sanctuaries used by all stripes of reactionary Khmer exiles and serving as living centers, logistics bases and springboards for launching attacks against the PRK.

4. Thailand has used international aid goods destined for the Kampuchean people as an instrument against the PRK.

5. Thailand used Kampuchean refugees as an instrument in the service of the Kampuchean reactionaries against the PRK.

6. Armed Thai forces directly violate Kampuchean territory and provide support for the Kampuchean reactionaries in their attacks against the PRK.

Far from ceasing the acts denounced in the 1980 memorandum, the Thai authorities since then conducted even more dangerous, more overt activities, thereby rudely interfering in the internal affairs of the PKR, an independent and sovereign country, in flagrant violation of international rights and against the very interests of the Thai people.

A. Thailand, in collusion with the Chinese expansionists, encourages the establishment of a so-called united front among the reactionary Khmers.

Following repeated failures, the Chinese expansionists in cahoots with U.S. imperialism and reactionary circles in the ASEAN countries are doing their utmost to restore the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime by using reactionary Kampucheans of all stripes to improve the "Democratic Kampuchea" facade and implement Pol Pot's policy without Pol Pot in order to divert public opinion.

"Most certainly Thailand is aware that another force must be found to replace Pol Pot if the ASEAN wants to have a larger support against the occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnam," (BBC, 27 October 1980).

What is this force?

Sitthi Sawetsila, Thai minister of foreign affairs, has spoken straight to the point: "We hope that Son Sann and the other factions can join together under the umbrella of Democratic Kampuchea. It would be a great asset to us." And: "On behalf of the ASEAN countries, I fully approve of the coalition government..." (Sitthi Sawetsila's statement during his visit to France in April 1981).

The Bangkok authorities have on many occasions declared that "they do not take part in the choice of leaders for Kampuchea."

But how about the facts?

According to a member of Sihanouk's family who works in an international organization in Bangkok, a few months after the fall of the Pol Pot regime, "Thailand agreed that Son Sann, then leader of an organization of Kampuchean exiles in France, might come secretly to Thailand, accompanied by a Lon Nol general, with the mission of strengthening fragments of the Pol Pot army to be used as a military basis for Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front. A government-in-exile will be founded when circumstances permit...."

On 9 October 1979, with Thailand's full support, Son Sann founded the armed forces for his front. Shortly after that, he stated to the press that he would soon be able to set up a provisional government in exile. (AFP, 25 October 1981) One after another, the other ASEAN countries have declared that they "consider Son Sann as the most suitable man to lead a coalition government in Kampuchea." (FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW, 8 May 1981) And the Philippine minister of foreign affairs stated in Manila on 8 January 1981 on behalf of the Standing Committee of ASEAN: "ASEAN puts its choice on Son Sann rather than Sihanouk...." (AFP, 9 January 1981)

If the Chinese schemes to revive the corpse of "Democratic Kampuchea" have failed, the support of ASEAN, with Thailand at the head, for Son Sann and the other Kampuchean reactionaries will also fail to reverse the situation in Kampuchea. Thus Thailand and the other ASEAN countries had to seek, in China's wake, to rally the Kampuchean reactionaries in a "united front" with the Khmer Rouge at the core to be used by Beijing and Bangkok to spearhead their attacks against the PRK.

Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon visited Beijing on 27 October 1980. "Thailand," he told his hosts, "wants to form a coalition government in Kampuchea embracing the groups which are fighting for power." According to the KYODO news agency, "Prem Tinsulanon persuaded the Chinese leaders to accept the creation of a third force in Kampuchea including Sihanouk." (KYODO, 20 October 1980) On his part, the Thai minister of foreign affairs confided to the Beijing authorities that he "hoped they supported Thailand's efforts to create a change in the leadership of Democratic Kampuchea," and followed the pressures on the Kampuchean reactionaries and frenzied diplomatic activities in Beijing, Bangkok and Singapore with the visits by Prem, Lee Kuan Yew, Zhao Ziyang....

On 31 January 1981, the Chinese and Thai prime ministers met in Bangkok, to "have a long debate on the strategy for the convening of an international conference on Kampuchea and discuss in detail the forms of a new leadership under the banner of 'Democratic Kampuchea' already recognized by the United Nations." (NATION REVIEW, 1 February 1981)

Within the framework of these schemes, Thailand's position regarding Sihanouk underwent a complete volte-face. Sitthi declared everywhere: "Thailand authorizes Sihanouk to go to Kampuchea through Thailand, if he asks to do so." (KYODO, 17 February 1981); "Thailand appreciates Sihanouk's efforts to create a united front..." (Radio Australia, 10 August 1981); "If Sihanouk wants to come to Bangkok to meet Kampuchean Refugees, the Thai Government will grant its approval...." (KYODO, 8 June 1981)

On 6 March 1981, a few days before the Sihanouk-Khieu Samphan meeting in Pyongyang on 10 March 1981, Chinese Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs Han Nianlong secretly rushed to Bangkok to take measures in concert with the Thai authorities to force the Kampuchean reactionaries to meet each other. Both Thailand and China nurtured the hope of seeing a united front of the counterrevolutionary Kampuchean forces come into being.

B. Bangkok has become the rallying point of the Kampuchean reactionaries who oppose the PRK.

Following the failure of the 10 March 1981 meeting in Pyongyang to form a "united front," in concert with China, "Thailand and the other ASEAN countries put pressure on the Kampuchean groups hostile to the Heng Samrin regime so that they might overcome their differences and set up a united front." (BBC, 5 September 1981) "Thailand called on Son Sann not to create obstructions but rather to ally himself with the Pol Pot group," and it "hinted that it would withdraw its support for the promotion of Son Sann as head of the united front government if he did not give up his inflexible conditions..." (Washington POST and New York TIMES, 28 August 1981). They went as far as to say: "If Thailand and ASEAN withdraw their support from him, the United States will do the same." (Bangkok POST, 26 August 1981)
